The Conference recommended the establishment of several new missions, one at Wesson being most needed; and in order to make this enlargement a success, it was voted to sustain a fifty per cent. increase in the home mission assessment for next year.

At eleven o'clock, on Friday, Pres. J. W. Chambers, of Whitworth College, preached a splendid sermon from Judges xiii, 12. Bro. Chambers was at his best; in fact, he outdid himself. No one could have treated the subject of Christian education more forcefully or interestingly. The large audience present was captivated.

It was a matter of regret that neither Dr. Murrah nor Bro. I. W. Cooper were present to represent Millsaps College. In their absence this scribe spoke a word or two in behalf of our college at Jackson. The following resolutions, signed by J. W. Chambers and H. R. Caldwell, were unanimously passed:

Resolved, That the Brookhaven District Conference hears with pleasure of the continued prosperity of Millsaps College. With an enlarged faculty and increased apparatus, Millsaps offers to our young men every facility for a first-class college education.

Resolved, That we encourage our people, both by precept and example, to send their boys to Millsaps.

No sermon of the Conference produced a profounder impression than the one on "Sabbath Observance," preached by Rev. M. L. Burton. He proved most clearly that Sunday trains would stop running if Christian people would only stop riding on them. They are run, he says, because it pays, and for no other reason. Railroad men and others who work on the Sabbath do so against their will. The labor unions of the country were quoted as being a unit for Sabbath observance. At the conclusion of the sermon the entire audience rose in response to a proposition to let Sunday trains severely alone, and to leave nodore on the Sabbath day all unnecessary work.

The District Parsonage Building Committee having presented its report, the Conference passed a resolution of thanks to Bros. M. L. Burton and J. F. Session for their diligent performance of the task assigned them. Through their untiring efforts our district now boasts a parsonage second to none in the State.

Bros. T. L. Mellen and Ira B. Robertson offered the following resolutions, which were duly passed:

Resolved, That we commend to our people our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, edited by Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., an honored member of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

Resolved, That we commend to all our preachers and official members the Methodist Review of Missions, edited by W. R. Lambuth, D. D., which is replete with the latest and most inspiring information from all the mission fields of the world.

The District Conference was more largely attended than usual, although the first day it looked as if the attendance was going to be small. All the pastors were present except one. Under Bro. Norsworthy's guiding hand business moved along briskly, yet pleasantly. Our presiding elder took occasion a few times to say some very plain things, but we think they were taken in good spirit by all.

Adams Church, the seat of the Conference, is situated in a beautiful grove nine miles northwest of Summit, Miss. It is near the site of the old Adams Camp Ground—an historic spot. A more hospitable people can not be found anywhere than those of this community. If any delegate did not feel at home before, his uneasiness was at once dispelled when he heard the charming address of welcome by young Bro. Enoch Carruth. It was the good fortune of the writer to be assigned to the home of Dr. Henry Flowers and his excellent wife. Some of the people of Adams Church complained that there were not enough delegates to go round, and said they would want an Annual Conference next time. Bro. J. W. Tinnin, the preacher in charge of the Adams circuit, is greatly beloved by his people, and seems to be doing a fine work. A protracted meeting is now in progress at Adams, Rev. J. V. Penn being the leader.

The work of the Conference was concluded Saturday morning at ten o'clock. Shortly before adjournment Rev. P. T. Pearson, a visiting brother, spoke some encouraging words on the subject of prohibition. At eleven o'clock Bro. T. L. Mellen preached a magnificent sermon on missions. We regret that we missed hearing it.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Harvey Thompson, J. E. Carruth, M. M. Black, H. G. Godbold. Alternates: B. Garrett, J. S. Beesley.

Wesson was chosen as the place for holding the next District Conference.

Brandon District Conference.

The Brandon District Conference has just closed one of the most interesting and successful sessions it has ever held. On Friday morning, July 6, the Conference convened in the large and commodious new Methodist Church at Montrose, Jasper county, with Rev. C. McDonald, P. E., in the chair, and all the pastors in the district present except three, and a goodly number of the lay delegates. G. B. Harper was elected secretary, and J. S. Melvin assistant.

Among the many visitors present were Rev. W. B. Murrah, D. D., president of Millsaps College; Rev. T. B. Holloman, president of East Mississippi Female College; Rev. Jno. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth Female College, and Rev. W. D. Dominick, Conference colporter. These brethren, by their presence, preaching and speeches, added to the pleasure and profit of the occasion.

There was preaching every day at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. This was of a high order and deeply spiritual. Good results are already manifest from the meeting, and we think there is more to follow.

Committees were appointed to consider the questions which the Discipline directs the District Conference to look into. These all made appropriate reports, some of which elicited wholesome discussion.

With few exceptions, finances were reported far behind. The great stringency of the times is felt in all of the collections.

The preachers' reports show a good degree of spiritual life throughout the entire district, and hopes are entertained that still greater results will be attained before the close of the Conference year. All the pastors are hopeful, and working hard for the coming of the kingdom of Christ.

The preaching was, indeed, "the power of God unto salvation." Men, women and children were moved to seek God, and great good was accomplished.

The Sunday-school interest throughout the district is increasing, and those that are organized and are at work are doing well. We have many efficient men and women engaged in this good work. We have fifty-eight Sabbath-schools in operation in the district. There are twenty pastoral charges which constitute the district, and from the report of the presiding elder the very gratifying fact was elicited that we have nineteen parsonages in the district.

The Conference was wise and conservative in action and deeply spiritual in worship.

Sunday morning, at 8:30 o'clock, we had a love-feast, presided over by Rev. R. H. Barr, and many testified to the goodness of God. "It was good to be there."

At 4 o'clock P. M. Rev. J. M. Morse addressed the children in a practical and sensible speech, which was listened to by all present, and we think much good will result therefrom.

Bro. McDonald presided with ease and urbanity, and the session was harmonious and profitable in a marked degree. The whole proceedings of the Conference were very interesting and instructing, and the attendance, not only on the preaching services, but on the business sessions of the Conference, was large and appreciative.

The following delegates were elected to the next Annual Conference, to be held in Meridian, to wit: W. M. Thornton, G. M. Hull, S. S. Cope and G. B. Harper. Alternate, J. S. Melvin.

The next session of the Conference will be held at Steen's Creek, Rankin county.

The good people of Montrose and vicinity, who are noted far and wide for their generous hospitality, threw wide their doors and hearts, and made everyone feel at home and enjoy himself. Appropriate resolutions of thanks were voted them by the Conference, and we pray that God's richest blessings may abide with them. The people of this community are to be commended for their liberality, enterprise and zeal for recent improvements in the way of building and completing a large new church, and erecting a beautiful and roomy new parsonage, which, when finished, will be a most desirable home for their preacher.

Rev. R. Bradley is the pastor of these good people, and is very much beloved by them, and is doing grand work for God and the church.

The Brandon District High School is located here, presided over by Prof. McLaurin and an able corps of worthy assistants, and is doing a noble work for the cause of education and Christianity, and richly deserves a liberal patronage. It has recently closed a very successful session, and prospects are bright for its future. The Conference voted the school substantial aid to furnish and paint the building and procure additional furniture and apparatus.

APPRECIATION.

BY ROBERT WHITAKER.

They strewed flowers so thick above his grave
There was not room for more;
Unstinted were the words of praise they gave,
And many wept him sore.

Yet he had lived among them many years,
Nor had he ever known
The oft-desired sympathy of tears,
Or the inspiring tone.

They had been very quick to note the flaws
That marred his daily life;
Alas! they seldom sought to know the cause,
Or aid him in his strife.

What did it matter that he nightly grieved
O'er faults that yet were strong?
Or that against great odds he still believed
In right, instead of wrong?

What though he hungered for some word of praise?
And longed for loving smiles?
Unhelped, they let him climb life's steepest ways,
And grope through weary miles.

But when his ears were deaf, and blind his eyes,
Then did they speak him fair;
Did all their wakened kindness could devise,
And felt love's tribute there.

O friends, if in your hearts there is to day
Some little love for me,
Wait not to speak it o'er my outlined clay,
When I shall heedless be.

Give me while living of the love I crave,
And if ye must condemn,
Speak your harsh censures o'er my open grave
When I am dead to them.

I shall not need your praises then; but now
Even a tender touch,
Although I may not know just why or how,
Hath power to help so much.

Bury me, if you will, in poor estate,
I shall not count it wrong;
But give me love in life, nor let me wait
In loneliness so long.

The True Purpose of Higher Christian Education.

THE PRESENT OPPORTUNITY OF THE METHODISTS OF MISSISSIPPI.

The thought of the new century—the almost immediate future—seems to carry the mind forward to the realization of what is before us. We may think of ourselves as passing within the boundary of the coming era, and may find in its teaching and its hopes somewhat, at least, that may pertain to ourselves. The influence thus coming to us should be good. Let me here offer two or three suggestions.

The first is, that the opening years of the new century—the first quarter or third of the century, which many of those now on the stage of action may know within the limits of their life-time—will, as I think, carry forward this thought of the higher Christian education towards general appreciation and acceptance in a measure far beyond what is realized at present. The time is not far distant, we may believe, when a new change will have come over us as a people, and we shall have entered upon a new stage of our progress. We have, in the older sections of the country, already passed altogether beyond what we may call the pioneer era. We are now passing through the era of the accumulation of wealth and material powers and gifts.

Within the past thirty years, since the outbreaking of the Civil War, the national life has been transformed, as we may say, from that of a quiet village of the times of the fathers to that of a great metropolitan city. Wealth, art and architecture and invention have been developed almost beyond the dreams of the middle point of the century. The possibilities for the growth of wealth have opened wonderfully, and the possibilities for the attainment of the good things which wealth secures have presented a constant and powerful incentive to take these things into personal possession. The mind and energy of the people have, accordingly, been given to the accumulation of property in an extraordinary degree. We have been gathering in our wealth for the future as the man, in his manhood, does to the end of enjoying the reward of the later resting years. It is for this reason partly, if not wholly—even as has been already intimated—that the idea of education, as having its end in its uses only, has gained such a strong hold upon the popular mind. We have given ourselves to the accumulating of wealth as our fathers gave their efforts to the opening of the land and its opportunities, in order that the way to wealth might be made ready and straight. But the two earlier stages are preparatory to a third. The characteristic of the coming era is not to be found in the making, but rather in the fact that what was once making is already made. We are to be beyond the introductory period, and in the realization of what has been accomplished. We are to be, in some fitting use of the term, a developed, and not simply a developing, people.

II. The opportunity of the Methodists of Mississippi.

It is the law of God's government that opportunities enjoyed bring a corresponding measure of responsibility. His gifts are trusts, to be so administered and enjoyed that they shall report themselves in the advancement of the interests for which he carries on the world. "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required; and to whom men have committed much, of him will they ask more." He never makes us irresponsible owners of anything. We have no talent or treasure with which we are permitted to do absolutely as we please. The idea that we are required to answer only to ourselves for the use of what we have is false as to fact and pernicious in influence, and any life built upon such an assumption will be as unhappy as it is unwise. He who lives wholly, or even chiefly, for himself betrays his own best interests and destroys his greatest possibilities. Responsibility constantly answers to opportunity, and can not be dissociated from it. God announces the law, and all men demand its honest fulfilment; therefore, in the forward look we take to-day we can only form an adequate idea of what the church may justly require of us, and of what we should still more inexorably demand of ourselves by a careful consideration of the gifts and opportunities with which God and the church have enriched us. Whatever we possess has come to us through the labor of others, living and dead, and you can not say of any part of it, "By mine own hand have I gotten all this."

Let me direct your thought for a little time to the gifts bestowed upon you. Millsaps College is the result of the large-hearted benevolence of Major Millsaps. He gave $50,000, besides other contributions, and now offers to duplicate every dollar paid in by the Methodists of Mississippi up to the amount of $25,000 annually. We have 80,000 Methodists in this State. Then thirty-two cents per member would secure the proposition in full. We have one thousand Sunday-schools in Mississippi. Then twenty-five dollars from each school annually would secure the money to our college. The opportunities before us are inviting, inspiring. He who would not gird himself for such labor is already defeated. I am not mistaken when I say the prize for which we contend is worthy the consecration of any church. "The most important thought I ever had is my individual responsibility to God."

Dying Testimony of a Converted Heathen.

It has fallen to the lot of more than a few missionaries to visit the deathbeds of native Christians, and often has it been an occasion of adoring thankfulness to God, as most gratifying testimony has then and there been borne to the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ. At such a time the missionary has been cheered by the conviction that he has not labored in vain, and that God has been glorified in the redemption of the soul once sunk in ignorance, error, idolatry, and superstition.

Several years ago a Chinaman belonging to a distant province was in the habit of attending one of the chapels where the narrator preached. He appeared sincere and earnest in the desire to be a follower of Christ, and, on giving satisfactory evidence of repentance and faith, he was received into the church. The man was engaged in business, and, though having many difficulties in the way of observing the Sabbath and other religious duties, he was most generally seen in the chapel on the Lord's day, and manifested much pleasure in being spoken to at the close of the service. He never seemed in good health, and in the course of a few months was obliged to leave off work, and soon after to keep his bed. Missing his interesting face at church, the inquiry was made as to what had happened, and the reply came that the man was very sick, and would be glad to have us come and instruct him at his home. In a short time I went and found him even worse than had been supposed. His home was small and comfortless, his bed hard, and his food the most common; but his face was bright, and his voice most cheerful. On being asked how he was, the sufferer replied, "I am happy, believing in Jesus and in praying to God." He was then asked what there was about Jesus that he believed. "He died for me on the cross, and he atoned for my sins," quickly answered he.

"Do you feel yourself to be a sinner?"

"Yes, a very great one."

"Can you do anything to save yourself?"

"Oh, no; I am weak and helpless, but Jesus is my all."

"Is he willing to save you?"

"He has said so in the Holy Book, and I believe it."

"Are you at peace in your mind?"

"Trusting in the Savior, I am."

"Are you afraid to die?"

"No, because Jesus died for me."

"Do you pray to God?"

"Yes; I can not say much at a time, but I ask him to help me, to forgive my sins, and to take me to himself."

"Are you wanting to die?"

"I should like to live and serve him better than I have done; but if it be his will to take me away, I am ready to go."

"Is all your faith and hope resting on Jesus Christ?"

"Yes, yes," he earnestly replied, "on Jesus Christ alone."

Various native brethren called on this sick man, and prayer was often made in his room, which had become as the house of God. Our hearts were all kindled afresh with the love that fills the soul with earnest desire to honor and to glorify God. Indeed, this seemed as a gate to heaven, and we loved to be often there. For awhile our Christian brother seemed to improve, and we hoped he would be spared to tell to his people how good and how precious a jewel he had found; but the dear Savior knew what was best, and soon we saw that he was gradually failing. Day by day his strength was less, but his heart filled with heavenly joy, and he looked upon us, saying: "My time has come. I am going to the home where Jesus is. Oh, how glorious the thought is to me! Tell my people, tell my countrymen to learn the way to heaven, to follow the instruction of Jesus in the gospel," and then he fell asleep; yes, asleep in Jesus, asleep in the faith of the gospel.

When we met to hold a Christian burial service over his emaciated remains, we looked upon his love-lit face and said, "He is safe in the arms of Jesus," and we praised God for his redeeming grace that had given such victory over death, and left a sure testimony of full salvation.

A MISSIONARY.

Singapore Lightly Touched.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

The passage from Saigon on down below the Malay peninsula, through the Straits, past the northwest end of Sumatra, was very fine; the weather was not too warm, and the sea, especially in the Straits, was smooth, and beautiful with flying fishes and tropical shores. It is quite a sight to see the men of many nations that meet a vessel at Singapore. This city and island of same name belong to England, and our French ship tarried there only from 2 P. M. to 6 A. M.; but this gave time for hurried visits to the museum and the botanical garden. The animals kept here are not so numerous and interesting as those at Saigon, but the garden is very extensive, and the designers had the advantage of gentle hills in making it artistic. We had learned that from some point of the fort and barracks, near the garden, a view of the city and country could be had, but there was no time to go there.

The governor's house is on an eminence broad and fair, between the garden and the city. A guard and liveried servants were at the door; the governor himself was absent at the races. We were allowed only to walk around the building. In the rear four tall, uniformed Sikh soldiers were reclining on a mat that had been spread on the grass. They sprang to their feet at the sight of one and remained standing until we passed. These strong men from the Punjab in Northwest India are said to be among England's best warriors. We wonder if the Cæsars of Imperial Rome had half the luxuries that are enjoyed by Victoria's high servants here in the Orient. The East surpasses the West for luxury, and the English know how to command it.

Twilight is very short eighty miles from the equator, and dark came on just as I chanced to pass a Tamil temple, where worship was going on. Having doffed my shoes and entered, I witnessed what was to me a most interesting heathen worship. The well-shaped young men who were performing it first clapped their hands gently in the direction of the illuminated altar, much the same way as is done in Japan; then they stretched themselves upon the smooth, tiled floor, and in that position executed some most beautiful calisthenic exercises. Rising from this, they anointed their muscles and received from some one who represented the temple a little food, composed of rice and peas. This eaten, they proceeded to a smaller shrine adjoining on the right. This was not well lighted, and, being alone, I did not venture far; but they seemed here to repeat the gymnastics, and, in addition, to wash themselves in the water of a sacred well near the shrine.

There are many Chinese in Singapore, but it is said that these Tamils (here called Klings) can buy from the Chinese, and then sell to them again the same things on the same street. Most of the small shops and the general trade of Singapore is in their hands. The Chinese confine themselves mainly to Chinese and Japanese curios. In all these eastern ports there are some European mercantile establishments, mainly for foreign dry goods, drugs, and the like.

There are some fine drives about Singapore besides the one to the garden, and we were told that the Rajah of Jahore, who rules over Jahore, the region just across the strait on the mainland, very kindly receives the traveler who takes the time (about a day) necessary for visiting his palace.

On a map of the city at the museum was noted "Methodist Chapel," and I was tempted to give up the trip to the garden, and search out instead some one connected with that chapel, because no Methodist had been seen since bidding Mr. Loehr "good-bye" at Woosung.

Colombo, May 19.

A Missionary Meeting in the Bluff City.

I was present, on a recent visit to Natchez, at a meeting of the "Trueheart Torch-bearers," a juvenile missionary society. The program consisted of addresses by the various officers and reports, and followed by an address from their agent for their little paper. This was a new departure. The bright face and earnest pleas of this young lad so pleased me. I asked for a copy which I enclose, hoping you can find space for it, for I thought of you when the earnest, young speaker was talking. If you had a dozen such intelligent youths to present the claims of the ADVOCATE before large audiences, such as he spoke to, it might result in a large increase of subscribers. But here is the paper:

"The Little Worker," the organ of the Juvenile Missionary Society, was established by the Woman's Board in the year 1891, and Miss A. M. Barnes, of Duluth, Ga., has been its editor from the first. The paper is published every month at Nashville by the Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South. Every issue contains interesting and instructive stories of mission lands, besides other good reading matter for children. There is a department belonging to the home work, and the bright letters from the "Light Bearers," "Palmetto Leaves," "Golden Rods," and many others with names as pretty, are very interesting. It has many entertaining pictures, giving us a better idea of the people and work in our mission fields, and frequent letters from our missionaries, who want so much to interest the children in the work; so that they may grow up to be men and women instructed and qualified to work for the spread of Christ's kingdom. Dear little friends, you know that Solomon, the wisest king of Israel, said, "Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure and whether it be right," and our Savior said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not." He wants even the least of us to work for him. Can we do better than to send the gospel to those little ones who do not know that Jesus loved and died for them? In order to do good work for missions, we must learn all we can about the mission lands and children, and there is no paper published for young people that gives more information on this subject, or that is more interesting and helpful than the "Little Worker." The subscription price is only twenty-five cents a year, a sum so small that many of us might save it in a short while from what we spend for soda water and candy. Every member of our missionary society ought to take the "Little Worker," and we would be glad for those who are not members to subscribe for it, and see how bright and interesting it is. You, dear parents, take it also, to find out what the children are doing in mission work, and then encourage your own little ones to help us. We ask the prayers and support of everybody for the "Trueheart Torch-bearers," of Natchez, and for the "Little Worker."

I can give you the words, but not the expression thrown into this speech.

I found the churches in Natchez awake on the great subject of missions, and my pleasant visit will long be remembered as a bright spot in the life of an itinerant's wife.

How to Help the Pastor.

BY REV. C. H. WETHERBE.

Every true pastor craves all the help he can get from every member of his church. And every member owes this to his pastor. Yet not alone to the pastor, but also to the pastor's Master and theirs, do the members owe this serviceable duty. Dr. J. A. Broadus, speaking on this point, says: "We can help him by talking about what he says; not talking about the performance and about the performer and all that, which, if it is appropriate anywhere, is surely all inappropriate when we turn away from the solemn worship of God and from listening to sermons intended to do us good, but talking about the thoughts that he has given us, recalling them sometimes to one who has heard them like ourselves, repeating them sometimes to some one who has not had the opportunity of hearing them. Thus may we multiply whatever good thoughts the preacher is able to present and keep them alive in our own minds and the minds of fellow-Christians." This course is far better than to simply tell the pastor that he preached an excellent sermon. Some weak, vain preachers may desire such a commendation more than the knowledge that his hearers are quietly and helpfully talking over the truths which he has declared, although it is to be hoped that there are but few of such pastors. True enough, the pastor needs a cheering word now and then. It does him good to be told that his sermons do his hearers good; but let this be done sincerely, thoughtfully, earnestly. Yet the great idea is to be a helper of the pastor by carrying some part or parts of the message to others who may not be present, and thus extend the reach and the power of the pastor beyond the walls of the church. In this way people have often been induced to come into the sanctuary, and perhaps for the first time in their lives. In cases also of backsliders they have been thus led to awake from their lethargy and return to the house which they had forsaken. If you can not repeat any of the pastor's words to others, you certainly can ask them to come and hear him.

An Open Letter to the Preachers of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: I have called attention to certain facts and figures in reference to the distribution of the domestic mission fund which may seem to justify relaxation of effort to collect the full assessment for this fund. While I have nothing to retract, I do not wish to be understood as advising less strenuous and persistent efforts to collect the full assessment for home missions. I presume the Board made appropriations to works served by worthy and needy brethren, and a falling off in the collections would wrong this class of our missionaries. What I have written was intended to make the members of our Mission Board, presiding elders and Bishops more careful to have this fund distributed equitably. Policy ought not to control in the distribution of mission funds at the expense of justice.

Let us do right first though the heavens fall. I plead for the rights of the old veterans who have served uncomplainingly on hard works at half pay. These half-fed, hard-worked preachers, some of whom receive a miserable pittance and others nothing at all from the mission fund, have rights founded upon the immutable principles of justice that the Board can not afford to disregard. I intend, if God wills, to continue this fight until this class of preachers get their just share of the home mission fund. I impugn no man's motives, but I have convictions—strong, abiding convictions—which extort this appeal for simple justice. Let me again urge full collections, that our worthy, needy brethren may get the little amount appropriated by the Board.

D. G. W. ELLIS.

God Wills Our Holiness.

Can you imagine Jesus discovering in the robes of his spotless holiness one single spot of sin? Behold him as he gazes on it! Is there any question in him as to whether it is great or small? The imperative horror of its being there swallows up all questions of its size. Is there any question as to what its consequence will be? The present horror is enough. The future is not thought of. Only all the Godhead that is in Jesus is instantly summoned to destroy this spot of sin. All the ocean of that divine power and holiness is implored to pour in and wash this speck of wickedness away.

So it is possible for us to deal with every sin, little or great, that we discover in our hearts. To count it God's enemy and to fight it with all his purity and strength, that is what it means for us that our sword should be bathed in Heaven! Courage can only come with thoroughness. But with absolute thoroughness, courage must come. Resolve to-day that every strength of God which is your right to invoke, because you are his child, and which prayer and consecration can bring into you from him, shall be devoted to the overcoming of your sin, and then your sin shall certainly be overcome.—Phillips Brooks.

Right.

When Thomas Arnold was asked by a friend why he took such great care to prepare himself for each recitation, he replied that he would rather have his pupils drink from a fresh and living fountain than a dead and stagnant pool. Dr. Arnold was right. A teacher who does not constantly strive for greater perfection and becomes a stranger to study not only risks forgetting the little he knows above what is indispensable in his class-work, but abandons himself to a meaningless routine, and that means drudgery. Can anyone conscientiously call himself a true teacher who does not think of school except during school hours? —Educational Review.

Consecration.

Consecration is an act of the will, not a state of the feelings.

They may be more or less of joy or of enthusiasm, but the essential thing is the giving up of one's will to God's will, and putting one's self in a position to be governed.—The United Presbyterian.

It is possible to sift or filter a sunbeam as to intercept its heat and to allow its light to pass unhindered. So it is possible to criticise and analyze the attributes of God in such a way as to cut off from the heart their warmth-giving influence and to let their cold light only pass into the intellect.—B. Wilkinson.

What, indeed, does that word, "obeerfulness," imply? It means a pure heart, a contented spirit; it means a kind and loving disposition; it means humility and charity; it means a generous appreciation of others, and a modest opinion of self.—W. M. Thackeray.

There is many a church member who would be scared almost to death if he could feel for his own spiritual pulse and find out how near dead he is.

Good Counsel.

How shall we live harmoniously with incompatible people, with those that fret us and are naturally disagreeable? A large part of the secret of it consists in just settling down to their peculiarities as one would to the heaviness of lead, expecting nothing else, taking it for granted that they can not or will not alter, ceasing to make efforts to have them, accepting their ways as their right, and simply studying how to turn the inevitable to some good account as a means of grace, a chance for winning victories and perfecting one's own character. When we once make up our mind to a thing and fully consent to have it so, it is amazing how much blessing we can get out of it, and how much good we can see in it. The sooner we come to the conclusion that we can not change people much after they are grown up, the better it will be for our peace of mind.—Zion's Herald.

The True Mark.

To be religious does not mean that we should try to look as though we were inspired by the Holy Ghost, or to give ourselves such airs as to intimate to the world that we are so absorbed with eternal things that whether we are in the body or out of the body we can not tell. Every paltry endeavor, whether it be a monk's cowl or a Quaker's hat, to seem dehumanized and denaturalized by religion, is offensive to good taste. As the Bible is printed in common type, which might be used afterward in the publication of a novel or a play-bill, and, as the profoundest and most sacred speculations may be inscribed by a pen which has been used in summing up accounts, so we are to illustrate Christian truths in ordinary and everyday affairs, knowing that it is the message borne, and not the material used in its announcement, that is the important and sacred thing. —G. C. Lorimer.

The recognition of the Sender, in absolute submission of our wills to him must run through all the life. You may do your daily work, whatever it may be, with this for its motto, "Thy will of the Lord be done." And those who thus can look at their trade or profession, and see the trivialities and monotonies of their daily occupation in the transfiguring light of that great thought, will never need to complain that life is small, ignoble, wearisome, insignificant. As with pebbles in a clear brook with the sunshine on it, the water in which they are sunk glorifies and magnifies them. If you take them out, they are but bits of common stone; lying beneath the smooth ripple they are jewels. Plunge the prose of your life, and all its trivialities, into that great stream, and it will magnify and glorify the smallest and the homeliest. Absolute submission to the divine will, and the ever-present thrilling consciousness of doing it, were the secret of Christ's life, and ought to be the secret of ours.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D., in "The Wearied Christ."

Our Lord and Master lived for thirty years in uneventful obscurity, and died at the end of thirty-three years with every appearance of failure; and you and I are reminded by this example of the Lord that we are not to seek great things for ourselves; that we are not to be concerned by what men think of us; that our sole concern is in God's sight to be judged from day to day by his clear judgment, and we have also learned that we are called upon to face danger and persecution, or even death, if it is in the maintenance of what is right and true. We have the noblest Example before the world for turning away from the attraction of life and taking up the cross, rather than shirk the conflict. R. F. Horton, M. A.

No one will attempt to deny the consequences which must inevitably follow as the result of the almost universal absence of children from the public services of the church. The children who at eight years of age have not already begun to form the habit of church attendance, and are not quite thoroughly established in it at sixteen, will stand a very fair chance of spending their entire life with little or no attachment either for the church or religious things. The non-church-going youth of this age will be the Sabbath breakers and irreligious people of the next.—Lutheran Observer.

I want you to think that in the troubles will come which seem as if they never would pass away. The night and the storm look as if they would last forever; but the calm of the morning can not be stayed. The storm in its very nature is transient. The effort of nature, as that of the human heart, ever is to return to repose, for God is peace.—George Donald.

There are souls in the world that have the gift of finding joy everywhere, and leaving it behind them when they go. Their influence is the inevitable gladdening of the heart. They give light without meaning to shine. Their bright hearts have a great work to do for God.—Frederick W. Faber.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

FORCEMEAT OF BEEF.—Take cold mashed potato, some slices of beef minced fine, a few savory herbs, pepper and salt. Mix these, with two eggs, to taste. Make into balls. Fry in butter a rich brown. Garnish with parsley.—Peerless Cook Book.

CHICKEN SALAD.—1 boiled chicken, chopped fine, 1 head of cabbage and equal amount of celery, chopped fine, the whites of 12 hard-boiled eggs chopped with it. Take the yolks and mash them fine; then add 2 tablespoonfuls sugar, 1 tablespoonful of butter, 1 teaspoonful of mustard and one cup of vinegar. Mix it all and serve.—Mrs. D. D. Connell.

CHOCOLATE PIE.—Heat a pint of sweet milk with two tablespoonfuls of grated sweet chocolate. When partly cool, add the yolks of three well-beaten eggs and whites of one, and three-fourths teacupful sugar, and one teaspoonful vanilla. Pour this into a nice crust and bake. When done, whip the whites of two eggs stiff, add two tablespoonfuls sugar and spread over the pie. Return to the oven and brown a little.

PARKER HOUSE ROLLS.—One teacupful of yeast, one tablespoonful sugar, a piece of lard the size of an egg, one pint of milk, flour enough to make a stiff batter. Put the milk on the stove to scald, with the lard in it. Mix the salt, sugar and yeast into the flour. Add the milk, being careful not to put in too hot. Knead thoroughly when mixed at night, and only slightly the next morning. Roll out an inch thick, and cut out with a large-sized biscuit-cutter. Spread a little butter on each roll and lap together. Let them rise very light, then bake in a quick oven. Peerless Cook Book.

CHOCOLATE PUFFS.—Take half a pound of granulated sugar and one cake of grated chocolate, and mix them well together. Beat up the white of one egg to a stiff froth, then add the chocolate and sugar; beat them until they are a stiff paste. Sprinkle sugar on writing paper, and drop the mixture on it in drops about the size of a silver quarter dollar. Bake them in a moderate oven. Almond puffs are made in the same way, without the chocolate; blanching half a pound of almonds, and mashing them fine in a mortar, with a little orange-flower water.—Good Housekeeping.

PRUNE PIE.—Cover the desired amount of prunes with water and soak over night; in the morning drain. Line a dish lined with pie crust, fill in the prunes, sprinkle over four tablespoonfuls of sugar and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Cover with an upper crust and bake in a moderately quick oven for thirty minutes. The juice of the prunes should blend with the sugar and form a syrup. If the prunes are hard, they may require a little cooking before going into the pie; but if they are soft, you will find the pie richer if put at once into the crust. The lemon juice must be added or the pie will be flat.

HYGIENE.

"Tired Nature's Sweet Restorer."

Certain portions of the living body are endowed with ceaseless movement. The heart never rests from beating nor the arteries from pulsation. The breath never ceases to play through its natural channels, and some part of the process of digestion and assimilation is constantly in action. But the greater bulk of the system, that portion inspired by the mind and dominated by the will, demands a certain periodical amount of absolute rest, and to supply this want sleep has been provided. The essential amount of sleep is subject to individual variation. Sir Astley Cooper found five hours a day ample for his needs. But many persons require twice that quantity to preserve the balance of health. It may be safely said that eight hours of sleep are needed for the average man. Children demand more sleep than adults, the amount increasing as we go back to infancy; eighteen or twenty hours a day is not too much for a babe, although unhappily infants rarely pass so much time in oblivion.

The time of sleeping is of less importance than the amount of slumber. Poor Richard impressed his day and generation with the fact that "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise," and that "The early bird catches the worm." But it should be observed that the early worm gets caught by the bird. As a matter of fact the dark hours are adapted to sleep, and the rest taken then is more recuperative than that gained from daylight slumber. All the conditions of nature are particularly favorable to repose at that time, and all unreasoning creatures submit to her dictation. Man alone rejects her rule and surrounds himself by artificial circumstances which preclude slumber during various portions of the night.

But while observation has shown that the most perfect type of rest is attainable only during sunless hours, the system may be recuperated in an amply sufficient degree by the proper amount of unbroken repose at other times. Early rising then is of advantage only when preceded by early retiring. In many cases the hour of rising is fixed; the shop or the office, the school-room or the factory, the interests of the employer and the demands of the employee, befit the plans of nature. But where the demands of stern necessity are absent, sleep should not be broken because of artificial rules. Late retiring should be followed by late rising. The mother whose infant has broken her rest, delicate persons and invalids, and, in particular, growing children, should not be rudely or prematurely aroused. Let breakfast be less elaborate in character and more variable in time. Let natural awakening wait upon natural sleep. Yield gracefully to the great panacea for the ravages of this high pressure age—

"Sleep, * * * sore labor's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great Nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast."

—N. Y. Advocate.

Typhoid Fever.

One of the most firmly substantiated facts of pathology is that typhoid fever is a preventable disease; that it passes from person to person in the form of a rod-shaped bacillus, or in the spores formed within the bacillus; and there is reason to believe that the spores are far more resistant and live much longer than the parent bacilli. As all these bacilli are plants, the two ways in which they may be propagated and multiplied may be compared to the propagation of plants by "cuttings" or "grafts," or by planting seeds, the vitality of seeds being much greater than that of the cuttings, so that influences that would kill the bacilli themselves and render them harmless would spare the spores to continue their death-dealing career. There are two ways in which typhoid germs can enter the human system; and when we note the dimensions of normal typhoid bacilli—one ten-thousandth of an inch, breadth one-third of this—we can easily believe that they can float in the air, and Dr. Vaughan has found them in the air of a sewer where water-borne typhoid germs were certainly in existence. There are cases of the contraction of typhoid fever where the infection was undoubtedly breathed in, but by far the greatest number of cases come from drinking sewage-contaminated water. The next twenty-five years will see hundreds of communities supplying themselves with unimpeachably pure water, for when people have done that they have fought and won half the battle of complete sanitation. There is going to be a general, if not a universal, protest and outcry against polluting lakes and rivers.—New York Independent.

"The angels from their thrones on high
Look down on us with wondering eye;
That where we are but passing guests
We build our strong and solid nests;
But where we seek to dwell for aye
We scarce take heed a stone to lay."

—From the German.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Economy.

Economy is necessary in all avocations of life; none more so than that in farming. It can be practiced profitably in every department of the farm. There are, however, some false ideas about it, and many things are done, if rightly investigated, that would show exactly to the opposite. The man who plows with a dull plow with the idea that it saves expense, practices false economy. The man who said, "He would not own a horse, his cart and feed, as it would make it too expensive; that it would be more economical to spade and hoe his land," had about the same idea of economy. To say the least of it, some men's heads seem to be an unnecessary appendage. They certainly do not think. Enter some of their farms, and you are impressed with their disastrous management. Farm tools of all kinds, wagons, buggies, mowers, etc., are left exactly in the spot where last used. Rain, heat, cold and rust make their ravages. It is not long before they are on their way to the shop. Time and money both lost. There is enough lost on many farms by sloth, from year to year, to feed an ordinary family from each separate one conducted in such a manner.

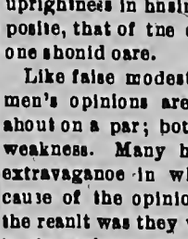
Some again seem to have no idea as to the value of time. They act upon the principle that it costs nothing; hence is of no value, while each day is fraught with much that is of value, especially to the man on the farm. The man who stopped his plow to walk a mile and a half to buy a ping of tobacco, when his crop was in much need, acted upon the plan of many, that his partial or imaginary wants were of more importance than the absolute necessaries of life. They "spend their money for that which is not bread, and their labor for which satisfieth not." A twin crime: the unnecessary use of tobacco and the wanton use of time.

Again as to debts, whatever may be said to the contrary, many could avoid them if they would, were they more economical. Lay aside false notions, do upon less, and the time will come when cash can be paid for all the necessaries of life. Credit abused is the cause of many being in debt. To pay cash is economy. The seller can afford to furnish for much less than on a credit; the cash buyer makes the heavy profit in the difference. Many could grow rich in saving the difference between cash and that on time. The merchant knows this, while many farmers do not seem to catch the idea. The merchant has learned that small profits often repeated soon add much to his wealth; like wise, small savings often repeated have a like result. Franklin wisely said, "A dollar saved is two made." Another has said, "There is as much in saving as there is in making."

The rule should be in the management of the farm, never to buy unless positively needed. Many wants of life are more imaginary than real. Many have the idea they are estimated by what they wear. This, in part, may be true; yet, as a rule, among the intelligent, where a man is known, men are estimated by their punctuality and uprightness in business. As to the opposite, that of the opinion of fools, no one should care.

Like false modesty, false ideas as to men's opinions are in some respects about on a par; both exhibit a mental weakness. Many have been led into extravagance in what they wear because of the opinion of others, when the result was they were much lowered in the estimate of the business world by their failure to meet their obligations caused by their extravagance and false ideas. The rule should be, wear as your circumstances will allow, meet your honest debts, and the time will arrive when you will be estimated as your true worth deserves, however plainly you may grow. Solomon says, "Seest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men." Diligence in this does not mean alone close application to labor, but even more economy in all that a man has, and the avoidance of all extravagance in the use of all that he has.

Thousands of Dollars



Mr. S. G. Derry.

I spent trying to find cure for Salt Rheum which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the humor. I was unable to lie down, could not walk without crutches, and had to have my arms, back and legs bandaged twice a day. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon could see a change. The flesh became healthy, the sores soon healed, the scales fell off, I was able to give up bandages and crutches, and a happy man I was. I took "Some years ago, I was in a terrible condition with a humor, or eruption, which broke out all over my face and body. Seeing the testimony of others as to the efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla in like cases, I concluded to give this medicine a trial, and the result was a thorough cure, no sign of the complaint making its appearance since. Polite Fibbing.

To speak the whole truth is not always desirable, or even necessary. There are occasions when it is an act of charity to maintain a discreet silence. We have little sympathy with people who blurt out unpleasant facts regardless of the proprieties or of the feelings of others. Persons of delicate sensibilities are often wounded unnecessarily by the inconsiderate, ill-timed remarks of blunt talkers. Furthermore, it is not one's duty to divulge private matters at the request of every curious inquirer. To suppress a part of the truth is sometimes the best way to get rid of prying people.

There is a wide difference, however, between suppressing the truth where no question of principle is involved, and the utterance of a fib, be it "polite" or otherwise. In our cities and villages a scene like this often occurs. A visitor rings at the door and calls for the lady of the house. The servant, in accordance with instructions, says that her mistress is not in, although at the very moment she is at home. Or the visitor is told that the lady is sick, when such is not the case. In some cases children are sent to give such responses The story may be believed, but more often it is not, for the caller is apt to suspect the true state of the case.

"Now, what harm," says some one, "can result from a little untruth like that." We answer, "A great deal of harm." In the first place, servants are thus taught to believe that there is not the slightest wrong in telling a falsehood, if it will save one from some discomfort. We can not expect our servants to be better than ourselves, for they pattern after us. In fact, we are largely responsible for their moral condition. Moreover, the servant who tells falsehoods to visitors and strangers will not scruple to do the same to master or mistress in order to escape punishment or a reprimand for some offense.

The worst feature of the case is that many children are reared in this unwholesome moral atmosphere, and so come to regard the truth as a conventional thing. It is bad enough for a servant to tell fibs for others, but for a child to do it is ruinous. What child bred amid such surroundings could escape having its moral sensibilities blunted and its regard for the truth destroyed? The moral nature is too easily corrupted for men and women to deal thus lightly with it. Though the fault may seem small in the eyes of some, continuance in it will result in a loss of spirituality, and finally in the complete break-down of character.

Business men, and especially public officials, are often guilty of the sin named. Because of press of duties they instruct employees to say that they are away, or that they are indisposed. The world calls these "polite fibs," and passes them over as innocent. The fact is, however, that no fib can be perfectly harmless. If it works no other injury, it harms the author. The plain truth, or, at least, a truthful evasion, would in every instance be far better than willful fibbing. The man or woman who sees through a fib of this kind nearly always goes away with a sense of having been wronged. We wish all who are tempted along this line would study the character of Jeanie Deans in Scott's "Heart of Midlothian." May we ever keep in mind our Savior's command, "But let your communication be, yea, yea; nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."

"Living Monuments."

This attractive booklet of sixty-three pages is devoted to the explanation and illustration of the Named Loan Funds of our Church Extension Board. It contains interesting sketches and finely executed portraits of the persons in honor of whom the several Loan Funds have been endowed and named. These funds now amount to $99,795. Out of this sum loans have been made amounting to $183,890. Two hundred and forty-nine churches and twenty-six parsonages have been thus aided, The collections for church extension throughout Southern Methodism yield annually about sixty thousand dollars, half of which sum is used by the various Conference Boards. Although a grand work is being done by the aid of this money, which is donated to congregations needing assistance in church building, the Loan Funds, as we see, are accomplishing a work of far greater magnitude. The Board of Church Extension, at its inception, provided for the raising of Loan Funds, to be held separate from moneys raised for donation, and to be loaned on good securities in aid of church or parsonage building.

In 1884, the following provision was made for the establishment of Named Loan Funds: "Sums of five thousand dollars and upwards, donated by one or more persons, may, by direction of the contributors, constitute separate Loan Funds and be named by them." These moneys bear interest at six per cent., the accruing interest being compounded yearly, and are preserved without diminution a perpetual fund. We know of no better way by which to perpetuate one's own memory or the memories of loved ones than by endowing such a fund. Monuments of brass and stone are soon destroyed, and their builders are forgotten. Not so with the Named Loan Fund. Hear what Dr. H. C. Morrison says: "It never wearies in well-doing. Ever giving, yet never exhausted; toiling ever, yet never tired; a sort of everlasting benediction; an immortal Good Samaritan, with wine, oil, and bandages for the bleeding and helpless churches of the land. Going to the West, it fortifies a point; returning to the East, it repairs a breach in the wall. It leaves joy and gladness in its pathway. It is a sort of financial angel flying through mid-heaven, preaching the everlasting gospel. Every dollar that goes into its treasury becomes imperishable. It lives for all time, and lives for God. If you would make your money immortal, cast it in here." The Kavanaugh Fund, for example, has crept up from $16,000 to $21,000, and has been loaned and repaid and loaned again, until it has furnished aid to the amount of $53,000.

Had we the space, we would tell about the Annuity Loan Fund, which is a modification of the Named Loan Fund. A more safe, attractive or renumerative form of investment it would be hard to find. "Living Monuments" will be eagerly read and carefully preserved. It is published by the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South. Price, 50 cents. Copies may be had by addressing David Morton, Cor. Sec'y, 705 W. Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.

BOOKS.

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH. By Rev. W. P. Lovejoy, A. M. Nashville, Tenn.: Barbee & Smith. Price, $1.

The duties of practical Christianity is the theme herein discussed. The author starts out by showing that in Christian living organized effort is as necessary as it is in military affairs. Having asked the questions, "What is the church?" and "What is it for?" he proceeds to the answer, which involves matters of vital interest to every sincere believer. We agree with the author that a house of worship is not a church, neither is a company of men and women, calling themselves by the same name, and holding a common form of doctrinal belief. The church is a spiritual institution, and is the representative of Christ—nothing less. The author makes it plain that the chief business of the church is not merely to keep men out of hell, but to build up Christly characters. "In witnessing for Christ, the church must bear testimony to the lost condition of men, and that the 'one thing needful' is to be born again, that morality is not religion, 'turning over a new leaf' is not regeneration, a galvanized corpse is not a living body with pulse-beat and heart-throb that tell of the life within."

The author strikes home in asserting that if the church believes what she professes to believe, then her attitude toward the unsaved, and especially toward the poor and the outcasts, is, in many cases, shameful, even criminal.

Among the subjects discussed are: Education, the Sabbath, Popular Amusements, the Saloon, and Money. All of these questions are handled in a bold and masterly way. The arraignment of the theater, the dance, and card playing is powerful, the arguments presented being unanswerable. Few Christians who read what this book has to say upon this subject will be ready afterwards to patronize these destroyers of spiritual life. We like the author's remarks about the duty of the church to provide wholesome recreation for the young. The book is written in a clear, vigorous style. It is a stimulating, helpful presentation of truth, and ought to have a wide circulation. Ministers and laymen will alike enjoy it.

OUR NEW BUILDING. By Rev. J. E. Harrison. 160 pages. Price, 60 cents. Nashville, Tenn.: Southern Methodist Publishing House.

Under this happily chosen title the author discusses in a very charming manner the origin and plan of the Epworth League, the relation of this "new building" to the church, and the conditions necessary to its success. Methodism itself is shown to be the outcome of a young people's league, composed of Oxford students who banded themselves together for Bible study, prayer and ministration to the temporal and spiritual wants of others. England's great need of vital religion shortly before the Wesleyan revival and the help which Methodism brought are told about in a concise, yet forceful style. Just enough Methodist history is given to make those unfamiliar with it thirst for more. The author makes it plain that if denominationalism is right, and the signal success of denominational Christianity is convincing proof, then a Methodist young people's league is just as much a necessity as is our Missionary Board or our system of Sunday-schools. To quote from the author: "We wish to be in touch with and heartily support every other young people's movement, but we want to drill by Methodist tactics, to build a Methodist edifice." If Methodism is to hold her own, she must press into service the young men and women who belong to her. The volume before us shows how well-fitted the Epworth League is to interest young people in religious work, and make them valiant soldiers for Christ. Bible study, works of charity and help, the study of Methodist literature, the right sort of social enjoyment are the materials, so to speak, out of which the "new building" is to be constructed. All who read the book are sure to become interested in the success of the League. It is a helpful, instructive little volume, and should be in the hands of all our young leaguers. We regard it as a valuable addition to our Epworth League literature.

Millsaps College.

The prospects for our next session are highly encouraging. The demand for information respecting the college is greater than at any time before. All the indications point to a large attendance of pupils.

FACILITIES FOR BOARD.

To meet the increasing demand two new cottages are now being built for the accommodation of students. One, the John A. Ellis Memorial Cottage, is the result of the fruitful work of our agent, and the other a contribution of the generous founder of the college, Major Millsaps. All the rooms in both these buildings have been engaged.

I frequently get letters from parents asking if they can board their sons with a member of the faculty. We have made admirable arrangements to meet this demand. The principal of our Sub-Freshman department, Prof. Ricketts, will have charge of one of our Students' Homes, and his assistant, Prof. Bailey, will board at another. Students can also get board with Dr. Moore, our professor of mathematics. Board, under excellent conditions, can be had, as heretofore, in private families at very low rates. Indeed, we will be prepared next session to meet all demands. A gentleman said recently that, after sending his sons to several colleges, he believes that better advantages could be enjoyed at Millsaps College at less cost than at any other institution in the country. Students who were with us last session and had been to other schools gave testimony to the same effect.

HELPING DESERVING YOUNG MEN.

Almost every mail brings to me letters from young men and their friends, asking for help either in the way of money or work to enable them to enjoy the advantages of the college. Some of these appeals touch me deeply. They come from young men who do not ask for charity, but seek the opportunity to qualify themselves for larger usefulness, and I have no doubt they would gladly return with interest all they had received. But the college is doing all it can to help this class of deserving young men. We can not do any more unless our endowment is largely increased or our scholarships multiplied. Here is a splendid opportunity for Educational Loan Associations and for private individuals to do a great work. Shall these young men plead in vain? What says the church? If we do not meet demands of this sort, have we any mission at all? It may be a lamentable fact, but it is a fact nevertheless, that the thirst, the ambition for education is, in a great measure, confined to those who have not the means to attend our schools and colleges.

The church that recognizes its obligations here, and bravely and generously does its duty, will be the church of the future.

BISHOP GALLOWAY'S LETTER.

We greatly appreciate Bishop Galloway's parting message. It was like him to think of us just as the great ship was about to bear him away to distant countries. No one loves the church more than he. As he is so far off now, it is not improper for me to say that no one is wiser than he. He knows what Millsaps College means to Methodism in Mississippi. Let me most cordially second the Bishop's appeal in behalf of the collections for education in our two Conferences. The assessment is small, and it is to be hoped it will be collected in full.

This collection is vital to the interests of the college. It furnishes the opportunity for keeping our people informed about the college and for stirring their consciences on the subject of this department of our church work. This collection also gives an opportunity for all our people to contribute something annually to the college. The assessment ought to be increased. If the two Mississippi Conferences would together contribute in this way $6,000 annually, it would be equivalent to one hundred thousand dollars of endowment. I hope each of our Conferences will respond to the Bishop's parting injunction by agreeing to raise annually by collections $3,000.

Notice.

To the Friends of Ministerial Education in the Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: I desire, in behalf of the young preachers who are beneficiaries of the Ministerial Educational Aid Association, to solicit a contribution from everyone who feels that they would like to invest in the education of a young preacher, and especially do I ask those of our brethren who are subscribers to the association to send in their installment for 1894. We have six young men on our list from the following places in the Conference: two from China Grove circuit, one from Jackson station, one from Brandon station, one from Waynesboro, one from Amite circuit.

Now, brethren, if you desire to know the names of these young men and the condition on which we let them have the money, you can address a private letter to me and I will answer. One hundred and thirty dollars will be necessary to carry these young men till Christmas. The treasury is suffering from "great leanness." Will you kindly replenish and by so doing assist these young men through school. If you will, send your contribution or installment to Rev. C. G. Andrews, Vicksburg, Miss. May the Lord open the hearts of the friends to respond at once! Fraternally,

M. L. BURTON,
Sec. and Collector.

EDWARD M'GEHEE COLLEGE.

Prof. J. A. Monroe, A. M., a graduate of Trinity College, N. C., has been elected president of Edward McGehee College. President Monroe comes to this college very highly endorsed, and with a record of large success in the past and the promise of still larger for the future. Edward McGehee College is to be congratulated on her good fortune in securing his services. The prospects of the college were never brighter.

STATE NORMAL SCHOOL.

The State Normal School at Natchitoches will begin its tenth annual session on Oct. 1, 1894, as will be seen from its advertisement in this issue. The Normal has gained a well-earned reputation throughout the State for thorough instruction and good discipline. It will begin its tenth annual session under more favorable auspices than ever before, as the additional buildings which the appropriation made by the last Legislature will enable it to erect, will no doubt furnish ample accommodations for all who apply for admission.

Kobe Circuit.

It is the fixed policy of the mission that everyone connected with it, no matter what his engagements may be, shall have some evangelistic work to do. In the case of those who are teaching, this is generally met by giving them a Sunday appointment or two. Kobe circuit, with its four or five appointments, lying on the outskirts of Kobe and in the neighborhood of the Kwansei Gakuin, affords excellent opportunities for evangelistic work on the part of the different teachers and the theological students. Rev. Y. Yoshioka, the president of the school and professor in the theological department, is in charge of the circuit.

The following, taken from a recent letter, will show that the Lord is blessing the work on Kobe circuit: "The Lord has blessed us much in his work. A powerful preaching service was held at Mikage last night for the outside people. A little work has been lately opened in a village, close by Mikage, with much hope. Last Sunday afternoon some of us started an open-air preaching work in the villages between the school and Mikage. We preached in three different places to more than 250 people, who had never heard the gospel before. They listened to our preaching and singing with all attention, and many of them heard the gospel gladly and asked us to go to their homes and tell them more about it. We had a glorious time. It did us so much good. The soul-saving band will go on its second expedition to-morrow afternoon. It consists of our students, both theological and academic. I expect to have a few baptisms to-morrow at Mikage again. Both at Hyogo and East Kobe the work is beginning to be much brighter. In short, the field is ripe. It is waiting for us to enter. May the Lord help us to be diligent and faithful, to do a great and mighty work for his name!"

Hinds County, Miss., Goes Dry.

Thousands of the readers of the ADVOCATE will rejoice with us in the splendid prohibition victory just won in this county. The election was held Tuesday, July 31, and Hinds county has gone gloriously dry. The champions of the dram shop carried only the city of Jackson and one little country precinct; the other precincts went nearly five to one against the sale. This gives Mississippi 68 out of 75 counties which have prohibited the dram shop, and I am confident that a determined effort on the part of the good people would banish it from the remaining seven.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

STEADFASTNESS.

(1. Cor. xv, 58; Col. ii, 5; I. Peter v, 9.)

Therefore—death being swallowed up in victory—"therefore, beloved brethren, be ye steadfast," etc.

1 We must abound in the work of the Lord.

(1) Must work out our own salvation. God forbid that we should help others in saving their souls, and we, ourselves, become castaways.

(2) Must work in the Lord's vineyard. Bring sinners to Christ, instruct the young in Sunday-school, support the missionary cause, assist the needy.

(3) Diligence in this work is necessary. The night cometh when no man can work.

2. Steadfastness should be a chief ingredient in our Christian character.

(1) The fickle-minded will suffer discomfiture. "Unstable as water," says the man of God, "thou will not excel."

(2) The Latins, being heathen, knew the value of steadfastness. Hear them: "Preseverentia omnia vincit"—perseverance, steadfastness, conquers all things. Demosthenes, stuttering in childhood, overcame the impediment and became the most celebrated orator by steadfast effort.

(3) Christ displayed constancy. Tempted not to drink that bitter cup, he drained it nevertheless to the dregs, finishing his mission successfully.

(4) The reward of Christian constancy will be great. Will hear the welcome plaudit: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

3. We are assured that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. Often tempted to complain with the prophet: "Who hath believed our report," etc.

(1) Not in vain, for God himself declares: "My word shall not return to me void."

(2) Not in vain, for some forlorn and shipwrecked brother may acknowledge us as the party who snatched him in pity from sin and the grave. Dried tears; comforted the distressed.

(3) Not in vain, for we follow in the footsteps of our Master who went about doing good, who came to seek the lost.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. D. Bass, Chickasaw, I. T., July 28: "We are closing a very fine meeting at Salt Creek, in Chickasaw Nation, I. T., for J. H. Bass, the pastor. A large number have been converted and will join the different churches. I also married Rev. Jno. H. Bass, of the Indian Mission Conference, to Miss Deborah Pickering, of Salt Creek community, at the church, on July 26. I hold revivals over here during the month of August, and then will return to meet engagements in Mississippi. My postoffice address is Corinth, Miss."

Rev. J. H. Evans, Raleigh, Miss., July 25: "My third Quarterly Conference was held at Bay Springs, July 21 and 22, and we continued it four days with grand results. Nine accessions to the church, 6 children baptized, and a gracious outpouring of the Spirit of God, and I think there will be others that will come into the church soon. Our beloved presiding elder, C. McDonald, did the most of the preaching, and he did it to the satisfaction of all that heard him. I can not tell how many were blessed, and I think there were many sinners converted and were made heirs of God. I did all I could for the ADVOCATE, but the money is not in the country. Times are hard. Yes, they are becoming alarming with the preacher and the people. Pray for us."

Rev. F. B. Ormond, North Kemper charge, Mississippi Conference, July 26: "Since writing you the postal of yesterday, the Lord has blessed his people in the Union Ridge meeting as never before. On yesterday, in the morning 11 o'clock service, hard sinners were made to quake and tremble on account of the great power of God in the services. Last night 17 souls came out from sin and darkness to the light and liberty of the gospel. The pulpit and the pew have both been baptized with the Holy Ghost and fire, more or less, in every service. As to this writer, who has had the preaching to do, he is forced to confess that during the four and a half years of his ministerial life he has never realized such divine power in the pulpit before. To God be the glory."

Rev. J. W. Burton, L. D.: "On the morning of July 21 we commenced a meeting at Burton Chapel, with Rev. R. W. Burton and C. W. Huff to assist. We held four days with little visible results. On account of animosity, strife, etc., which was caused by a murder in the settlement, we could do no mighty works there. The church was greatly aroused and blessed, and we hope seed was sown to bring forth fruit in the future. No conversions, no accesions. Thanks to the brethren for assistance. I ask a special interest in the prayers of all Christians, in behalf of this church and settlement, that the church might stand the shock, and the settlement again be united; for without a change of affairs I fear the worst is not yet. Pray for the pastor, that he might be able to do those things that are for the best without mistake. Pray that each of the leading characters in the fray may see themselves as God sees them, and that all mistakes and errors be made plain. May God bless them all. I love them as, perhaps, none others do. God bless and prosper the ADVOCATE."

Rev. Jas. L. Bowling, P. C., Lula, Miss., July 19: "Have just closed a ten-days' meeting in this town. The Lord was with us in great power from the beginning. Such a meeting has not been known in this section for years—in fact, many look upon it as phenomenal. This scribe has been itinerating in the hill country, and when we were sent here we were at once put under the impression that 'great revivals' were not in style in the 'Delta country;' but I do not think that I have ever seen a greater revival anywhere than this. Have seen greater ingatherings, but no greater revival. It was of the old-time religion, and many were the old-time shoutings and rejoicings. As a result, we report 14 conversions and 15 additions, with more to follow, a 'young men's prayer meeting,' and I think will have a 'ladies' prayer meeting' established, beside our regular mixed or public prayer meeting. Am greatly indebted to Revs. H. P. Crowe and J. J. Brooks for their faithful services rendered. Our very efficient and faithful presiding elder, Bro. J. A. Randolph, was also with us part of the time, lending highly appreciated assistance. Praise God, from whom all blessings flow. Pray for us."

Chas. W. Scott, McNair, Miss., July 22: "Under the pastorate of Rev. J. N. Tucker, a most delightful meeting is in progress at this place. Every available force and resource is marshalled, and all with one accord doing valiant and heroic service for the Master. We confidently expect golden conquest, and the addition of many to the church, 'even such as shall be saved.' Bro. Tucker summoned to his assistance Rev. W. M. Stevens, of Rocky Springs, who spent several days preaching a gospel, pure and strong, to the edification of all. His pulpit efforts were of a high and happy order, gaining the hearts of his hearers, and winning many to a better life. His visitation was a benediction. Bro. W. W. Simmons, Fayette's honored pastor, is in attendance now, and preaching with rare unction and wondrous power. His appeals are thrillingly touching and abound with love's magnetic charms. All hearts are captured, and a great work of grace is being wrought. Pastor Tucker is happy in the religion he so eloquently lives and preaches, and his consecration to his work we have rarely seen approached—never excelled. God is honoring his ministry, and under his sanctified leadership we are being led safely on. We would whisper to the presiding elder and Bishop in council for the next four years that this charge devoutly wills against any and all changes concerning it. A hint to the wise is sufficient. Ours is a threefold satisfaction, and hence we ought to be a happy people—(1) Dr. Black visits us weekly in the person of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. Its contents are superlatively delightful and of positive superiority, stimulating a quenchless thirst for the next issue. The ADVOCATE that brings smiles in our home and graces our table often has to submit to a third reading. We hail its coming with thanksgiving and regret the intervention of a week before we can greet it anew. Benedictions on its tireless editor. (2) Our pastor visits us monthly, and is in every respect a model. His cultivated, discerning eye, together with high spiritual qualification, eminently justify the assertion that he is one of our most godly and useful men. The Bible we read in his life and in his hands; in every home and at every hearth he impresses its immortal worth and stresses a righteous life. His life is made rich by that radiant promise, 'Lo, I am with you always.' (3) The quarterly visits from Bro. Weems, P. E., are fraught with lasting good. He stands deservedly high, an honor to the office and a preacher of great power. The district is making advances under his wise administration, and so a threefold happiness attaches to the Roxie charge. The editor will have pleasant recollections of McNair Church as having been dedicated by him several years ago, and rejoice with us."

Appeal.

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

I think we are not wasting Scriptures when we use this passage in connection with our appeal for our Organ Fund. "Ask." Pompey said it made all the difference in the world how a man prayed. Said he: "When I ax de Lord to send Pompey a chicken for breakfast, dat prayer nebber whar answered; but when I ask de Lord to send Pompey arter de chicken, dat prayer whar answered next morning, 'fore de sun up—chicken frien' sizz." We've come arter the chicken, and want it in the shape of $1 for our Organ Fund. Enclose $1 in an envelope and address to E. A. Vail, general superintendent and treasurer of the Union Gospel Mission, headquarters 163 Camp street, Bible House, New Orleans.

HOME CIRCLE.

RESIGNATION.

BY HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW.

There is no flock, however watched and tended,
But one dead lamb is there!
There is no fireside, howsoe'er defended,
But has one vacant chair!

The air is full of farewells to the dying,
And mournings for the dead;
The heart of Rachel, for her children crying,
Will not be comforted!

Let us be patient! These severe afflictions
Not from the ground arise,
But oftentimes celestial benedictions
Assume this dark disguise.

We see but dimly through the mists and vapors;
Amid these earthly damps
What seem to us but sad, funeral tapers
May be heaven's distant lamps.

There's no death! What seems so is transition;
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call death.

She is not dead—the child of our affection—
But gone unto that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection,
And Christ himself doth rule.

In that great cloister's stillness and seclusion,
By guardian angels led,
Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution,
She lives, whom we call dead.

Day after day we think what she is doing
In those bright realms of air;
Year after year, her tender steps pursuing,
Behold her grown more fair.

Thus do we walk with her, and keep unbroken
The bond which nature gives,
Thinking that our remembrance, though unspoken,
May reach her where she lives.

Not as a child shall we again behold her;
For when with raptures wild
In our embraces we again unfold her,
She will not be a child;

But a fair maiden, in her Father's mansion,
Clothed with celestial grace,
And beautiful with all the soul's expansion
Shall we behold her face.

And though at times impetuous with emotion
And anguish long suppressed,
The swelling heart heaves moaning like the ocean,
That can not be at rest—

We will be patient, and assuage the feeling
We may not wholly stay;
By silence sanctifying, not concealing,
The grief that must have way.

Religion at Home.

It is laughable to see one hunting high and low for his spectacles when they have only been shoved over his forehead. But it is not laughable to see Christians hunting for what they call opportunities to honor God, while overlooking such opportunities which they carry with them wherever they go. A slovenly carpenter was once heard at a weekly prayer meeting to pray with great fervency for the spread of Christ's cause—a cause which he disgraced and hindered in his sphere every time he stood at his work-bench. When he ended his prayer a hearty "Amen" came from a servant who put her mistress out of temper a hundred times a day by her carelessness. A clerk also was there, who, although he taught a class in the mission school on Sabbath, was always late at his employer's store week-days. He whispered "Amen," too—and meant it so far as he knew himself. A lady hearer, as she listened, resolved to join the church and then went home and found unreasonable fault with her cook. And others also felt warmed to do something for Christ, who never seemed to have thought that religion, like charity, begins at home. The mechanic who is powerful in class meeting and weak at his trade, is no credit to the cause he professes. The servant who drops dishes unfeelingly in the kitchen has her tenderness altogether too much on one side. And it is a poor kind of religion that seeks opportunities to set others straight, but overlooks its own crookedness.—Sunday-School Times.

He who hangs his lamp high to let the light shine around him should not forget to take it down for the daily replenishing.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

If I Were a Girl.

I would take care of my health by living out doors as much as possible, and taking long walks in the sunshine. English girls understand how necessary this is for good complexions and cheerful spirits. Wear simple clothing, that you may climb mountains and breathe freely.

I would secure the best education. Go to college, by all means, if it is possible. Read good books, and thereby become intelligent.

I would cultivate cheerfulness. Discontent soon shows in the face. If you have some disappointments, so do others. If you are cramped for money, be thankful that your lot is no worse than it is. Learn to make the best of things. An unhappy woman is a perpetual cloud in a home. A fretful girl has few friends, and the number lessens year by year.

I would say kind things of others, especially of the girls. A girl who makes unkind remarks about other girls had better be avoided by young men. She will not make an agreeable companion for life.

I would learn how to be self-supporting. Especially in this country, where fortunes change, it is wise for a woman to be able to take care of herself. Helpless women are not a comfort to others, and usually are not to themselves.

I would try to be polite everywhere. True courtesy is more winsome than a pretty face or fine dress. Loud talk or loud dress does not betoken the lady. Be appreciative and sympathetic, and you have two keys which will unlock almost all hearts.

I would learn self-control. To know when to speak, and when to be silent; to have hateful things said about you, and be able to answer pleasantly; to have people confide in you, and be wise enough to keep it locked in your heart; to be in poverty, and not be soured by it; to meet temptation, and be strong before it; to be strong enough to perform any labor or duty which needs to be done—all this shows a noble mastery over self.

I would be punctual. Being late at meals, late at church, or late in meeting engagements, makes unnecessary friction in families. If we are willing to lose valuable time, we have no right to make others lose it. The golden rule of doing unto others as we would that they should do unto us is specially applicable here.—Mrs. Jenness Miller.

Plain Speaking.

There are people who take great credit to themselves for their extreme plainness of speech, which they fancy to be a sign of sincerity. "I say precisely what I mean," one of these persons will calmly tell you, intimating, in most cases, that what she meant was disagreeable and likely to hurt somebody's feelings, but that she had too much strength of mind to hesitate on that account. It never occurs to these well-intentioned, but brusque and overcandid souls, that it is not an absolute necessity always to speak; that there are times when silence is golden.

We are not called upon invariably to pronounce judgment on our fellow-creatures. Often we are not in possession of all the facts in a given case; we do not know the circumstances; we can not accurately discern motives, and our conclusions, being based on imperfect acquaintance, and being formed by fallible minds, are wholly erroneous. This is specially so when we have a grievance, when we think that we have been neglected, when our vanity or our self-love has been wounded. By hasty speech we may become guilty of great injustice; we may plant the seeds of distrust and suspicion, or trample friendship under foot.

There is no insincerity in saying a pleasant thing, for there is fortunately always one point of view from which some pleasant word in justifiable. In that beautiful twelfth chapter of Romans, which formed the basis of a recent lesson in the Sabbath-school, a consecration of our whole selves to God found its natural outcome in a tender and thoughtful altruism. As Christians we are in duty bound to forget ourselves, and to live for and with others, in all gentleness, sympathy and courtesy. "In honor preferring one another!" Can there be a nobler rule for daily life at home and in society?

But the plain-spoken person, who wounds her friend by a calm declaration of what she considers to be her own justifiable complaint, or who criticizes the other's children, or servants, or housekeeping, who comments on the shabbiness of the friend's gown, or the faded hues of the friend's complexion, need not pride herself on her candor. She is simply unbearable and intolerably rude.—Martha McInerny.

EVENING AND MORNING.

A little child knelt down to pray,
And listening, I heard her say:
"My heavenly Father, please to keep Me very safely while I sleep:
Forgive the faults thou'st seen to-day,
And if I wake again, O may
I thank thee from my heart, and try
To please thee always till I die,
For Jesus' sake. Amen."

Then on her pillow soon she laid
Her bright-haired, weary little head;
And when the rosy morning broke,
That happy little heart awoke:
"I thank thee, Father, for thy care;
I know thou heard'st my evening prayer;
Still keep me safe through all this day,
And may I never from thee stray,
For Jesus' sake. Amen."

—Our Little Ones.

It's Very Hard.

"It's very hard to have nothing to eat but porridge when others have every sort of dainty," muttered Charlie, as he sat with his bowl before him.

"It's very hard to have to get up so early these bitter cold mornings, and work hard all day, when others can enjoy themselves without labor. It's very hard to have to trudge along through the snow, while others roll about in their coaches."

"It's a great blessing," said his grandmother, as she sat at her knitting, "to have food when so many are hungry; it's a great blessing to have a roof over our heads when so many are homeless; it's a great blessing to have sight and hearing, and strength for daily labor, when so many are blind, deaf, or suffering."

"Why, grandmother, you seem to think that nothing is hard," said the boy, still in a grumbling tone.

"No, Charlie; there is one thing that I think is very hard."

"What's that?" cried Charlie, who thought that at last his grandmother had found some cause for complaint.

"Why, boy, I think that heart is very hard that is not thankful for so many blessings."

The Ideal Home.

The ideal home is the one that ministers to the needs of all those who make it. It is the place where sympathy, interest, intelligent understanding of even the moods of its circle, inspiration, and, above all, repose, are found. The ideal home ministers intelligently to the needs of the spiritual and intelligent nature, as well as the physical. Its development unto perfection depends on the combined efforts of its responsible members. The ideal home was never attained by the efforts of one, but by the co-operation of all. This does not mean that each shall fit himself into a mold. A perfect home is like a perfect mosaic, where each part, with its individual difference, fits in its place to make the perfect design.

The corner-stone of the ideal home is love; it is love that is its life; love is its inspiration, its defense, its crown of victory. Sorrow, defeat, shame itself, are vanquished where love has its perfect work. "O world, where is thy sting? O poverty, where is thy victory?" is the pæan of him who is sheltered in the love that makes the ideal home.—Exchange.

Cherish Your Girlhood.

Dear girls, don't be so often wishing you were grown-up women that you will neglect your girlhood. In the rush and hurry of these fast times there is danger that you will reach and strain after "young ladyhood" too much.

Be girls awhile yet; tender, joyous, loving, obedient and industrious. Womanhood, with its privilege and power, its burdens and its trials, will come soon enough. On this point one has said:

"Wait patiently, my children, through the whole limit of your girlhood. Go not after womanhood; let it come to you. Keep out of public view. Cultivate refinement and modesty. The cares and responsibilities of life will come soon enough. When they come you will meet them, I trust, as true women should. But, oh, do not be so unwise as to throw away your girlhood. Rob not yourself of this beautiful season, which wisely spent will brighten all your future life."—Intelligencer.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. F. B. Ormond, P. C., July 25: "The Lord is wonderfully blessing his people at Union Ridge Church, on North Kemper circuit. The power of the Holy Ghost has been felt in every service, and in many services was felt as never before at this place. To God be the glory. Will give further news later."

Rev. O. L. Savage, Indianola, Miss., July 30: "I have had 22 accessions to our church up to date in my meeting. We are very much rejoiced. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney was with us, and we both did the preaching and praying. My people were very much edified and built up under the clear, strong preaching of Bro. Gladney."

Rev. J. N. Tucker, P. C.: "On Thursday evening, July 19, 1894, we closed a meeting of twelve days at McNair, Miss. Results: 17 applications, 17 regenerations and sanctifications, and 1 backslider reclaimed—9 of whom were baptized upon their profession of faith. Almost every penitent was regenerated. Worldliness in every form was severely denounced and righteousness extolled. Bros. W. M. Stevens, W. W. Simmons and G. D. Ellis rendered valuable services."

F. N. Sweeney, L. D., Grand Chenier, La.: "I began a meeting at Bib Pecan, July 4, preaching twice a day, except Saturday and Sunday I preached three times a day, which resulted in 3 accessions to the church and about 15 conversions. God manifested his power in convicting sinners, among them several Catholics. One Catholic lady joined the church. Thank God some of them are getting their eyes open! The eleven o'clock service on Sunday will be long remembered by all. Glory to God for such a manifestation of his power."

Rev. P. D. Hardin, P. C., Pelahatchie, Miss., July 27: "We closed quite a successful meeting at Clarksburg last night, probably the best meeting that has ever been held at that place. It was indeed a gracious revival. Rev. R. F. Witt, of the Lake circuit, was with me three days. He delivered the message of life in its power and purity. The visible results are as follows: about 15 conversions and reclamations, 14 children and 21 adults baptized, 27 received into the church; prayer meeting to be organized, and several promised to erect family altars. Clarksburg was a few years ago one of the most wicked places in this part of the State, but where sin abounded grace does much more abound. Thank God for victory."

Rev. J. H. Evans, Raleigh, Miss., July 17: "We have closed a very interesting meeting at this place. There were about ten or twelve conversions; over sixty were blessed. In fact, we had a gracious revival. The great God of heaven was praised aloud by many in the public audience, and pledges were made by many to live a better Christian life. We received a class of five young men and young ladies, and a beautiful class they were. Just entering into manhood and womanhood, intelligent as they are, we look for them to be a great blessing to the church and the town. We also baptized three infants. Bro. J. T. Nicholson did the most of the preaching, and did it well, for which we give him thanks, but we give God the glory. Pray for us."

J. W. Burton, L. D., Ramsy station, Ala., July 20: "After a ride of about twenty miles on the morning of July 15, I arrived at Center Ridge, where Bro. D. L. Kirkland, L. P., with the assistance of his wife, had been for some days engaged in a meeting. We continued until Wednesday night, putting in the strongest licks we knew. There was seven or eight conversions and reclamations, with many claiming blessings. One was baptized and joined the church at that place, where we had just reorganized a little band to fight the Christian warfare. At this place we once had a little band, but on account of the come-outs (and these, too, of the best material) they were so weakened that they failed to get preaching from a regular pastor, and consequently were not recognized. We hope much good has been accomplished. To God be all the praise. May God bless and prosper the ADVOCATE!"

THE SCHOOL BOY

—is often a sufferer from headache. The seat of sick headache is not in the brain, for if you regulate the stomach and bowels you'll cure it. Too much brain-work and brain-tire brings on a rush of blood to the head with headache, dizziness or "nose bleed."

Miss BERTHA WOLFE.

Miss BERTHA WOLFE, of Dayton, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., writes: "I suffered from loss of appetite, constipation, neuralgia, and great weakness, and had terrible attacks of sick headache very frequently; also nose bleed. My health was so poor that I was not able to go to school for two years. I took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and in a short time I was strong and well. Many friends are taking your medicines, seeing what they have done for me."

SMITH—LUCILE C. SMITH, daughter of O. H. and Lucile Hines Smith, was born in Meridian, Miss., March 17, 1889. She died in Gloster, Miss., Nov. 1, 1893, at the home of her grandfather, Rev. Wm. B. Hines. Lucile was beautiful in person, precocious in intellect, and the centre of attraction and the joyous sunshine in the triple family circle where she moved. But this charming jewel was plucked from the crown of that triple family circle, and left a grievous heart sorrow in its place.

"Shi we think of the friends over there,
Of the songs that they breathe on the air,
In their home in the palace of God,"

And wait to rejoin them in that beautiful world and its delectable psalms of praise "unto him that loved us," etc.

We have adopted the following beautiful poem as descriptive of the picture left upon our minds and hearts of the character and sickness and death of this now little angel girl:

"Smooth the braids of her silken hair
On her queenly brow with tender care;
Gather the robe in a final fold
Around the form that will not grow old;
Lay on her bosom, as pure as snow,
The fairest, sweetest flowers that blow;
Kiss her and leave her, your heart's delight,
In dreamless peace Lucile will sleep to-night.

"A shadowy gleam of life-light lies
Around the lids of her slumbrous eyes,
And her lips are closed, as in fond delay
Of the loving words she had to say;
But her gentle heart forgot to beat,
And from dainty head to dainty feet
She is strangely quiet, cold and white;
The fever is gone. Lucile will sleep to-night.

"Put by her toys and empty chair,
Fold up the garments she used to wear,
Let down the curtains and close the door,
Lucile will need the garish light no more;
For the task assigned her under the sun
Is finished now and the guerdon won;
Tenderly kiss her, put out the light
And leave her alone. Lucile will sleep to night

"O blessed sleep, that will not break
For tears nor prayers nor love's sweet sake!
O perfect rest, that knows no pain,
No throb, no thrill of heart or brain!
O life sublime, beyond all speech,
That only the pure, through dying, teach!
God understands, and his ways are right.
Bid his beloved a long good-night.

"Weep for the days that will come no more,
For the sunbeam flown from hearth and door,
For a missing step, for a nameless grace
Of a tender voice and a loving face;
But not for the soul whose goal is won,
Whose infinite joy is just begun;
Not for the spirit enrobed in light
And crowned where the angels are to-night."

Gloster, Miss.

LANSDALL—WILLIAM LANSDALL was born in Spilsby, Lincolnshire, England, July 1, 1833, and passed away June 23, 1894. He came to America in 1866.

He was not a Christian till late in life, but was honest, and, as I read in his discharge from the army of England, of which he was an officer, "character good," I judge he was never otherwise. Bro. Lansdall was converted in 1890 under Bro. Sullivan's ministry. I never saw a more consecrated man nor one with firmer faith, and, best of all, he died "rejoicing in hope of the glory of God." His last words were a sermon to the world, and his last song, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

We will miss our brother so much at Bethel Church, but we all feel that he has joined a church that knows no dissolution. He leaves a wife only to our care. We will always cherish the mound beneath the beech-trees in Bethel Cemetery that marks his last resting-place on earth as sacred. The influence of his life lingers with us, wooing us to meet him where parting is no more. May we meet him!

His pastor, T. A. LUSTER.

COX—MARVIN LEE, son of W. W. and Julia Cox, was born in Newton county, Miss., Sept. 18, 1873; died, of typhoid fever, at Hickory, Miss., while attending school, June 3, 1894.

Marvin joined the Methodist Church in 1891. He was a boy of very decided religious habits, and was known as one of the best of young men. His death was lamented by all who knew him. "But God's ways are not as our ways," and are always right. Marvin's death was triumphant, glorious. He exhorted us all to meet him in heaven. It was joyous to be there, and witness the power of grace to save to the uttermost. His work ended soon; he rests. "How peaceful the slumber, how happy the waking." "We sorrow not as those who have no hope." Jesus saves. A full house attended the funeral. He was buried in Spring Hill Cemetery. L. P. MEADORS, Pastor.

WIGGINS—Whereas, Our heavenly Father has removed from our midst, and from a life of usefulness in the community and church, our beloved sister, Miss LILLY WIGGINS; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we mourn deeply the loss of our sister from the church and Sabbath-school.

Resolved, That we bear testimony to her fidelity and worth as a Christian, and we are assured that after a life of usefulness here she has entered into the reward of heaven.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved mother and relatives, and beg them not to weep as those who have no hope.

MRS. M. J. HARVEY,
For Committee.

BROWN—HENRY J. BROWN, son of Tamberlin J. and M. Alice Brown, was born near Sallis, Miss., Nov. 26, 1868, and died June 28, 1891. He was the oldest child of his parents, and after the death of his father, in 1885, he assisted his widowed mother in rearing the younger children. He was taken violently sick on June 26, and grew rapidly worse till the end came.

Henry was so gentle and true in disposition that he entwined himself around the hearts of all who knew him. The deep interest manifested in him during his short illness showed how much he was loved by all the community. As a son and brother, he was obedient and loving. His intellect was very bright; but with it was blended so much modesty that the excellences of mind and heart were best known by the loved ones at home. There the gems of his noble life shone with a brightness unperceived by the world. Sad indeed is home without him. We weep to know that he is forever gone.

His remains were laid to rest in the family graveyard, the writer officiating. To the deeply afflicted family we say: "Be resigned. God knows what is best and has done all for good." "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!"

W. D. MCCULLOUGH.

BRELAND—On Tuesday, July 11, at 6:15 P. M., the spirit of little MELLEN, infant son of Rev. R. A. Breland and wife, of DeKalb, took its flight from this world to a brighter.

This sweet little babe, the joy and pride of a mother's love and of a father's affections, lacked only four days being a year old. For several days previous to his death little Mellen suffered intense pain. Oh, how hard it is for us to give up our loved ones, but how sweet to know that some bright day we will meet again nevermore to part! Weep not, dear parents, for your loss is only little Mellen's eternal gain. One less on earth, one more in heaven. Mellen is waiting and watching for you now.

On Wednesday afternoon a large concourse of sympathizing friends followed the remains to the DeKalb Cemetery, where a short funeral service was conducted by this writer, and then we laid him away to await the resurrection morn.

To-day little Mellen is around the throne of God. God help the parents to sorrow not as those who have no hope, but to have the assurance every day that they will some day meet their babe in heaven.

F. B. ORMOND.
DeKalb, Miss.

CARAWAY—Died, at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. S. W. Monroe, MRS. ELIZABETH B. CARAWAY, aged sixty-five years two months and twenty-nine days. She was born in Perry county, Miss., and moved to Newton county, Miss., when quite young. She was a daughter of Mr. John Wall, who was one of the early settlers of this county. On Dec. 31, 1844, she was married to Mr. James E. Caraway, with whom she lived until nearly five years ago, when he preceded her to the spirit-land.

Mrs. Caraway was the mother of eleven children, ten of whom still live to mourn their loss. She was for a long time a professor of religion, and had connection with the Methodists, among whom she lived a consistent life. A devoted wife and mother, a consistent Christian, a good neighbor and friend to all, she has gone to her reward; therefore, loved ones, do not weep, for your loss is her gain. May the Lord comfort all her loved ones!

S. F. EASTERLING.

PURVIS—Little VERNON, infant son of Joseph A. and Mettie D. Purvis, was born Nov. 30, 1892; departed this life, after a very brief illness of pneumonia, Jan. 31, 1894, aged one year and three months.

Thus one of the sweet buds of earth God has plucked for the skies. Sweet little Vernon was too pure for this world. He has gone to dwell with Jesus, who has said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Papa and mama, weep not for your little darling. He is at rest with Jesus, and watching and waiting to welcome you to that beautiful shore, where there will be no more sad partings, where we shall kneel at the snow white throne and cast our glittering crowns at Jesus' feet. Little Vernon leaves a fragrance that will sweeten our thoughts and hopes of heaven. May God's blessing rest on the bereaved parents and children in their affliction!

COUSIN ELLA.

WISE—FANNIE WISE was born in Talladega county, Ala., Dec. 2, 1854; moved to Louisiana, 1871, and died May 30, 1894. She was married to A. J. Wise, Jan. 9, 1887.

Sister Fannie was a member of the Methodist Church, and lived a consistent member until her death. From the beginning of her sickness she was conscious that she would not get well, but every word and act indicated that she was prepared for the change. Sister Fannie was a model Christian, a devoted wife, a kind sister. She leaves a husband and one little girl and a mother and three brothers and four sisters to mourn her loss; but they should rejoice when they remember that their loss is her eternal gain. Dear friends, weep not for dear Fannie, but prepare to meet her in the land of the blessed, where parting is no more.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1039 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

You can't stop a vile man's tongue, but you can stop your own ears.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hafflefinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Dr. Albert B. Miles, the house surgeon of the Charity Hospital in this city, died on Aug 5.

The River and Harbor Appropriation bill was reported from the conferees to both Houses on Aug. 3, and agreed to. As finally passed the bill carries $11,468,180, an increase of $1,949,491 from the House bill.

The Chicago grand jury reports to the court that gambling goes on in that city wide open, and evidently under protection, but it makes no indictments, for the reason, as it alleges, that no convictions are possible.

The leaders of the Cripple Creek strikers, for whom warrants are in the hands of the officers, have organized themselves into a regular band of banditti, it is said, and have taken refuge in the mountains, whence they make robbing raids on the surrounding country.

The usual Sunday quiet of the Capitol Building at Washington was broken on Aug. 5 by the assembling of the tariff conferees at 2:30 o'clock. The meeting lasted until six o'clock, and was marked with more than the usual secrecy. The discussion again turned on sugar, iron ore and coal.

The State election in Alabama was held on Aug. 6. A full vote was polled. Returns from most of the counties show that Col. Wm. C. Oates, for governor, and the rest of the Democratic ticket, have been elected by a good majority over the populite conglomerate ticket, headed by Reuben F. Kolb for governor.

There emanated from Washington, a few days ago, a story to the effect that the United States had entered into an agreement with Germany, Great Britain and Italy to take possession of the treaty ports of China and Japan, and maintain their neutrality during the war, preventing the belligerent powers from in any way interfering with the trade of those ports. This story has been met with a prompt and unqualified denial by the State Department.

The conferees on the Tariff bill are maintaining an ominous silence on the question of the bounty on this year's crop of sugar, and it would appear that they were expecting to get along without the support of the senators from Louisiana. Notwithstanding the rumors that the conferees are about to reach an agreement, the probability is that the only practicable solution of the difficulty will be the acceptance by the House of the Senate amendments.

The Executive Committee of the Citizens' Protective Association of this city, has got down to work. The matters first taken up are the impeachment proceedings against City Hall councilmen and officials, and the garbage job. The committee will prepare the necessary complaints or petitions required by law, and will, as soon as they shall be completed, hand them to District Attorney Butler, who will then move for impeachment and removal in the Civil District Court. Of course, criminal proceedings will go on against indicted parties.

An open declaration of war on the American Railway Union was made, on Aug. 3, by the Pullman Palace Car Company. It was followed by an official announcement that under no circumstances would the company give employment to labor agitators, members of the Pullman strike committee or any others who had taken an active part in persuading the workmen to strike or encouraging them to stay out. The force of men at the Pullman shops on Aug. 3 was 552, and the number is increasing daily. No demonstrations are made by the strikers, and no violence is offered the men at work.

FOREIGN.

Emperor William will spend this week in England. The most extensive arrangements have been made on behalf of the Queen for the reception and entertainment of the Emperor, her grandson.

It is said that the Chilian minister of finance, replying to the government of Mexico, declines to join in the proposed monetary conference to establish a rate of value between gold and silver. The Chilian government expresses the opinion that without the co-operation of the United States and European nations such a conference would fail to accomplish any good purpose.

Caserio Santo, assassin of President Carnot, was tried for the crime at Lyons, on Aug. 3, and condemned to death.

Serious riots have occurred at Kobe, Japan, and Taku, China. At the latter place the Chinese openly insulted the members of the Japanese embassy who were returning to Japan.

The entrance to the port of Bluefields had been seized by 300 troops, under the command of the President of Nicaragua. Marines from the American and British warships have landed for the purpose of protecting the interests of the United States and Great Britain.

A portion of the Japanese troops at Seoni marched against a much superior force of Chinese entrenched at Shan Yang, on July 29. A battle ensued, and after heavy fighting the Chinese were put completely to route, and a large number of prisoners and munitions of war were captured by the Japanese.

Home and Abroad.

It is the duty of everyone, whether at home or traveling for pleasure or business, to equip himself with the remedy which will keep up strength and prevent illness, and cure such ills as are liable to come upon all in everyday life. For instance, Hood's Sarsaparilla as a general tonic, and to keep the blood pure and less liable to absorb the germs of diseases, will be well nigh invaluable. Change of drinking water often causes serious trouble. A teaspoonful of Hood's Sarsaparilla in a tumbler of water will prevent the water having any injurious effect.

Acting under instructions from the Executive Committee of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Southern Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. J. W. Bachman, its representative in Washington, has called on Secretary Gresham and the Japanese charge d'affairs to ask that measures be taken to protect the missionaries of that church in the east. Secretary Gresham told Mr. Bachman that he did not think that there was an immediate danger to the missionaries, but that they would be protected.

It Never Fails.

Harris & Buquo, Erin, Tenn., manufacturers of the celebrated Erin Lime, have in their employ, in the various departments of their business, several hundred men. The firm write to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, in great praise of Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, and say they have cured four cases with it, and that it has not failed in a single instance. The remedy always gives satisfaction. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., and they will ship to your address two large bottles—a month's treatment—by return express. Agents wanted.

Where there's so much Smoke, there must be some fire. So likewise, when Pearline has had such wonderful success, from the very start, there must be good grounds for it.

You won't have to be told what they are, if you're posted on washing compounds. Millions of women have used hundreds of millions of packages of Pearline, and this is why they want it: For making washing easy and at the same time keeping it absolutely safe, nothing has ever been found that can equal Pearline. Quality accounts for Pearline's success. And its success accounts for all its imitations. Only the best thing of its kind is ever imitated.

ALWAYS refuse imitations. 371 JAMES PYLE, New York.

Tested by a Bank Account.

There is a story of a printer who, when his fellow-workmen went out to drink beer during working hours, put in the bank the exact amount which he would have spent if he had gone out to drink with them. He kept to his resolution for five years. He then examined his bank account, and found that he had on deposit $521.85. In the five years he had not lost a day from ill-health. Four or five of his fellow-workmen had, in the meantime, become drunkards, were worthless as workmen, and were discharged. The water-drinker bought a printing office, went on enlarging his business, and, twenty years from the time he began to put by his money, was worth one hundred thousand dollars.—Exchange.

THE GOLDEN SIDE.

BY CHARLES MACKEY.

There is many a rest in the road of life,
If we would only stop to take it;
And many a tone from the better land,
If the querulous heart would make it.
To the soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the Winter's storm prevaileth.

Better hope, though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through
When the ominous clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning,
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crown,
Or the miser's hoarded treasure;
It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayer to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And do God's will with a cheerful heart,
And hands that are ready and willing,
Than to snap the delicate, minute thread
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame heaven for tangled ends,
And sit and grieve and wonder.

Vicksburg District Conference.

Saturday morning, July 28, 1894, the Vicksburg District Sunday-school Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Harriston, Miss. Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., P. E., called the Conference to order, and the day was spent in discussing the following subjects: "The Bible in the Sunday-school," "The Office and Work of the Sunday-school Superintendent," "The Qualification and Work of Sunday-school Teachers," "How to Secure the Attendance of Our Young People on the Sabbath-school," "The Sunday-school Library," "The Epworth League," "Education by the Church." Those appointed to lead in these discussions did their part well, except one or two, who were absent.

Rev. W. B. Lewis, of Natchez, preached the opening sermon at 11 A. M. on "The Religious Training of Our Children." If parents would only follow the instruction of that most excellent discourse, homes would become happier, our civil government stronger and purer, and heaven more thickly populated.

An account of the Sunday services has been given by the editor of this ADVOCATE, who spent Sunday and Monday with us. It was an occasion of regret, Doctor, that you did not favor us with a sermon or an address. The interest of the ADVOCATE, however, was not overlooked. Rev. W. B. Lewis and Dr. Weems both urged the importance of the ministers' working for our Conference organ.

The regular business of the District Conference was taken up Monday. Only three of the pastors were absent, and two of these sent in their reports.

Notwithstanding the cry of "hard times," all the brethren had cheerful hearts, and seemed to be well taken care of. The reports from all over the district indicated that the revival fire is burning, and its influence felt in the churches. Everything indicated an advance movement.

Brethren, let us keep the fire burning, and press the battle till the shout of victory shall be heard in every church in the district.

"Stand up! stand up for Jesus!
Ye soldiers of the cross;
Lift high his royal banner,
It must not suffer loss:
From victory unto victory
His army he shall lead,
Till every foe is vanquished,
And Christ is Lord, indeed."

The following visiting brethren were present: Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; Rev. R. G. Porter, of the North Mississippi Conference; Rev. W. H. Dominick, Conference colporter; Rev. J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth Female College; Rev. T. B. Holloman, president of East Mississippi Female College; Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., agent of Millsaps College.

The election of delegates to the Annual Conference resulted as follows: T. A. Holloman, Rev. J. B. Fearn, John A. Grice and R. C. Kelley. Alternates: T. B. Johnston, J. D. Ireland.

The Conference adjourned sine die to meet at Fayette, Miss.

Resolutions of thanks were extended the good people of Harriston for their kind hospitality.

I failed to state that the religious feature of the Conference was not neglected. There were two services each day: 11 A. M. and 8:15 P. M.

The people of Harriston showed their appreciation of good preaching by furnishing large congregations at each service.

W. H. LEWIS, Sec.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY-SCHOOL LITERATURE.

The committee on improvement of our Sunday-school literature have had under consideration the paper referred to us, and would recommend:

1. That the lesson text be left out of the Magazine and Lesson Quarterlies, except as it may be necessary for exposition in the notes, so as to compel teachers and pupils to bring their Bibles to the Sunday-school.

2. That the number of questions in the Magazine and Quarterlies be reduced, and that they be made suggestive rather than exhaustive, so as to facilitate original questions by teachers.

3. That the questions in the Junior Quarterly and in the Illustrated Lesson Paper should be made more simple and better adapted to the comprehension of children.

4. That the Little People be discontinued altogether, and that the catechism be substituted, as suggested in the paper of Dr. Kirkland submitted to us.

5. That the Sunday-school Visitor should be better adapted to the instruction of the children of the church by giving brief biographical sketches of prominent Bible characters, and of prominent characters of our own church, and sketches of our church history, and statements of our doctrine and polity.

W. B. LEWIS,
For the Committee.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PERIODICALS.

Your Committee on Periodicals desire to submit the following:

THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

We congratulate Dr. Hoss upon his re-election as editor of our general organ. He gives us a bright and newsy paper. We commend its editorial management, and recommend the Advocate to all our people. No preacher and no intelligent layman can afford to be without it.

THE REVIEW.

The agents of our Publishing House, in their report to the last General Conference, showed an increase in subscribers and a decrease in expense of publishing the Review. It is believed that if the subscription list were increased to double of its present number, the Review would be self-sustaining. This is a consummation to be hoped for. Our great church should have a great Review. If every preacher in our church would send it one subscriber (and why should it not be done?), the Review would be placed upon a self-sustaining basis, and be given new life. Dr. Tigert deserves our help.

THE EPWORTH ERA.

This is a new enterprise in our church. The young people's paper; the organ of the Epworth League, an institution of our church. Its honored editor is a Mississippian. We bespeak for it a wide circulation. In clubs of twenty it can be had for sixty cents.

THE NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Under the present management the ADVOCATE is paying its way, incurring no risk. It is prospering, though the subscription list has been curtailed, and now numbers about 5,500. There has been a general improvement under the present management, we think; and that there can be a further improvement is also evident. Without appearing critical, we would suggest that if our ADVOCATE had more home correspondence, editorial correspondence from the field, making the paper appear more like home property, there would be given to it a zest and a freshness which, perhaps, would increase the subscription list and get a stronger hold upon our people. We would suggest to our people to take our own ADVOCATE, preferring it to all others, and not be induced by agents or evangelists to take a paper not our organ, unless they are able to take more than one. The spirit of trampling upon our own paper to build up others not our own—private enterprises—is to be deplored, and no preacher can justify himself in recommending any paper, especially those of doubtful enterprise, of doubtful orthodoxy, in preference to our own.

Respectfully submitted.

THOS. A. HOLLOMAN,

Half Way, without Starting.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER, D. D.

The action of the late Legislature of Louisiana in providing for the cure of drunkards is a long stride for a State whose laws are openly violated by the tongha of one of her cities, and the judge who sought to maintain the dignity of Statehood openly impeached, or at least drawn before the high court of impeachment and left to the course of events. It seems to be pretty well settled that a certain stage of drunkenness is, or becomes, a disease, requiring medicinal treatment for its cure. Whether or not this is true, I am unable to know except as from hearsay. And "they"—the other "wise men"—say this is not true. However, the "edict is gone forth," and the State proposes, in some way—I know not how; I have not seen the "Act"—to cure all these hundreds of drunkards whom it has caused to be diseased with "alcoholism."

This is right. At first I thought otherwise. The State of Louisiana has authorized some men to disease other men with this dread malady called alcoholism, and in right ought to cure them at her own expense. Every keeper of a saloon is in a business authorized and sanctioned by the State. None can pursue this calling but by the State's authority. If these saloons do not spread alcoholism as a pestilence, it can not be spread. There is nothing else to spread it but these saloons. The State has pocketed hundreds of thousands of dollars out of this disease-breeding business. Now comes the State, and by act of the Legislature says her people are diseased by her consent and with her connivance. Yes, diseased with alcoholism, inoculated into them by authority of the State. But, hold; I did not do it. There are many who protested against this business from the start. These should not be taxed to pay for the cure. It is not their damage, and they should not be required to repair it. The people who made all these men sick, who are to be cured at public expense, are the law makers and the saloon keepers, and they should pay the bills. Bear this in mind—law makers and saloon keepers did it! While these destroyers of health were making and executing laws to disease the bodies of men, there were wives and mothers at home weeping and praying over the ruin these men were accomplishing. To cure these poor, diseased people is half the battle, half way to sobriety—one of two necessary steps to prohibition; but it does not even start in that direction. Experience has shown that these inebriates, when cured, stay cured no longer than they stay away from the cause of their disease. Hence, after the expense of the cure, when the patients return to their former chums, and run up against the cause of their disease, the malady breaks out again, and they must be again cured. There is no end to inebriety, but a fearful strain on the coffers of the State is necessarily perpetual under the present order of things. Without a change, the scheme is impractical and visionary.

First. It says to young men: "Go on, sow your wild oats, be drunkards; and when you go down to the dogs, the State will take you up and make men of you, free of cost to yourselves."

Second. It takes my money to repair a wrong which I did not do, but tried to prevent the doing of it.

Third. It sells to the saloon keeper for one hundred dollars the right to disease as many men as he can, and then takes a thousand dollars of other people's money to cure these men whom it has caused to be sick.

The other step? It is this: Quit making drunkards. Do not allow any man to make drunkards. It will not be sufficient to cure, but it will help. Take the revenue of the liquor traffic for this purpose—every dollar on hand. If the saloons average one case of alcoholism per annum—and only one—it will just about make expenses meet. Then we, who are opposed to saloons, will have to help pay for the squalls and brawls, with all their incidental damages. That will be enough for us. "Take the saloon license fees to cure the victims." This must be our watchword. It is just and right before God and men.

But that next step. This is not the full stride—it is merely tentative. Stop the issuance of licenses! Give no other mortal authority to make drunkards. It is poor hygiene to try to cure diseases without removing the cause of such disease. Stop making drunkards, and cure those you have. Then you will have reached the goal of Statehood, and challenged the admiration of all good men, and expurgated your sins, and hidden your shame, and condoned your awful wrong.

A Loan Fund Started.

A week or two ago I published an article in this paper under the caption, "Wanted, an Education." The gist of that article was to inform the readers of this paper that a young preacher, who attended Centenary College last year, and who was unable to return without pecuniary assistance, desired me to borrow one hundred dollars to help him through another session. The call was made for this money through this paper. I expected it would be answered, but I was much surprised to find the answer coming from an unexpected quarter. I know an old gentleman, a Methodist, who has "lots of money" and no children, and I expected he would answer; but he did not. I know an old Methodist lady who is reputed to be rich, and I thought she would answer; but her reply has not come. But the answer has come, and the needy young preacher has been informed that he can return to Centenary and take another session.

The call has been more than answered. The article mentioned above caught the eye and engaged the thought and was the burden of the prayers of a young friend of mine, and the result is, that he gives to the college a sum of money, the interest on which is to go to pay the traveling expenses and the board of one preacher at Centenary a year. His first impulse was to give the one hundred dollars; but then the thought came, Why not make it perpetual? The more he thought and prayed, the more feasible it looked, until the thing was done. So now we have a loan fund, the interest on which will pay the expenses of a young preacher for a year at Centenary. Now, why may not the friends of our young preachers add to this loan fund, and thus secure the education of other young preachers? Think about it, reader, and write to me, and I will explain matters fully.

In my account of the doings of the Shreveport District Conference, I neglected to mention a generous act done. Through the instrumentality of Bros. Joyner and Rickey, the Shreveport District Conference was induced to make provision to help Bro. Bogan, of Cane River circuit, through next session at Centenary. That is a commendable example. As hereafter preachers are to be licensed by the District Conference, why should not the District Conference make provision for the education of those licensed, when they need it? Let the brethren all think of that, and make preparation for it. It is useless these days to send forth uneducated men to feed the flock and win sinners to Christ.

Now, one word to the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference. Bro. Peter James has informed me that he will pay all the expenses at Centenary College of any boy you will select. So, brethren beloved, put your heads together and choose your boy, and send him along in time for our opening day, Sept. 5.

And now let me say to all: Hereafter my address is,

Ladies' Industrial School.

During the past few years in Japan there has been a decided reaction against mission schools for girls on the ground that they were educating their pupils away from their homes and social life, instead of filling them for their future positions as wives and mothers. The Kobe Ladies' Industrial School was organized, about four years ago, by Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Lambuth to meet this objection. Its work is along purely Japanese lines and embraces the ordinary branches of a Japanese education, Japanese sewing, cooking, etiquette and the other necessary items in the equipment of a Japanese lady. To these can be added a little English and music, if they are wanted. The Bible is taught daily, and the boarding pupils are required to attend Sunday-school and church. The course is three years, and at its close, after due examinations, they are regularly graduated and diplomas are granted.

Until a year ago Sister Lambuth managed the school and met all of its expenses out of private funds; but since her return to the United States, a part of the expenses, about $15 per month, has come out of the mission funds. The work has been most satisfactory and the results have been very gratifying. A number of the students have been converted and joined the church. This has been the record for the past two or three years. As the school draws its patronage from families outside of the church, a number of houses have been entered through its agency that otherwise would not have been touched.

The work has been much hindered in accomplishing its full results by deficient appliances and the want of a much-needed building. These we hope soon to secure. Sister Lambuth has been authorized by the Bishop in charge of the mission to collect the means for providing them. With a suitable house and its furnishings, and with Sister Lambuth at the head of the school, there is no reason why this work should not become one of our most efficient agencies in this land. I have great faith in the Ladies' Industrial School, and I expect for it a useful and prosperous future.

[The foregoing satisfactory account of the Kobe Industrial School is given by Rev. W. E. Towson, presiding elder of the Kobe district. We trust the friends who are so kindly endeavoring to secure funds for erecting the above-mentioned building may be encouraged to persevere until their efforts are crowned with success.]

Our Missionary Work.

For several reasons this subject should be brought prominently before the church at this time. The fact that we are passing through a period of the greatest financial stringency known to the people of this generation is a strong reason why we should give the greater attention to this department of our work. The command of our Lord to preach the gospel to all nations and to every creature is not confined to any special branch of the church, nor to any peculiar financial condition, but to the whole church and to all conditions. It is a fact that the period of the greatest activity in sending the gospel to the destitute nations, in the history of the church, was at a time of the greatest poverty and depression through which the cause of Christ has passed. No one can read what the early church did in this direction, and not be impressed that the same amount of zeal and liberality on the part of the church of to-day would sure bring every nation of earth and every creature under the obligation of accepting or rejecting salvation, and thus speedily bring to an end the mission of the gospel unto man.

But why are we not thus active and earnest to-day? It is not that the spirituality of the church of to-day is less pure and full of love for Christ and for humanity than it was in the times to which I refer. Were I to assume this to be the reason, my own knowledge of persons and of facts would convict me as a pessimist. But the real cause is in the fact that we have unwisely divorced Christ and Christian duty from our well-being in temporal matters. Politicians and demagogues have so long proclaimed one and another cause for our woes that even Christian people have come to think that prosperity and adversity comes and goes as their theory of government prevails or is defeated. If this is true, then neither the people nor the nation is dependent upon the blessings of God for temporal prosperity.

But the Bible does not so teach, and surely the church should accept its teachings on this, as on all other matters of interest, as the absolute truth. God made the people of the old times understand this, and the record is left for our instruction. In Joel ii, 25, are these strong and practical words: "And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the canker-worm, and the caterpillar, and the palmer-worm, my great army which I sent among you." Nor is Mal. iii, 8-12, less emphatic and clear on this subject. It was the full recognition of this teaching of God that so greatly accentuated the love and zeal of the early church for a lost world, and that we need to impress upon our people at this time. Wherever the apostles preached, and whenever they wrote, this was as clearly taught and enforced as a matter of faith and duty as was any other service we render to God. The student of the New Testament can not have failed to notice this fact, and to be impressed by it. In II. Cor. ix it is so clearly taught, that if it did not appear elsewhere in the New Testament, we could not doubt the truth of this doctrine. But when it appears elsewhere and everywhere, throughout the whole Bible, should we not be careful to observe and act upon the truth? There is the greatest danger that the church will excuse herself for the neglect of duty at a time of distress, and when only duty, fully and faithfully performed, can relieve our trouble. By all means, let us do our duty at any and all cost to ourselves, that God may fulfill the exceeding great and precious promises he has made to us in his Word.

And another reason why we should be diligent in pressing this cause just now is the accepted fact that in all our missions the labors of the years gone by are just now ripening for a bountiful harvest. I have been a close student of this branch of work for twenty years, and with the greatest anxiety I have watched for a development that would answer to the fullest: What are you doing with our money? Where is the return for all we have paid and hoped? None but those who have been called upon to answer these questions know how perplexing has been the task to show that out of the "day of small things" comes the greater, and that these days of preparation will soon show that not only the wisdom of the church was in the things being done, but that God was also in them. But, thank God! the harvesting time has at last come. I have never read of so large and so universal success as that which came from every field the past year. Let us not lose the vantage for which we have so long toiled and prayed by any failing off of the funds for this work. Let every preacher and layman come to the help of the Lord in this day of victory with a shout and with great liberality, and we shall see the salvation of God in all the dark lands of earth.

In the Living Present.

War is raging in Asia between China and Japan. The latter is the aggressor. Corea, a dependency of China, was the ostensible cause of the bloody business. Japan insisted that China did not maintain its sovereignty over the peninsula, but permitted the establishment of a semi-independent government, a la Bulgaria in Europe. This Japan would not permit.

Japan assumes the attitude to Corea as does Great Britain to Egypt. Turkey had failed to manage Egypt satisfactorily. England stepped in and created order out of chaos. Will the Japanese do the same? Turkey was bankrupt and imbecile. But China is a land of wealth and of inexhaustible resources.

Yes, Japan has achieved success. The King of Corea is its prisoner. Hundreds of Chinese queues have trailed the sand; but the end is not yet. It is stated that Japan preferred this foreign war to internal dissensions which were rife and threatened a general upheaval. Likewise did Napoleon III., who precipitated the German-French war, as, according to his opinion, the only means of maintaining himself in power. The game proved disastrous. Will Japan fare better?

The King of Japan, together with his government, has forfeited the confidence of the native priesthood and the common people by permitting foreign money, skill and influence to exert themselves over-much. In fact, they are devoted to progress, to modern civilization. But their opponents among their own people are very numerous and powerful.

The European powers are more or less interested; but only Russia and England directly. The former finds its interests wrapped up with Japan; the latter with China. Meantime the missionary cause in the two countries will suffer injury.

A few months ago the Czarowitz of Russia was betrothed to Princess Alix of Hesse, the sister-in-law to Prince Henry, only brother of Emperor William of Germany. It having, however, appeared that the young lady is sickly, even consumptive, the old Czar has endeavored to annul the engagement; but his wife, together with her son, the Czarowitz, have overcome the Czar's opposition. The marriage will take place during the early Autumn.

CONTINUITY.

BY JAMES BUCKHAM.

The sin which I this day have done,
Was years ago in thought begun.
The good which I would some time do,
Must glimmer now my spirit through.

No necromancy bursts the seed;
No sudden purpose works the deed.
Through patient days each process lies;
Through long sweet living good deeds rise.

I may not fell the oak to-day,
But plant the acorn, sure, I may.
The perfect work I long to do,
Let me begin by being true!

Each lawless thought will mar the plan;
Each wasted day will stint the man.
Wouldst thou excel? Let purpose run,
A thread of gold, from sun to sun!

How to Give Every Member Work to Do.

(Read before the Grenada District Conference.)

We are told that the World's Fair at Chicago was a most wonderful thing, and that this very wonderful thing was made up of things wonderful in themselves. Every department complete, and containing very interesting things. We do not doubt it. But so it is with this subject; it is a mammoth question, than which none other is more important; and, like the Fair, it has many departments. To compass the subject we must look into every department of church work; understand the beauties, usefulness and necessity of each, and their harmonious association.

Let us look, then, at the pastor, the member, the work to be done, and how to do it. This arrangement makes a complete circle in which the first part, the pastor, and the last part, the how to do the work, unite or come together, This is as it should be. We must begin with the pastor, and he must know how the work should be done; but

First, the pastor. If any pastor wants a working church, he must be a working pastor. A lazy pastor never had a working church long at a time. They get them as some get their wealth, upon the departure of another from said possessions; and often squander these resources with equal prodigality in riotous living. When the members of a church see their pastor lounging or pleasure-seeking, they turn away and often their hearts die in them. The principle of vitality quietly, but surely disappears, and opportunity is afforded for a funeral service; but, alas! the pastor is dead, too, and hence the world in its kindness buries both without ceremony. The pastor must be active, with a purpose, and from a grand, noble and divine purpose. His activity must be a flow, coming naturally from the life and spirit within. Never will it do for him to become formal, and appear to be following iron-clad rules just because he must, or has been told to do so. But, like the steam engine, complete in all its parts, supplied with water and continually fired, must have motion and exert its power in active movements or burst, so must the successful pastor be active or die. And, like the engine, he must be complete in all his parts, well put together and properly furnished. He must, by study, become acquainted with all the needs of his church. He must see what should be done and when to do it. Some churches are idle simply because their pastor has not called their attention to what needs doing. This should not be so. Let the pastor tell it, and tell it, and tell it again till none of the children of men can say, Nobody ever told me before. Keep duties and work before the church.

The pastor should study methods and compare plans, ever keeping in full view the great mission of the church in the world; remembering that he is a general in the army of Christ, and that he must plan, devise and command for the welfare of the hosts of Israel. He should never content himself with old, musty systems or inharmonious plans, but follow the same old work of saving souls by the method most helpful and prolific of the greatest success. Let him remember that while we are still separating lint from cotton seed, it is not done with the fingers as in other days, but by a wonderfully improved, new and rapid process. Enlightenment calls for further enlightenment so that advancement is the law of our success. Tact in the world calls for tact in the church. The pastor who fails to see this goes to the bottom by virtue of his own specific gravity.

Then we think upon the member. He should be observed and studied by the pastor, which preparation should be at once followed by sowing seed adapted to the soil and thorough cultivation. I find this a successful method in dealing with those outside of the church. It leads them into Christianity. I find out the peculiarities and capacity for work, and try to impress them that the work I ask is a necessity; that the church and cause both, in a sense, are dependent upon them for the work. Then, when such a one undertakes a duty, I enquire intereatedly as to what success such person has attained, and advise and encourage them. I rarely choose for office or prominence persons who desire pre-eminence, but can find the very best material in the ranks of the unassuming. It is well to discuss all the interests of the church with the members, and explain to them many of your plans, thus attracting them to and interesting them in that in which you are interested. You need not divulge all things to all persons, but keep every work and all the interests of the church prominently before the members.

Only a few words concerning the work remain to be said. The work to be done is the salvation of souls, generally speaking, but more particularly the carrying of the vital truths of inspiration home to the hearts of men, and impressing upon men the necessity of obedience and love to God, and sustaining the several institutions of the church which look to these ends.

But, lastly, how to do this work claims our attention. Here it is understood that the pastor is active and watchful, has studied the needs of his church and acquainted himself with the capacity of his members, has all the work to be done before him and knows just what is to be done. Such being the case, we advise that the pastor do nothing that may properly be given to a member to do. A successful planter keeps all hands at work, by letting them do all the work while he exercises general oversight and superintendence. The pastor need not think he will have nothing to do, for he will have much after he has utilized every available member. If nothing more, he may remain very busy in dispensing and directing the work. Pastors have been commended for their various and manifold usefulness, and have been called many-sided men until many conclude they can and must do it all. They undertake to do everything. They generally succeed in making a promiscuous distribution of themselves, and in the end are wholly unable to collect any profitable results.

The many-sided man is he who is in touch with and beside all the members of his church, and who allows them to bear burdens, attain successes and wear crowns. He has multiplied talents who can utilize the many capacities of his members. He who can put his mind, plans and will into others thus touches every part of church activity and governs the church. He is not a monarch or a despot, but an inspiration and source of life, a ruling spirit.

It is well to do anything you can by the assistance of well-chosen committees, composed of from one to three persons. Have a committee to secure and pay the sexton; one for other incidentals, and several to assist in collecting the Conference assessments, etc., and one or more to look after the needy or distressed. Have some good, religious, really spiritual persons to look after and report disorderly or offending members. Select persons who have a taste for and advocate religious literature to promote the circulation of church papers and religious books. Appoint leaders in every community who work for the general prayer meeting and church services, securing full attendance, if possible, and who shall conduct neighborhood prayer meetings, Sunday-schools, or superintend any other necessary religious work in his locality. And when you have given anyone a work to do, keep yourself busy in seeing that it is done and done well. Always be sure to give the women a full chance to work, and you will never regret it. So I need not itemize further, but repeat my motto: "Do nothing that you can get another to do." Have just as much done as you can find to do, and have everyone to do something. When a work needs to be done which is not strictly or necessarily your own, pick out a suitable person and lay the duty upon him. When you have a member unemployed, think up something and get him at it. Let none be at ease in Zion. Hunt workers and hunt work, too. There is certainly something radically wrong when the Master has hired a person into his vineyard, and there is nothing for him to do. This can not be true; there is work for all; and we are all for work, and all the work we all can do, for all the time we have through all this earth life.

The pastor should divide the church offices. If but few are competent, put one of these in each line and let him care for and develop colleagues in his line. Then don't keep one set of officers always at the same post, but change them. Let some rest by going into a new line. Let none remain in authority too long. Let all, as far as practicable, serve alternately in official position and in the ranks. Don't change all at once, but some now and others at other times. Preach work, and call the people to work. Preach it from the pulpit, in the pew, at the home, on the highways, everywhere and to everyone. In everything impress personal responsibility as related to the day of judgment, with the same before your own mind, and, strange to say, but it will prove true; members will then ask for something to do. Wouldn't that be a glorious time! To this end let us all earnestly and continually labor.

True religion always puts sunshine in the heart.

Arcadia District Conference.

By request I give the readers of the ADVOCATE a few notes of the session of this Conference.

The body convened at Lisbon, La., July 26, 1894, and closed its business session on the twenty-eighth. The religious services were continued until Sunday night, when it was closed with a glorious revival service, there being several conversions after the benediction was pronounced.

On Wednesday, the twenty-fifth, the District Sunday-school Conference held its session, which was quite interesting and profitable. From the reports made the Sunday-school work is on the upgrade in the district.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard convened the District Conference promptly at nine o'clock Thursday morning, and after reading the Scriptures, singing and prayer, the Conference was organized by electing G. G. Gill, of Homer, secretary. The presiding elder conducted the business of the Conference with dignity, carefulness and dispatch. All the interests of the church were looked after. From the reports of the preachers the district may be put down as in good condition on all lines except in its finances, which is greatly behind up to date. This is accounted for on account of a destructive hail storm that passed over a great portion of this district last year, which was followed by a drouth more extensive in its range, causing almost an entire failure in the crops in the bounds of this district. But from the present crop prospects the finances will be well up by the session of the Annual Conference. A great work has been done on this district in the past four years in erecting new houses of worship. Seven or eight new churches have been built. This was a much-needed work, and it has been well done, so that every prominent congregation on the district has a good, comfortable house to worship in. The attendance of clerical and lay delegates was good. Out of seventeen pastoral charges, all the pastors were present and reported their charges.

Lisbon received and entertained the members of the Conference with royal hospitality, for which the Conference gave them a vote of thanks, and will always remember them in their prayers. The people seemed greatly interested in the business of the Conference, and the house was crowded at each session with visitors, yet perfect order was observed. The Conference was impressed that the people in and about Lisbon were intellectual, liberal, and very spiritual.

Prominence was given to religious services; preaching twice a day. It was plain, practical, and with the unction of the Holy Ghost, and it was effectual in leading souls to Christ. I heard the pastor, Bro. Blocker, say about twenty souls were converted.

On Friday evening, during the session of the Conference, we had a pentecostal shower. The business had become a little dull; the president turned it into a service of song; the Holy Ghost came down, Christians were made happy, shouts were heard, penitents were called, an altar service was instituted, and seven or eight souls were converted, right in the midst of a Conference session. What a power! Everybody felt it, God honored it, and angels mingled their shouts with happy, sanctified human souls.

Dr. A. D. McVoy, president of Mansfield Female College, was with us, and the sunshine of his face, with his godly counsel and spiritual preaching, did us good. He presented the claims of Mansfield College; he won the confidence and excited the enthusiasm of the people and preachers in behalf of our female school. The Doctor deserves great credit for steering this school through the financial crisis of the past few years. We ought to rally to the support of this honored institution of learning.

Dr. C. W. Carter, president of Centenary College, was on hand in the true spirit of the gospel, and preached to us on Sunday with more than his usual power and unction. He was also full of the spirit and work of Christian education. His talk on Centenary College, Saturday evening, won many sympathizers and friends for old Centenary. I am sure the Doctor will get some good, substantial support from this district. The Board of Trustees did well in electing Dr. Carter as president of Centenary, for in him certain elements will be harmonized and forces concentrated that hardly any other man could have accomplished. The voice of our people is, "Let Centenary College be sustained." Our Conference passed resolutions commending Centenary and Mansfield. I think they will pray and work as they have resolved.

Our old home ADVOCATE was not forgotten by our Conference. We love the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and we will work for her support; but we don't want our brethren across the river to get more than their share of the space and influence of our old family ADVOCATE. Old men at the District Conference told me that the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE had been in their family since they were boys, from the first number. Long live the ADVOCATE to carry the gospel into our homes!

By resolution our presiding elder, Bro. Sheppard, was allowed a month's vacation, in order to recuperate his broken-down physical condition.

The Conference voted to meet next year in Ruston, La.

From Colombo to Tuticorin in India.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

The passage from Singapore to Colombo after the first day was not good for the health, and those waves of the wide sea undeceived many who had concluded, while passing the calm waters of the Strait, that they could not become sea-sick. However, it was only sea-sickening, without the storminess that might cause fear. But on a smaller ship which plies between Colombo and Tuticorin for about six hours in the middle of the night it seemed to me that just an inch or two more of turning and the vessel would capsize. The monsoon was on us, and I should have been much frightened, but that the officers said it was not unusual to have it worse. All the passengers besides myself were coolies of South India, who had been employed on the tea plantations of Ceylon, and two or three East Indians, who were returning from Australia, having been engaged in dry goods trade out there. The statistics of 1891 show that 81,000 natives of Southeast India emigrated to Ceylon. They go and come.

To see and hear sea-sickness one needed only to be on deck where these coolies were that night. And many of them, instead of grasping some support, would just sit or lie on the floor and slide back and forth as the vessel turned. There were about 75 of them, black as Africans, mostly half naked, and a few feet on the bare floor seemed as good a bed as many of them desired. The ship's English officers deal with them about as I imagine the overseers dealt with Southern slaves in ante bellum times.

At sunrise there was a view of a distant land to our north and right. Our ship stopped five miles from the shore on account of coral shoals, and after the launch had received all the passengers, it waited some forty minutes before sailing, in order to allow ten o'clock to arrive, nothing by law being permitted to pass the customs before that hour.

And now, here I am on "India's coral strand." Yes, for I see that many of the houses have been built of the coral stones that line the shore. Though alone and without an acquaintance, what a privilege it is to be in India, where live and move one-sixth of all the children of Adam! In India, with her female seclusion and her countless castes, with her arid deserts, and alluvial deltas, with her high mountains and sacred mighty rivers! In India, where dark Kolarian and Dravidian first held possession, followed and supplanted by the fair Hindu Aryan with his Vedic hymns, who, as he advanced eastward from his home in the highlands of Central Asia, gradually established himself in forest, field and village, whither the Parsee from Persia took refuge, where the Arab founded his famous Mogul Empire, where at one time the Portuguese had settlements "from Surat in the west to Chittagong in the east," where now may be studied the colonial policy of the most enlightened nation of modern times, as it administers the affairs of the Indian Empire! And here, too, may be watched as it rages the long and fierce battle of the simple truth of Jesus, grappling with deep-set ancient superstitions and obstinate heathen philosophy. But what helpful thing can one say who has just landed upon the native soil, who knows not ten words of all the hundred languages and dialects, and who has not felt at all the great throbbing heart of the people?

W. C. T. U. of Meridian.

MR. EDITOR: Knowing your heart is with us in our work, we take pleasure in telling our church, through your paper, what the W. C. T. U. is doing in Meridian. We rejoice in the widespread and unprecedented interest, both in and out of the church, in the movement in behalf of temperance and prohibitory law. Meridian has awakened to the necessity both of legal and moral suasion to control the great evils fostered and stimulated by the liquor traffic. Many have been the remarks made about the perfect quiet among the strikers who are seen gathered on our street corners, talking earnestly about the great strike. A look at their fair, manly faces will tell any observant person there are no open saloons in Meridian. The W. C. T. U. stand firm in the belief: The total removal of the curse of intemperance is the only remedy.

Our White Ribbon band are in earnest. We meet once a week in the Central Methodist Church. We mingle our prayers and tears together at the foot of the cross, imploring divine guidance to forward this work.

We had printed on an attractive leaflet the last law on temperance made by the last General Conference, and handed one to every Methodist church member in Meridian, to impress on them the importance of enforcing this grand law.

Asking the prayers of every Christian who reads this article, I am, Abiding Happiness.

How many young people there are whose happiness or unhappiness seems to depend upon the shifting surface currents of life—the circumstances of a day, the slight, ordinary fluctuations of physical conditions; the little favors or slights of others, the thousand and one external influences which play like alternating lights and shadows about each one of us. If everything goes right, these mercurial young spirits are buoyant and happy; but just as surely as the chance shadow flits over, there is sudden gloom in the heart. No deep, abiding source of joy; no treasured-up sunshine of hope and trust—this is what makes the happiness of thousands of young people such an uncertain, unsatisfactory thing. Mere chameleons of life are such, taking the hue of the surface over which they pass. Moody, changeable, morbidly sensitive—how sad to see the bright face of youth so often overcast and petulant! How depressing to think that the morning of life should be passing without any adequate realization of the deep, intense, abiding joy of what is capable!

The trouble lies in youth's so frequent failure to understand that happiness is not an external, but an internal condition and possession. It is not a mood, but a life—the kind of life that reaches down so deep that the sources of it never know when the surface is ruffled or clouded, any more than the depths of the sea know when the wind blows or the sky lowers.

Such depth of life makes a soul superior to circumstance. Moods may drift about it, but it shines through passing clouds. All life shines, and is radiant to a soul whose experience of God, of love, of truth, of humanity, is deep enough to defy the little changes of outward circumstance.

Dwell deep, heart of youth, and thou shalt be shiningly happy! Trust not to the mood, the event, the day. Make your own moods, create your own environment, be the builders of your own history. Have something of that spirit which you catch in the bird's voice when he clings to a wet, wind-tossed bough on a rainy day, and sings as if his happy little heart would burst. What is the song that he has gotten hold of? Deep life, deep trust, deep faith, deep love, deep hope! These make up the substantial, abiding joy of life, which no mood can overcloud and no circumstance dispel. For us, is it not all summed up in the love of Christ? Truly, that is the sunshine of life.—Zion's Herald.

Don't Be Mulish!

This is a free rendering of a striking verse in one of the Psalms, which runs, "Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding, whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle, lest they come near unto thee." Paraphrased in modern version, the counsel might be rendered on this fashion: "Act like an intelligent being—not like a balky horse, or a stubborn mule. You have intellect—use it; you have knowledge and the means of acquiring information—employ them. Do not back, and balk, and kick, and turn, and refuse to work, until a bit has to be put into your mouth, and a halter strap on your neck, and chafing harness is put on you, and you are forced into the track of obedience, and the way of workfulness. Do not kick against the goads. Do not wait to be driven by force, and urged like a brute by strenuous means to your rightful work. Become amenable to the motives of conscience, of reason, of gratitude, of love, of loyalty. Respond to the appeals of God's law with instant obedience, with hearty devotion. Reflect upon his precious promise: I will guide thee with mine eye. Let the relations of loyalty, of fellowship, of sonship, be so close between you and the Almighty Father that you shall need only a glance of his eye, a motion of his hand, a whisper from his Spirit, to move you in the line of prompt and obedient action. Do not wait to be pulled and hauled, to be haltered and harnessed, to be directed by affliction, by physical law, by the restraining and chastening influences of providence, by the penalties which make the way of the transgressor painful and hard. Be not like a mule; be a man!"—Central Advocate.

Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation. Do not weaken and distract yourself looking forward to things you can not see, and could not understand if you saw.—Charles Kingsley.

When you are tempted to be impatient with others, think how patient God has been with you.

The Wage-Earner's Chief Enemy.

The Buffalo Commercial makes the editorial observation that "in all accounts of the meetings held by the Russian and Hungarian Jews to 'demand work' and to represent themselves as starving, it is stated that the saloons in the vicinity of the meetings did a thriving business; it paid the saloon keepers to have those meetings held in the vicinity of their bars. There was plenty of money to spend upon drink." It is difficult to work up a very large degree of sympathy for men who, when they have employment, spend the larger part of their wages in the saloons, so that nothing is left for a "rainy day." The families of such men are generally but a few removes from starvation even when times are good and wages fair. The saloon absorbs all, and more than all the margin of income which should go into the savings bank or into a fund for a home. Times never can be good enough nor wages high enough to bring real happiness and prosperity into a community where grog shops line the street as they do many sections of our cities whence the cry of the unemployed is now arising. If a river of money were turned into some of these streets, two-thirds of it would go just where two-thirds of the wages earned in these same streets go now—into the capacious tills of the liquor dealers—and the wives and children would be little if any better off than they were before. It is not a repeal of the silver law which the working classes need so much as the enactment of a law which shall close up the crime-breeders and poverty-producers known as saloons. Here is where the chiefest enemy of the wage-earner has his stronghold.—Christian at Work.

The Humble Task.

A young friend was complaining to us about the humble character of his daily toil. He insisted that it was menial; that a man of his talents and training should not be asked to do certain things which his employer required of him, and which he thought were humiliating. He had not been asked to do anything dishonorable, but it chafed him to perform services which he thought were beneath his station.

What a heartless taskmaster is pride. All honorable work—it matters not in what field performed—is ennobling. Of course, our young friend should be ambitious, but he should remember that ambitions are best realized by the faithful performance of the present duty, however humble it may be. The doing of a lowly service may be the test which the employer uses for bringing out the strength of his employees. Ordinarily, an employer will see to it that "he that is faithful in that which is least" has the opportunity to become "faithful also in much."

We commend to our young friend these encouraging words of Canon Farrar: "A life spent in brushing clothes and washing crockery and sweeping floors—a life which the proud of the earth would have treated as the dust under their feet—a life spent at the clerk's desk, a life spent in the narrow shop, a life spent in the laborer's hut, may yet be a life so ennobled by God's loving mercy that for the sake of it a king might gladly yield his crown."—Exchange.

A Noble Example.

The late George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, a newspaper and business man of whom the whole world is justly proud, writes in his autobiography the following sturdy, sensible words concerning business integrity: "If I have been successful, I owe it to industry, temperance and frugality. I have always believed that it is possible to unite success in business with strict moral integrity. I am aware that many people think that the ethics of business or of politics are quite distinct, and that a man may do things in his public employment which he will not think it right to do in his domestic or private life. I do not agree with this view, and if the record of my life has any value, it is in showing that at least it is not necessary, to success in business, that a man should indulge in sharp practice. But if it were necessary, still it would not follow that it is worth while. We can not afford to do or say a mean thing. There are higher satisfactions than the mere getting of money, and riches can not compensate a man for the consciousness of having lived a dishonorable or selfish life." This testimony coming from a man who started in life as an errand boy in a book store, and through industry, temperance and frugality became wealthy, honorable and influential, should have some weight with thoughtful men in leading them to follow his example.—Exchange.

Discontent is like ink poured into water, which fills the whole fountain full of blackness. It casts a cloud over the mind, and renders it more occupied about the evil which disquiets it than about the means of removing it.—Feltham.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

STEAMED CHOCOLATE PUDDING.—Beat the yolks of three eggs light, add gradually one cnpful of sugar, and beat until light. Add three tablespoonfuls of sweet milk, and one onnce of chocolate or cocoa melted over hot water. Mix thoroughly; add one cupful of flour, and beat until smcoth. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff, dry froth, and add quickly to the pnidding, with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Put a large spoonfni into greased onps, and steam twenty minutes.

Sauce.—Beat one cupful of powdered sugar and a half cupful of butter together to a cream. Add one teaspoonfnl of vanilla, and gradually a half cupful of milk, stirring all the while. Place the howl in a basin of hot water. Stir until the sauce is smooth and creamy—no longer.—Selected.

ORANGE CAKE.—One cnpfnl of granulated sugar, one-half cnpful of butter, scant two-thirds of a cnpfcl of sweet milk, three eggs, a tablespoonful of lemoc juice, two and one-fourth oups of flocr, two generous teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix butter and sugar, add the yolks of eggs and heat together till light, then the milk, half of the flour in which the baking powder has been stirred, part of the beaten whites of eggs, the remaining flour, the lemon juice, and last the rest of the eggs. Do not mix long after the whites are stirred in. Bake in fonr-layer oake tins. When the oakes are entirely cold spread between them finely-sliced oranges well sweetened, removing all tongh bits and seeds. Now pour over the orange a soft boiled frosting flavored with the grated lemon peel and a little of the lemon juice. Spread frosting alone on the top layer. The cake is quite rich, and, if liked, two layers only may be nsed, reserving the remaining ones for another oake. This recipe will answer for any simple layer cake.—Ladies' Home Journal.

TO MAKE CURRANT JELLY.—When making currant jelly, select freshly-gathered currants which are not over-ripe; mash and squeeze them through a jelly bag. Put the jnice into a porcelain-lined kettle and stand over a brisk fire; let boil for twenty minutes; add a pound of sugar for every pint of juice, and stir until it dissolves. Skim; bring to a boil; take from the fire; pnt in glasses and stand aside to jelly. A little of the liqnid can be tried in a glass before taking np, and if it does not jelly, it may be boiled a few minutes longer. A clear lighter-colored jelly can be made by using white and red currants. To make English currant jelly, take ripe currants; do not pick the stems; weigh, and allow half a pound of sugar to every pound of currants. Put the fruit into a preserve kettle; mash and stir over the fire for twenty-five minutes. Take up; strain through a flannel bag. Wash the kettle, put the juice in it, let come to a boil and add the sugar; stir until dissolved; take from the fire; pour in glasses; let cool and cover.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HYGIENE.

Bathing after Excessive Exercise.

The popular notion of the injurious effect of a cold bath taken by one who is overheated from exercise must possess—as all such ideas have—some basis in experience; and yet it is falsified by the experience of athletes from the days of the Greeks and Romans even until now, who find in this procednre a refreshing and stimulating tonic after the exertion they have recently undergone. And physiologically speaking, a cold plnnge or douche taken immediately after the physical effort, when the skin is acting freely and there is a sense of heat throughout the body, is as rational as in the experience of the athlete it is beneficial. It is paralleled by the tonic effect produced by the cold plnnge when the skin is actively secreting after a Turkish bath, and finds its rationale doubtless in the stimulation of the nervous system, in the increase of internal circulation and also in the renewal of activity to the cutaneous circulation after the momentary contraction of blood vessels due to the cold. The popular belief doubtless rests on the injurious effects which may be induced by the bath in one who does not resort to it immediately, but allows time for the effects of fatigue to show themselves on the muscles and nerves, and for the surface of the body to get cool. Taken then the bath is more likely to depress than to stimulate, there is less power of reaction and greater liability to internal inflammation. At such a time a warm bath, rather than a cold one, is more suitable and more safe. It has been suggested, however, that the practice of indulging in a bath after violent exercise may initiate renal disease. Of this there is no evidence. The transitory albuminuria observed after prolonged cold baths may indicate the disturbances in the renal circulation which ensues upon them, but these cases are in a different category from those to which we are now alluding, nor are we aware of any facts to prove that, even in them, Bright's disease has been developed in consequence of the transient departure from the normal. Lastly, it must be remembered that those indulging in athletic exercises of all kinds are presumably sound in heart as well as limb, and that such persons may take with impunity, and, indeed, with benefit, measures which would be distinctly harmful to the weakly.—The Lancet.

Concerning the Human Scalp.

Salt and water is a very good application to the scalp. Its effect is to stimulate the circulation of the part. The reason why the scalp becomes unhealthy is that it is not groomed enough. We know how it is with a horse that is not properly cared for, and rubbed often; he becomes unhealthly, and, as we say, hidebound. This is precisely the condition of the human scalp when it does not have proper care. If it is not curried and groomed, it becomes hide-bound. In order for the scalp to be healthy, it must be manipulated so that it can be easily moved upon the skull; otherwise waste matter accumulates, the tissue spaces of the scalp become filled, and the little pockets which produce the hair become diseased, and thus the hair itself becomes diseased, dies, and falls out. When rubbing the scalp for the benefit of the hair, and in making application of cold water, there must be two movements: First a friction of the scalp so as to bring the blood to the surface; second, place the fingers firmly upon the scalp, and move it upon the bone. If the scalp is unhealthy, and the patient is much troubled with headache, the scalp will be found sometimes bound fast to the skull bones; but after manipulation during a few weeks it will be possible to move the scalp freely, and then the condition of the hair will change for the better, as these movements cause the blood to flow freely, stimulate and aid the lymphatic circulation and thus supply nutrition to the roots of the hair.—Good Health.

Monotony of Diet.

A physician maintains that it is not poverty of diet so much as monotony of diet that exercises an unhealthy influence on the poor. As a matter of fact, they eat "stronger" food than the rich, more bread, meat and simple vegetables, but their cooking is crude, and they eat the same things the whole year through. People who are well to do, or who are better cooks, get more variety with fewer things and always have something to tempt the appetite. Soup can be made to resemble greasy dishwater, or it can be made a really savory and nutritious thing, and there are a hundred different ways of serving potatoes. The physician thinks that free cooking schools would be a first-rate thing in the tenement districts.

Tomato Rot.

CAUSES AND PREVENTATIVES.

All diseases have their origin in some cause. The cause sometimes may be known, and yet we may be unable to control the disease, owing to the fact that other matters may be behind over which we may have no control. The tomato rot is certainly a case of the kind mentioned. It would be well in the outset to describe the kind of rot referred to, that we may be clearly understood. It is known by forming a black spot on the spex of very small tomatoes to those two-thirds grown, not, however, on those near maturity. In our opinion, it is a misnomer to call it rot; it should be called the tomato blight. There are some of the opinion this rot is of fungus origin. To this we do not agree. Others have argued it is caused by small insects, because under the microscope myriads of them can be seen. In our opinion they are drawn there as the bee and other insects are drawn to decaying fruit as a means of sustenance. Our opinion as to the rot has been formed after years of observation, and that it is mainly, but not wholly, the result of dry weather. To sustain this opinion, every year in which the seasons have been regular in our vicinity, this disease has not prevailed. We mean whenever we have escaped dry weather, this disease rarely ever is seen.

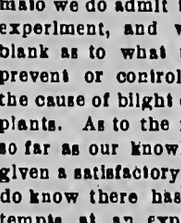
We do admit and do know that the disease may be augmented by the manner in which the crop is managed. It of fungus origin, this would hardly be the case. One season during very dry weather some of our neighbors suffered much worse from it than we did. The soil was very much the same; the fertilizing different however, and the management of the crop different, and yet their crops were well-nigh destroyed, and ours nearly escaped. Now, had this been the case only one year, we could have assented to the opinion it was of fungus origin or small insects, but being repeated a number of years, and only during dry seasons, we have come to the conclusion that was mainly the cause.

We have said the cause can not be controlled. The reason: we can not control the seasons; yet we will admit we may so act as to largely diminish the effects of the seasons in this respect—lessen the effects of this so-called rot.

Now, there is one disease of the tomato we do admit that has baffled all experiment, and we are left almost blank as to what to do to either to prevent or control it. We allude to the cause of blight or death among the plants. As to the real cause no one, so far as our knowledge goes, has yet given a satisfactory explanation. We do know there has been repeated attempts at an explanation, and that like many explanations now given as to the causes of different diseases in the human family—that, because they are not able to give any real satisfactory explanation, they fall back upon the theory that the cause is bacteria; and that is the end of it. Now, we do know for the past two years that there has been less of this disease among some of our growers than others where there was a different treatment of the crops. This, however, we admit is not a positive argument against the theory, that the cause is bacteria. This fact, that different crops suffered less with it, some none, under different treatment, is a matter now receiving our investigation. The result may not be reached in years, and may never; yet, as a matter of prime importance to the tomato grower, we shall push our experiments, and should we ever reach a satisfactory solution we shall be glad to give it to the public.

In our next communication we shall continue our opinion as to the cause of the tomato rot and its preventatives.

Blood Poisoning



Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

"Having used Ayer's Hair Vigor for years, I find that it keeps my scalp clean and the hair in the best condition. My mother, now sixty years of age, has as fine a head of hair as when she was forty, a fact which she attributes to the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. It thickens the growth of the hair and restores gray hair to its original color. I cannot see how this preparation could be improved."—Mrs. F. E. BAKER, Galveston, Texas.

The Comfort of the Gospel.

Love for humanity is the one thing that characterized the ministry of Jesus. Earthly moralists have left on record noble precepts and wise maxims for the regulation of human conduct, but no other religious teacher ever manifested such profound interest in men as did Jesus of Nazareth. Socrates and Plato, even Buddha and Confucius, were pure, good men who sought to elevate the people among whom they lived; yet they did not love men deeply or sympathize with all in their distresses. Human philosophers and religion-makers think themselves above the common herd, and the people resent such airs of loftiness. Not so with Jesus. The poorest, the most wretched outcast of society felt privileged to come to him for help and consolation; for his very glance was full of compassion.

Now and then we can not help recognizing that the world is full of sorrow, that mankind are struggling under heavy burdens. This fact, however, usually troubles us but little, and when it does we try to forget it or to ignore its presence. Jesus, more than any mere man, recognized the burdened condition of humanity, and his whole mission upon earth was to remove these burdens, to alleviate human suffering, and to bring joy and comfort to saddened human hearts. How often his heart was sorrowful because of the wretchedness he saw around him. "When he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted and were scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd."

Looking around us, we see men toiling night and day. Some are toiling for the bare necessities of life. With all their efforts they find it hard to keep the wolf from the door. How many there are who have to struggle so hard for a living that they are cut off from all enjoyment. They have no time to think of self-improvement. Ofttimes they forget that they are immortal beings, for no man seems to care for their souls. Others again are laboring for wealth. Not content with a competency, they long to revel in riches, to have millions at their command. Anxious days and sleepless nights, loss of peace of conscience and of human companionship and sympathy, is the price which many pay for riches. Still others labor with might and main for political fame and power, but God is not in all their thoughts.

How vain is human toil when not directed toward God. The poor cry for bread, and think their ills would be at an end had they the wealth of a Gould or a Vanderbilt. The mechanic thinks he would be perfectly content had he the rank and ease of a prince or a duke. The politician thinks his happiness would be complete could he but obtain some high office. The obscure student thinks he would have nothing more to wish for could he have the wisdom of a Plato or a Newton. Turn where we may, we see unrest, a longing for something just beyond.

Thousands of human beings to day are burdened because of oppression. They sigh for deliverance, and yet there seems to be none. Thousands more are suffering from incurable diseases, and for them the star of hope seems to have set. Nor is there a home in all the land into which death has not come and snatched away some dear friend, some loved one. Many, indeed, are the things that cause us to be sorrowful. Yet, while we are cast down in spirit, while our hearts are almost bursting with grief, if we but trust in Jesus, he whispers words of peace and consolation. When all other help has failed, we know that he will not desert us.

What comfort there is in the invitation of Jesus to the burdened! He says: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." No matter what may be the burden under which we labor, whether of poverty, physical suffering, bereavement, or a corrupt nature, our Father tells us to cast all our care upon him, for he careth for us." We may be the poorest of the poor, we may be the victims of the grossest injustice, we may have lost our every friend, we may despair of keeping the law, we may be afflicted with the most loathsome disease, we may be sunk in the lowest depths of sin, but the invitation still is, "Come." The disciples on several occasions became disgusted because the unfortunate crowded around the Master. Though pressed at times almost beyond endurance, and though faint with hunger, never did he manifest the slightest impatience at the presence of the sinning and the suffering.

Ours is indeed the gospel of peace. At the birth of the Savior the angels sang, "On earth peace, good-will toward men." The night before his betrayal our Lord thus comforted the sorrowing disciples: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." Who can describe the peace and rapture of a soul conscious of its acceptance with God and filled with the spirit of his grace? Trials and afflictions may come, friends may forsake us, and the way may seem dark; yet this peace abides with us, for it is not dependent upon environment.

Yet how oft we distort the meaning of the Savior's words. He promises us rest if we come unto him, but he does not promise to give us rest from physical toil, from bodily disease, from oppression, from the pangs of poverty, from any form of rest material in its nature. Rest from the guilt of sin, soul rest is the blessing he would confer upon burdened humanity. When we take the Savior at his word, our hearts are cleansed from sin, and a song of joy is put into our mouths. In misfortune or in bodily affliction the burden of our prayer should be not so much to have our physical condition or environment changed, but that we may have grace to endure. Then it is we realize the truth of the Scripture, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee." St. Paul says: "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." What a religion is this which enables us to glory even in tribulations!

Our Schools and Colleges.

We desire to call special attention to the following schools and colleges which advertise with us, suitable notices of a dozen or more schools having already appeared in our columns:

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

This institution of learning ranks as one of the leading universities of America. The fact that a half-dozen or more training-schools have been established to prepare boys specially for Vanderbilt is proof of the thoroughness and high grade of the work done. Courses are offered in seven departments, the corps of instructors numbering over sixty. Last year there were in all over 700 matriculates. It has splendidly equipped museums and laboratories, and offers exceptional advantages to professional students. Vanderbilt boasts a fine gymnasium. Ten fellowships worth $200 each are open to graduates of all reputable colleges. Vanderbilt graduates are in great demand as teachers.

THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA.

This university, which Thomas Jefferson helped to found, has behind her no mean record. Many of the leading statesmen and jurists of the country were trained in her classic halls. Nor is she sleeping on her past reputation. Her instructors are men of recognized ability and scholarship, and the equipment in her four departments, viz, Law, Engineering, Medical and Academic, is first class.

TULANE UNIVERSITY.

We hear good reports of this university located in our Crescent City. Fine new buildings for the Academic Department are now being erected opposite Audubon Park. The Medical Department has unsurpassed advantages for practical instruction. Students have free access to the great Charity Hospital, which has 700 beds and 30,000 patients annually.

WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY

Is another Virginia university whose name has gone abroad. Gen. Robt. E. Lee presided over this institution after the fall of the Confederacy until the time of his death. One of the illustrious Lee family is now president. Courses are offered in the Academic, Law and Engineering Departments.

ROANOKE COLLEGE.

A school forty-two years old, as this one is, ought to have many advantages that a younger school has not. In addition to the regular college courses, Roanoke College offers commercial and preparatory courses. Certain studies are elective. Among the advantages which this college claims are a healthful mountain climate, a moral community, fine church privileges, and moderate terms.

M'TYEIRE INSTITUTE.

The principal of this school, Rev. Joshua H. Harrison, has acquired some celebrity as an educator. He makes no claim to having established a college, but confines his attention to the much-needed work of training boys and young men for college and university. Students from various States have been in attendance, a proof of the merit and popularity of the school.

WOOLWINE SCHOOL.

This school, formerly located at Nashville, but now at Tullahoma, Tenn., is in its ninth year. Prof. Woolwine, the principal, has made reputation for himself as a teacher, and has in successful operation a training-school of high grade.

VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE.

Parents who desire to send their boys to a good military school would do well to consider the merits of this institution of learning, which is by no means a fledgeling. Special attention is given to scientific and technical training—a matter of great importance in this practical age. Thorough courses in chemistry and engineering are among those offered. For other information write for catalogue.

RANDOLPH-MACON WOMAN'S COLLEGE.

A somewhat extended notice having already been given to this college, we shall say just a few words about it now. It is one of the few endowed colleges for women in the world, and the only endowed female school in Virginia. Girls wanting a thorough education will be sure to get it here, as the courses and standard of admission are the same as at Randolph-Macon Male College.

LAGRANGE FEMALE COLLEGE.

Georgia has many fine schools, not the least of which is LaGrange Female College. In addition to the usual branches, dress making, type-writing and stenography are taught at the school, so that girls who wish to be bread-winners may learn things of practical value. Music, including voice culture, elocution and art are among the specialties. With such advantages as brick buildings, electric lights, water works, a healthful location, and the best of social surroundings, this school ought to be largely patronized.

SILLIMAN INSTITUTE

Is located in a beautiful and healthful country. It has good buildings, fine advantages in music and art, and a high standard of scholarship. It is within easy reach of New Orleans and Vicksburg. Young ladies will be well cared for at the institute.

WARD SEMINARY.

This renowned school for young ladies is now entering upon its thirtieth year. Its history is one of marked success. There are graduates of this school scattered throughout the South. Nashville is a city of schools, Ward Seminary being one of the largest and best. Pupils have exceptional advantages for the study of music, art, literature and elocution. Special attention is paid to physical culture. Send for an illustrated catalogue.

HOLLINS INSTITUTE

Is one of the largest and best equipped female schools in Virginia. It was founded fifty-two years ago. Mountain scenery is close at hand to charm the eye, while invigorating mountain air and pure mineral waters ward off disease and bring the glow of health to the cheek. This school has thirty officers and teachers, and offers splendid educational facilities.

GULF COAST COLLEGE.

This is a new institution located at Handsboro, Miss., and presided over by Rev. J. M. Pugh, A. M. Bro. Pugh advertises that he will have teachers of recognized ability, and we bespeak for him the hearty support of the public at large as well as of the community where he resides. The school is co-educational. Send for a catalogue.

Here and There.

While we stop for a few days to catch our breath and prepare for future operations, we pen you a few lines of observations. Beginning with the Millsaps College commencement, we have been among the District Conferences, camp and protracted meetings. These have taken in largely all of South, Southeast, Southwest Mississippi and West Alabama. At all places we have received words of kindness and cheer.

From present prospects the crops will be larger, both of corn and cotton than for several years past. The people generally are happy and delighted with the prospects of a large harvest. We have seen no evidences of hard times, but heard some such intimations at the District Conferences. Finances generally behind. No doubt all will come up before the Annual Conference. Six-cent cotton may not pay, but with the great crop of corn and increase in hogs we will be measurably independent another twelve months. The farmers and merchants both inform me that no crop has ever been made at such low figures. Fifty per cent. of usual bills will cover expenses of 1894.

At every place we were reminded of the activity of the educators of our land. College presidents and agents were conspicuous in every assembly, each one urging the superiority of his claims. President Chambers we found to be a fine traveling companion, and wide awake to the interests of Whitworth. Drs. Cooper and Murrah were on hand to speak for Millsaps. Mississippi ought to put 200 boys there next session. As to girls we find enough to more than overflow our schools. If one in four of those who expressed a desire to attend college could go, we would have our halls full; and if one-half of those who expressed a purpose to attend East Mississippi shall find the means, we will have all we can accommodate.

Oh, that some generous souls would endow our female colleges and help to educate the women of our land!

In our travels we come often in contact with the ADVOCATE, and learned that it is growing in favor with the people. We are glad that you could cease from your labors long enough to enjoy a while at Monteagle, and trust you may come back strong for the Winter's campaign.

Well, we must close and get ready for further work. While the carpenters are looking after the improvements, we continue our travels and preparations for the approaching session.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Centenary College.

It is plain that the interest in Centenary College is growing. More people are thinking and inquiring about it to-day than usual. I received the other day a letter which contained this: "If you will send me a copy of an advertisement of Centenary College, I will insert it in the paper of which I am editor free of any charge to you or your institution. I do this to help in my feeble way an institution of my church." It is evident this brother has not forgotten his vow to the church to support her institutions. Every member of the church has taken the same vow. Now, I ask, will each one keep his or her vow to support Centenary College? Each one can do something, has promised to do something, and the college needs the help of each. The example of the brother mentioned above shows that where there is a will, a way will be found.

Our next session opens Sept. 5, and we are looking for quite a number of new students.

C. W. CARTER, Pres.

A Commendable Book.

I wish to commend to the readers of this ADVOCATE, especially to younger preachers, "A Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism," by J. J. Tigert, D. D., and published by Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn.

The author has confined himself to the limits designated in the title of this book, and has given us an admirable statement of the chronological movement of American Methodism in the development of the constitution of our church and of the nature of our episcopacy. This is an able and timely work, and Dr. Tigert has supplied a pressing need in the deeper study and the clearer understanding of our organic Methodism. This book will help us to find the lines of original survey and to see the limits our fathers set to episcopal function. Let the young preachers put this in as an essential text-book with other forms of the history of Methodism. Whether or not we agree in all things with the author, we shall find him a teacher at whose feet we may sit with great profit.

As is often the case, the secular press exaggerated the reports about Rev. R. A. Tilly's connection with the troubles in Brazil. He was under arrest thirty-six hours, and was then honorably released through the influence of the American consul. It is stated that Mrs. Tilly and her two little girls will spend the coming Winter in this country.—Wesleyan Advocate.

Much apprehension is felt for the safety of our missionaries in China and Japan on account of the war now going on between those countries. Our Missionary Secretaries, in view of the situation, on the fourth of this month addressed a communication to the authorities at Washington asking for full protection for them as American citizens. Assurances have been given that they shall suffer no harm.

An amendment to the Constitution of New York State proposing to abolish capital punishment recently met with signal defeat in the Constitutional Convention. The New York Christian Advocate thus comments upon the vote:

Three classes of citizens will be dissatisfied with this. The sentimentalists who would like to manage criminals on a kindergarten principle; those who are not opposed to capital punishment in itself, but think that there would be more convictions if some other punishment were substituted; and the criminal classes generally. The aggregate of the first two classes is probably about as twenty-three to one hundred and two.

The world still lacks a good deal of having gone beyond John Wesley, as the following from the Tennessee Methodist will show:

Dr. D. C. Kelley, at a recent Sunday evening service at Elm Street Church, this city, read one of John Wesley's sermons, which was delivered in 17[illegible] before the Society for the Improvement of Manners. Dr. Kelley applied it to the work of the Law and Order League and the present situation in Nashville, making some comparisons between the conditions which called for the organization of the Society for the Improvement of Manners and the conditions of to-day which brought out the Law and Order League.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2.25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to August, '95.

Rev. Henry Carre preached an edifying sermon at Rayne Memorial Church, in this city, Sunday night.

Mrs. J. P. Hanner, Jr., a grandson of Dr. J. W. Hanner, of the Tennessee Conference, has been appointed fellow in physics in Vanderbilt University.

Bishop Galloway and Dr. Wadsworth arrived at Yokahama, Japan, July 31. We trust that the war in the East will cause no interruption in their journey.

Rev. Collins Denny having declined the presidency of Trinity College, N. C., Rev. J. C. Kilgo has been elected president, and will at once enter upon his duties.

The Hon. William S. Curtis, of Omaha, Neb., has been elected dean of Washington University, St. Louis. He is a graduate of the university, and has made quite a reputation as a lawyer.

Rev. T. C. Carter is filling the pulpit of Rayne Memorial Church during the absence of the regular pastor, Rev. Franklyn N. Parker, who has gone to Lake Chautauqua for a few weeks' rest.

At a meeting of the Board of Education held in Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 2, vacancies were filled by the election of Maj. R. W. Millsaps and Rev. R. J. Bigham. We congratulate the Board on the wisdom of its choice.

We regret to learn that Bro. W. G. Backus, of the Caseyville circuit, has been compelled to give up his work temporarily on account of bad health. Rev. L. E. Alford, a student of Millsaps College, is supplying his place for two months.

According to the Pacific Methodist, Rev. John S. Jenkins has been transferred from the Los Angeles to the North Georgia Conference, and appointed by Bishop Haygood to fill out Dr. Wadsworth's unexpired year at Washington.

Rev. J. V. Penn and wife made us a pleasant call last Monday morning while en route home from Adams Church, near Summit, Miss., where Bro. Penn has been conducting a revival for Bro. J. W. Tinnin. Reports are that the meeting was a glorious success.

We are pained to hear of the death of Thomas H. Watkins, a son of the late Dr. Wm. H. Watkins, which occurred last Friday at Newellton, La. He left a wife and eight children to mourn his loss. The remains were interred in the old family burying-ground, near Hay's Station, Jefferson county, Miss. We deeply sympathize with the family in this sore bereavement.

It is with much sorrow that we announce the sudden death at Para, Brazil, on June 29, of Richard Thomas Hennington, a native of Copiah county, Miss., who, with his family, has been living for the past twenty-six years at Santarem, on the Amazon river. Several months ago he decided to return with his family to the States, and was on his way back to his old home when his death occurred. The deceased was a brother-in-law of the editor. His wife, one son and a daughter still survive. The family arrived at Crystal Springs, Miss., Aug. 4.

Jackson District Conference.

The twenty-fifth session of the Jackson District Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Canton, Miss., on the evening of July 26, 1894, and after four interesting and instructive sittings, the Conference adjourned Saturday, at 5:30 P. M. Our beloved presiding elder, as usual, was looking well, and presided with much grace and ease. The attendance of the preachers of the district was very good, there being only two absentees. But the attendance of the delegates from the various charges was not so good as was expected. Oh, how much the laity of the church does miss by not attending District Conference! The reports from the various charges showed signs of progress along all lines of church work. Especially were the reports from the Sunday-schools of the district very encouraging. No interest of the church was overlooked. We were glad to have with us R. G. Porter, of the North Mississippi Conference, looking after the interest of Millsaps College in the absence of I. W. Cooper, agent. Revs. W. B. Murrah, D. D.; J. W. Chambers and T. B. Holloman were present with encouraging words for their respective colleges. Much success to these brethren in their great and grand work of Christian education! C. C. Campbell, W. H. Cassells, Dr. G. P. Blundel and R. H. Smith were elected delegates to the Annual Conference; I. C. Enochs and D. Bunch, alternates. The good people of Canton entertained the Conference nicely, and we left with good feelings and best wishes for Canton and for the success of Madison county in her grand temperance movement.

Melville Methodists.

Not long since, a little over two months, we were grieved to hear that the church at Melville was wrecked by a cyclone. People gazed upon the ruin and debris, and said, "What are you going to do?" Bros. Paton, Church and Worden answered, "We will build again." No time for idle talk; the beautiful house of the Lord was desolate. On Saturday the disaster occurred; on Monday the work of clearing away the debris was begun and word sent to me at Alexandria to send them a builder. He was sent, contract made and signed, and in just about eight weeks from the date of the storm a new building crowned the site of the old. And it is a beauty. Commodious, comfortable and elegant. Plenty of room for the congregation, and enough fresh air—one of heaven's choicest gifts—for the preacher. From stuffy churches "good Lord, deliver us." A neat coat of white on the outside, and the inner walls finished in oil, so as to show the natural grain of the wood. A tower in front, a little toward one corner, as towers should be, from whose belfry swings a new bell of harmonious and soulful tone—Bro. Paley's joy and pride. A new organ, too—nothing small about Melville—was ordered. And the whole affair is nearly half paid for, and only two months and a half old. Let the Church Extension Board come to the rescue; such a spirit should be encouraged. The members of the church and citizens of the town responded liberally to requests made for assistance, and the Quarterly Conference appointed Bro. Butler to draft the following resolution:

In accordance with resolution of the Quarterly Conference to offer thanks to the good people of Melville for their prompt and liberal donations toward defraying the costs of building the new church, erected in place of the house blown down by the cyclone, it gives us great pleasure to say and believe that they fully appreciate the words of Solomon—"Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days"—and to congratulate you, dear fellow-citizens of every denomination, that you all recognize necessity of the worship of one God and Father, and that from him all blessings flow, and that through the preached word from our ministers, and the godly walk of our membership, that that bread may be returned again to you—even the bread of life to every soul, and that we all may be enabled to glorify God together. SAMUEL H. BUTLER,

Chairman Committee, and Sec. of Church.

I will add that, under the fostering care of Revs. A. W. Turner and Jas. R. Roy, Methodism is growing and developing on the Atohafalaya river and the regions thereabout. Four were added to the church at the recent sessions of the Quarterly Conferences and many encouraged and quickened.

Church Burned Down.

Our church at Jacinto, Miss., burned down on the night of July 30. It was the work of an incendiary. Our people had put in a new organ, some new lamps, and other necessary improvements, but all was lost. The community is poor, but our people there are determined to rebuild. Several teachers propose to give a month's salary. Men of Israel, help. If anyone can help us, send to J. W. Ramsey, Rienzi, Miss. Preachers all doing well in the district. T. W. LEWIS.

Dr. Carradine in Meridian, Miss.

Rev. Dr. B. Carradine will hold a revival meeting in Meridian, Miss., from Sept. 30 to Oct. 12. The object of the meeting is the conversion of sinners and the entire sanctification of believers. W. W. HOPPER.

Meridian, Miss, Aug. 9, 1894.

The Malone College.

The Malone College, for the education of girls only, is situated at the junction of the K. C., M. and B. and I. C. R. R., in the town of Holly Springs, the highest point in the State of Mississippi. The property is owned by a stock company; but the college is under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South, at Holly Springs and of the North Mississippi Conference.

The college building is well ventilated and furnished throughout with new furniture, and the fare is just such as the president, his family and the teachers have, for they all eat at the same tables. Our faculty is composed of seven members of the Methodist Church and one Presbyterian. Two of them are daughters of Methodist preachers, and one of them a Methodist preacher's widow. Not one of them could be induced to play a game of cards, pass the wine glass or attend a dance.

Our prices are out low to correspond with the scarcity of money. Board at ten dollars per month. Tuition in collegiate department, three dollars; French, two dollars; music, including use of piano, three dollars; art, two and three dollars. Elocution in class, one dollar. This we are enabled to do by spending no money to publish costly catalogues or send drummers abroad, depending alone on the health and accessibility of our locality and the work we are doing to advertise us.

We closed our last session with forty music pupils, and twice the number of boarders we had the year before.

There are no incidental fees. Patrons are only bound for the time they send; can withdraw at any time. Traveling preachers are charged only half-price for board and tuition.

The next session will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 18, and continue nine months. Payments monthly or in advance. J. W. HONNOLL, Prest.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

HOW CHRISTIANS SHOULD WALK.

(John viii, 12; Jos. xxii, 5; Rom. vi, 4; Gal. v, 16.)

1. Christ is the light of the world. He compares himself to the luminary of our solar system, the sun.

(1) The sun is the source of physical light. Christ has brought life and immortality to light.

(2) From the sun flows all physical warmth. All moral warmth, love, emanates from Christ. God is love.

(3) The sun renders physical life and vegetation possible. When Christ is the impellent, we are zealous of good works.

(4) The sun rises and sets. Thus Christ has his rise in us during regeneration. But here the comparison ceases. The Christian shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

2. The followers of Christ shall not remain in darkness. Sojourning near him, we shall enjoy his light. We walk in his light. We shall be saved.

(1) From the darkness of the head. He bestows wisdom in abundance if entreated. Are led into all truth.

(2) From the darkness of the heart. Enmities, hatreds, hostilities disappear. Love holds sole sway.

(3) From the darkness of life. Such as covetousness, pride, vanity, prodigality, sensuality, etc.

3. The light of life is promised to those who walk not in darkness.

(1) This may mean that Christ, the light of the world, will live in us, his disciples, enabling us to say: "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

(2) It may mean the gift of putting a proper estimate on the things sublimer and things eternal, enabling us thus wisely to choose, as did Moses when he had come to years.

(3) It may mean the life imparted at regeneration. This life, the spiritual life, is immortal. It laughs at death and the grave.

(4) It may mean what in another place is called the crown of life. That is: The object of life accomplished. Delivered from the evil. Attaining foothold on the glorious ascent which culminates at the throne of God.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. A. D. Miller, P. C., Oak Ridge, Miss., Aug. 8: "We have just closed a good meeting at Bradley's Chapel, Warren circuit, Mississippi Conference. Bro. C. D. Cecil, of South Warren circuit, was with me in the first part of the meeting, preaching with power and in demonstration of the Spirit. My people were very much pleased with Bro. Cecil. I was alone in the last part of the meeting. We had a good meeting. The church was much revived, some conversions, and 5 accessions, new members, to the church, To God be all the glory."

Rev. W. F. Sanders, Centerville circuit, Louisiana Conference, July 23: "We have just closed a glorious meeting at Gray's School-house. Results: 15 conversions, 2 reclamations, 10 added to the church; also baptized 4 infants, making 21 added to the church in the past two months, most of which were clear-out, old-time Methodist conversions; or, in other words, they have full salvation. This meeting was of ten days' duration, and is said by many to be the best meeting ever known in that country. Sinners quaked and trembled, penitents saved, and Christians rejoiced in Christ, their Savior. I can not write it all; there is too much of it. I wish I could tell the world of it. Glory be to God, I am drinking at the fountain, and have been all this year. I am so glad Bishop Key sent me back to Centerville. Rev. J. J. Arnold, L. P., stood by me in this battle, and did good work. To God be all the glory."

Rev. H. J. Boltz, Plain Dealing, La.: "We are now domiciled in our new parsonage at Plain Dealing, which has been purchased and repaired since Conference. The people in the town and vicinity of Plain Dealing have done nobly in this line of church work. Methodists, Baptists, Campbellites, Jews and Gentiles have all shown a willingness to aid in advancing the Master's cause. We have had some very interesting meetings since Conference. We have had 33 accessions to the church on the North Bossier circuit this year, and some conversions, and the church greatly revived. We have seven Sunday-schools, all of which are doing good work; four prayer meetings very well attended, and some interest is being manifested. Our congregations have been on the increase ever since the beginning of the second round, and now we have large, attentive congregations at most of the appointments. Our new church at Benton will soon be completed. Financially, our work is far behind, but we hope to have a full report at Conference."

THE BROKEN FOLD.

BY JAMES BUCKHAM.

Dear, my friend, grieve not o'er much
For the vanished voice and touch;
Sit not gazing, white and cold,
At the broken curtain-fold.

Thou this little chamber hast,
But the house is high and vast.
He hath freedom now to go
In and out, and to and fro.

O the crystal-fountained halls!
O the rosy-windowed walls!
O the music and the bloom,
As he treads from room to room!

Backward shall the curtain flow
In the little chamber low?
Shall he here return and dwell,
Bearing sprays of asphodel?

Nay, ah nay! Bide thou awhile
In thy place; nor weep, but smile.
Some day—sweet day!—thou shalt rise,
Smooth the fold, and meet his eyes.

Teaching a Child Self-Control.

As soon as a child is able to understand what is said to him, he ought to be taught and trained to control his impulse to cry and writhe under physical pain. When a child has fallen and hurt himself, or has cut his finger, or has burned his hand, or has been hit by an ill-directed missile, it is natural for him to shriek with pain and fright, and it is natural for his tender-hearted mother to shrink from blaming him just then for indulging in his display of grief. But even at such a time as this, a mother has an unmistakable duty of helping her child to gain a measure of control over himself, so as to repress his cries and to moderate his exhibit of disturbed feeling. A child can exercise self-control under such circumstances. His mother can enable him to do so. It is better for both child and mother that he should have her help accordingly. Because of the lack of help just here many a child is a sufferer through illness in his inability to control himself under physical pain. And because of this inability many a person has actually lost his life, at a time when calmness of mind was essential to that endurance of physical suffering which was the only hope of prolonged existence.

Coaxing and rewarding a child into quiet at such a time is not what is needed; but it is encouraging a child into an intelligent control of himself that is to be aimed at by the wise parent. It is only a choice between evils that substitutes a candy-paid silence for a noisy indulgence of feeling on a child's part. A good illustration of the unwise way of inducing children to seem to have control of themselves, is given in the familiar story of the little fellow throwing himself on the floor and kicking and yelling, and then crying out: "Grandma, grandma, I want to be pacified. Where are your sugar-plums?" Dr. Bushnell, protesting against the method of coaxing a child out of a state of irritation, in a fit of ill-nature, by "dainties which please the taste," says forcefully: "It must be a very dull child which will not cry and fret a great deal, when it is so pleasantly rewarded. Trained in this manner to play ill-nature for sensation's sake, it will go on rapidly, in the course of double attainment, and will be very soon perfected in the double character of an ill-natured, morbid sensualist, and a feigning cheat besides." By what methods or means can the great themes of God and religion get hold of a soul which has learned to be governed only by rewards of sensation, paid to affectation of grief and deliberate acting of ill-nature?—Sunday-School Times.

Wine.

Students who are entering college this Fall should reflect seriously upon the question of wine drinking.

They will often be invited and expected to drink wine, and they will occasionally see their elders drinking at college festivals. They are likely to hear those who drink speak disparagingly of those who decline drinking, and they will read descriptions of banquets in which wine is represented as figuring honorably.

For many other reasons it would be well for students to come to a clear understanding with themselves upon the matter, and make up their minds what is the proper thing for them to do when they are asked to drink.

No one likes to be thought a milk-sop. But even that can be borne, and easily borne, if the accused person knows he is right, and knows why he is right. Clear and certain knowledge is a wonderful help at the moment of temptation, though it is not always sufficient.

To get light upon this subject it is not necessary to go into a library and pore over a heap of books. A healthy young man who drinks wine, or any such fluid, need not be long in doubt whether he has taken into his system a friend or a foe.

He can not help knowing, if he observes himself closely, that the wine is an enemy. He perceives that it increases, not quenches, thirst; that it raises his spirits for half an hour or more, according to the amount used, and depresses them for several hours that follow; that it flushes, excites, disturbs, perverts, and therefore injures him.

If he conscientiously watches its effects, he knows this, and all the sophistry of all the sophists can not disguise the fact from him. He knows it as well as Sydney Smith knew it when he wrote to Lady Holland that, without abstaining from wine, "London was stupefaction and inflammation."

Nothing has been more certainly demonstrated than that the use of alcoholic drinks by young persons in our keen, exciting climate is a mistake, and is to no class so injurious as to students. To them, more than to any other class, wine increases the difficulty of every duty and adds alluring force to every vice.

This is not preaching; it is simple fact, and known to be such by all honest investigators. Students need the best food that civilization can supply, and that food should be eaten in the best manner known to civilized life. But when it comes to intoxicating drinks, there is only one safe and wise rule, which is expressed in one word: Abstain.—Observer.

Family Prayers.

It would seem strange perhaps to some of us if we knew how many Christian homes there are where family prayers are unknown. Stop and think a minute of the people you know who are Christians and perhaps even active in Christian work, and yet who have no regular time for family worship, and therefore neglect it nearly every day. It is very difficult many times to have a regular time for family worship. There are many interruptions. There are sicknesses. There are obstacles sometimes which seem to make it an entire impossibility to get the family together to read and pray. While we must recognize all these difficulties, and while it is really not to be wondered at, perhaps, that family prayer is so often neglected; yet, when we consider the power of family worship in the family life, all hindrances seem as nothing compared to the loss of this powerful influence for good on the parents and children.

In some families we see this privilege is exalted, and the time of family worship is hallowed and reverenced, and nothing breaks in upon it. In some families there is a gathering morning and evening for this purpose. It would unquestionably be embarrassing for a large majority of Christian homes if there were close questionings on this subject.—Union Gospel News.

Faith is never perfected by a morbid introspection, but by "looking away unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." To get our eyes off self and on him—that is the simple secret of increase of faith.—Arthur T. Pierson.

How much religion is there in a church that does not pay its pastor all that it agreed to?

WHICH WINS THE DAY?

BY MARY M. ANDERSON.

A gloomy Frown and a merry Word
Went out for a walk one day;
And they spoke to all they chanced to meet—
The sick, the sad and the gay.

The sick man smiled at the merry Word,
And the sad one looked less sad,
And the gay one laughed till his jolly tone
Made all the echoes glad.

To the gloomy Frown scarce a glance they gave,
But hurried to pass him by,
Afraid, if they looked at his face too long,
They'd echo his dismal sigh.

And ever it's so as we journey on,
And meet them along the way;
We turn from one with a shiver and sigh:
The merry Word wins the day.

The Best Husband.

No man, in my opinion, can be the best husband till he is the minister of his family. As the home is the first church, so the husband is the first minister. He is the high priest of that home; his wife, the high priestess.

If religion means an abiding faith in an almighty power above us, and a true love of God, who is love, together with love in the best sense of all mankind, then I say religion should have its place, a large place, in every home, and the husband should be the one to encourage, by example and sensible teaching, its continued presence there. If he would have the happiest family about him, he will teach—not preach, understand—the doctrines of religion and morality. The father who would have his child, when that child becomes a man, continue in his career in the fullness of Christian faith, must bring up that child amid Christian surroundings. As a rule, those men who are most sincere in their religious belief were imbued with the spirit of religion in childhood.

I can not bring myself to believe that there is enough of religion in our homes to-day—not enough, particularly in this great, seething, crowding, pushing city. Amid the rush, the pace that kills, religion is forgotten. The husband and father has no time for it; he can't even find houseroom for it. As only one man here and there will tolerate religion in his office or place of business, where, then, do the great mass of men keep their religion? Some few keep it within the walls of a church, pay a handsome pew rent for keeping it there, and go take a look at it once every Sunday from eleven to twelve.

I fear that especially among well-to-do families, in the homes of prosperity, religion is almost entirely neglected; at least, the subject is seldom spoken of as an expression of real feeling, except in hushed tones. And yet I do not wish to paint the situation in darker colors than it really is. I do not say that all husbands and fathers neglect religion. If there are great numbers of homes in this city in which religion has no place, there are still many households in which the family lives together in the spirit of Christ's teachings; and when such is the case it is usually because the husband and the wife agree in their religion, and, agreeing in that, agree in all matters, and are the happier. In these homes husband and wife love God and pray and worship together, just as they work, hope, sorrow, and joy together. —Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst, in Demorest's Magazine.

Helping.

The basket of blocks was on the ground, and three rather cross little faces looked down at it.

"It's too heavy for me," said Jimmy.

"Well, you are big as I am, 'cause we are twins," said Nellie.

"I won't carry it," said the little cousin, with a pout.

Mama looked from her open window and saw the trouble.

"One day I saw a picture of three little birds," she said. "They wanted a long stick carried somewhere; but it was too large for anyone of them to carry. What do you think they did?"

"We don't know," said the twins.

"They all took hold of it together," said mama, "and then they could fly away with it."

The children laughed and looked at each other. Then they all took hold together of the basket and found it very easy to carry.

"The way to do all the hard things in this world," said mama, "is for everyone to help a little. No one can do them all; but everyone can help."—Sunbeam.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. B. H. Rawls, P. C., Steen's Creek, Miss., Aug. 7: "We closed a meeting at this place last night after continuing eleven days, resulting in a great revival in the church. Twenty-three accessions and twenty conversions. Revs. T. J. Miller and J. F. Robinson did the preaching. Thank the Lord for his goodness."

Rev. Thos. J. Upton, Alexandria, La.: "I take great pleasure in saying that Rev. R. C. Grace, of Spring Creek circuit, is having fine success on his work. Assisted by Bro. Hoffpauir, he began a meeting at Spring Creek Camp Ground on July 14, which continued until the nineteenth. Results were perfectly satisfactory. On the twenty-first he began a meeting at Hineston, which continued to and included the twenty-sixth, which resulted in 7 accessions to the church and 18 professions of religion. Brethren Suann and Monroe did good service in this meeting, and the writer assisted some. The congregations were large and attentive, and seemed to appreciate the word. I find that Bro. Grace is very much interested in his word, and the people are greatly devoted to him as a minister of the gospel and a Christian gentleman. No man ever labored more assiduously and earnestly for souls than he, and the Lord owns and blesses his labors."

Rev. D. M. Geddie, P. C., Eureka Springs, Miss., July 31: "I closed my first meeting on Panola charge last Friday. It was a great success. The Holy Spirit honored us with his presence and power from the first service to the close. Rev. A. J. Jones, of Pleasant Hill, Miss., reached us in compliance with previous engagement on Monday night, and did the preaching. Bro. Jones seems to be perfectly at home in the pulpit. He preaches the gospel of Christ in a simple, earnest, forceful way, without any of the orator's tricks or the modern evangelist's claptrap. Sinners tremble, repent, believe and Christians rejoice under the divine magnetism and pathos of his earnest pleadings. The church was greatly edified, 15 souls brought from darkness to light, and 16 names added to the roll of membership. There were but few left in the community to champion the cause of unrighteousness, and the Epworth League has taken charge of them. Knowing as we do how energetic, wide awake and enthusiastic our young people are for the kingdom of Christ and lost souls, we feel confident that they, too, will be brought into the ark of Christ's church, and numbered with the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty."

Rev. John H. Rogers, P. C., Poplar Creek circuit, Kosciusko district, North Mississippi Conference: "We have just closed the most powerful meeting ever held at old Bethel Church, with increasing interest at every service. The fire spread more and more until the whole community was reached. At a low estimate, there were one hundred conversions in and out of the church. Many members received such a baptism of power that they said they had never been converted before. The class converted were those from childhood to old age. I never have been in such a sweeping revival. I never saw a community of young people worked to a higher point of consecration. Thank God we have won a victory here that will outlive the stars. We have received 31 into our church. Many will join the Baptist and Presbyterian. We were assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss., who has given himself to the evangelistic work. He preaches the old-time religion with the Holy Ghost and with power. He conducts a revival in a manner peculiar to himself. Bro. Bass is a man of thorough consecration, a skillful leader of the host of Israel. He knows how to put the church to work and win sinners to Christ. He preaches the doctrines of repentance and regeneration by the Holy Ghost. He won the hearts of all who heard him. He has promised to be with us again next July. He will also be with me again in September at Wesley's Chapel. We ask an interest in the prayers of all the brethren."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. B. W. Lewis, Martinsville, Miss., Aug. 4: "Yesterday closed a most gracious revival of five days' duration at Pleasant Ridge. Bro. Henry Norton was with us in all his zeal, and truly God blessed us in our efforts. Bro. Barrington conducted the singing, and as the voices went up in pleading or in praise, in mourning or rejoicing, we hardly knew to whom the converting was due—preacher or singer. There were twenty accessions to the church and a great revival among those already belonging, proving that the Lord was with us and that he answered prayers. Pray for us, that the work begun will not close with the meeting, but is for all eternity."

Rev. J. T. Abney, assistant P. C., McComb, Miss., July 25: "We began a meeting at Muddy Springs, Saturday before the third Sunday in July, and closed the following Friday, assisted by Bros. J. W. Saudell, W. M. Sullivan, M. J. Miller and three Bros. Alford. The Lord was with us in power. Many were heard to shout aloud the praises of God. There were, at least, 40 souls bore unto God, the church greatly revived, several family altars erected; 7 added to the church and much good done generally. We express our regret that Bro. Boone's health would not permit his presence with us. The Lord abundantly bless him and his family. We tender our thanks to the brethren for their kind assistance, and pray that they may be the instruments in God's hands for winning many souls for Christ."

Rev. J. W. Raper, Nettleton circuit, North Mississippi Conference, July 23: "We have just closed a gracious revival at Mt. Zion Church. We had eleven conversions and three accessions to the church, with more to follow. The church was wonderfully revived. Backsliders were reclaimed and promised to live better and to give more of their time to the Lord. Several promised to hold prayer in their families and to raise their children for God. We begun the meeting Sunday at eleven, and worked on till Tuesday night, when the Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of the Fulton circuit, came to us. After his arrival he did the preaching until Friday. His preaching was accompanied by the Holy Spirit and did much good. Our people have greatly fallen in love with him. We pray that the blessings of God may attend him and his work."

Rev. Jas. G. Shiley, P. C., Columbia circuit, Mississippi Conference, July 20: "We closed on Wednesday last our protracted meeting at Advance Church. I have experienced opposition before, but nothing to compare with what I there had to contend with. Some three or four years ago a second-blessing sanctification-ist came into that community, held a meeting and led some persons to believe they had received sanctification as a second work of grace. After they received this blessing they were too pore to stay in the church with such sinners as composed it, and so drew off. Since then these misguided folks have spent their entire strength fighting the church. During my meeting they did the most determined hand-to-hand work to prevent penitents from seeking their salvation and joining the church. Their opposition to truth and the church is most violent and bitter. But, notwithstanding all this, we had a good and successful meeting, all things considered. Bros. J. H. Winborn and Thos. Boon assisted. The small membership was made abundantly happy, 5 were added to the church, 5 children were baptized, and, at least, 1 person was born from above. The prospects are that our meetings this summer will be successful in all respects."

S. A. Ellis, Potts Camp, North Mississippi Conference: "I send notice of a meeting which commenced at Potts Camp July 17, and continued until the twentieth. It was conducted by the pastor, M. D. Fly. Bro. Jeco, of Abbeville circuit, and Bro. Stanley, of the St. Louis Conference, assisted him a few days. After that they let the whole burden fall on Bro. Fly; but he was fully master of the situation. He preached a series of sermons that were truly colossal. So sublime and logical were his arguments, that the very citadel of Satan was shaken. His eloquence was so overwhelming that the congregations were spellbound. Quite a number were penitents, and about 10 were converted and joined the church. The church was greatly revived. So much so, that there were a very large number that testified for the Lord. So God has greatly blessed our town. I have this to say in regard to Bro. Fly, that he is emphatically a pulpit orator, and is fully able to fill any pulpit in our Conference. We all love Bro. Fly. All praise to God for the Holy Ghost, which has been poured out upon us. We can say truly, Glory to God in the highest; and our prayer is that the many penitents that were still left at the altar may be abundantly blessed."

Rev. W. M. Williams, P. C., "Bro. J. C. Long began a meeting for us at Union on Saturday before the second Sunday in July. We had a very harmonious and soul-stirring meeting among the Christians. We only had three accessions. This come-outism is preached and practiced in that section as well as many other isms and notions. Oh, for the power of God to break the very backbone of over-righteous, self-opinionated, self-constituted religious critics, that think themselves wiser and better than the whole Methodist Church! We have just closed a very fine meeting at Coushatta. Bro. C. McDonald, our presiding elder, was with us from Saturday till after the eleven o'clock services Sunday. Bro. R. F. Witt came to our help Tuesday night and did the balance of the preaching. I never saw such united effort upon the part of Christians of all denominations. We all agreed as touching one thing—the salvation of sinners. I think there were about twenty-five conversions. Thirteen united with our church. I think eight said they would unite with the Baptist Church. There were others that were undecided. I think everyone of any denomination that attended the meeting was revived. I never heard one say: 'I don't believe in propositions. I don't believe in going to the altar.' But they came into the altar and worked and talked to mourners, and God graciously blessed them and their friends, for whom they worked. God was with us in power from the beginning. Bless the Lord, O my soul! is the prayer of everyone."

"Observer," Learned, Miss., July 23: "Children's Day was celebrated at our church on the fourth Sunday of May. The church was full to overflowing. The regular program was beautifully carried out, and several interesting essays and recitations added. Our faithful superintendent, Bro. B. C. Chase, deserves great credit, as do also his teachers, who put forth their best efforts to make Children's Day a success. Miss Beulah Chase, our organist and leader of the choir, was much complimented for training the children and for the good music rendered. An old gentleman was heard to say, with tears in his eyes, 'This has been one of the most pleasant days of my life.' After finishing the exercise on the program we adjourned to a grove and partook of a bountiful dinner provided by the good people of all denominations. After dinner we returned to the church, and some beautiful recitations and essays were rendered. An essay by Miss Mary Bush, entitled 'Little Things,' and one by Miss Mary Fisher, and one by Miss Lizzie Lowry, were highly interesting. A temperance recitation by Miss Beulah Chase was beautifully rendered. Tears trickled down the cheeks of the audience as she depicted the curse of intemperance. Little Madeel Horn, only four years old, sang, 'I am a little soldier working for my Savior.' The audience could not refrain from applauding her; it was sung so sweetly and loud enough to be heard by all. Bro. Rutledge, our preacher, gave us all a good Sunday-school talk, and asked all to be more zealous in the Sunday-school cause. A collection was taken up amounting to several dollars."

JOHNSON—Little Noonan, infant son of Mr. N. D. and Mrs. Lizzie Johnson, of Lanesville, La., was born Aug. 3, 1893, and died July 26, 1894.

Thus the Master has folded another lamb to await the arrival of loved ones left behind.

B.

BROWN—Edwann W. Brown, son of Z. J. Brown, of White Castle, La., was found by his aunt in a little pool of water not over his head, but he was drowned. He had been absent only a few minutes. His mother preceded her son to the land of promise not long before, but Eddie had not ceased to pray for mama at his father's knee. He was three years and some months old. He was an interesting little boy, and it is enough to say his father's heart is all broken up. Many tears were shed for the dear boy.

Wily Brown.

HUTCHINS—Douglas Walter, infant son of W. L. and Lizzie Hennington Hutchins, of Lake Charles, La., was born Sept. 19, 1892, and died July 31, 1894, after an illness and great suffering of two months' duration.

This brief life developed rare precociousness, both of character and intellect. It was a bright flower plucked from the family garden. But the Lord gave him, and he has taken him back. It is our part to submit and not murmur at what God does. "My grace is sufficient for thee."

The Mother's Pastor.

CLARK—Died in Lake Charles, La., Nov. 10, 1893, Mrs. Kate Clark, daughter of Gilbert Sloan and Susan Andrus.

I have known her from my childhood, and never met a more patient, trustful Christian woman. She had many sorrows, borne with meekness and humble submission, testifying constantly to the sweet spirit of the text, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." God took her husband, and one by one several little boys, until only one son was left to cheer her broken spirit. This boy was the delight of her heart. She raised him in the fear of the Lord, and he was her comfort and support in her declining years. May he meet her where partings never come! She was kind to all with whom she came in contact, and all could see that she had been with Jesus and learned of him." She followed him on earth, and has gone to receive the crown of rejoicing prepared for all who are washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. We shall meet beyond the river.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The hope is general about the Senate that the present will be the last week of the session.

Another councilman was indicted for bribery by the Grand Jury, last week, in this city.

The pool-rooms of Troy, N. Y., are resisting an order of the police to close up. They allege that they do not sell pools, but conduct a telegraphic business between persons who want to bet on the races.

A disastrous collision occurred between two express trains on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railway in Missouri, on Aug. 12. Two trainmen were killed and several passengers were injured, and the engines, baggage and express cars were completely destroyed.

A train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad went over a trestle forty feet high at Salt Creek, near Lincoln, Neb., on Aug. 10. All the indications point to train wreckers as the cause. The forward coaches were crushed with their occupants, and fire consumed the entire mass of wreckage. Over a score of passengers were either killed or wounded.

Gov. Matthews, of Indiana, is the sort of a man to have in the place. He promptly called out the military to suppress rioting, and now he is putting up his own money to pay the soldier boys. He says that many of them are too poor to wait till the money can be appropriated by the Legislature, so he is paying it himself, trusting the Legislature to return it to him. It will take $50,000 to meet all the demands.

The River and Harbor appropriation bill, which has been agreed to in both Houses, provides for three new projects which have long been sought. They are a boat railway to overcome the obstruction at the dalles of the Columbia river in Oregon and Washington; another is for a canal to connect Lakes Union and Washington with Puget Sound, and the third to begin the construction of a lock in the Mississippi river between St. Paul and Minneapolis, to extend the head of navigation to the last-named place.

The Pullman Company claims that it must find houses for its new employees to live in, and as the strikers have been camping in the Pullman flats without paying a cent of rent the last three months, they must get out. The move is the very last in the big strike, and it will forever discomfit the employees. The company's houses cover about 3,000 people at present. These 3,000 consist of the striking workmen and their families. There are about 1,000 new men in the shops that have families and that desire to live near their work. The old employees must make way for the new.

After many months of contention, Congress passed the Tariff bill on Aug. 13. The bill has now been accepted by both Houses and goes direct to the President for approval. It is not known whether the President will sign the bill or permit it to become law without his signature, but it is certain there will be no veto. At one blow the sugar growers are deprived of practically one-half of the protection they have hitherto been accorded, and in the case of the present crop the protection will be much less than half its former figure, because of the enormous stocks of raw sugar which the trust has accumulated in anticipation of the passage of the Senate bill. Although Representative Robertson has introduced a bill in the House providing for a bounty on this year's crop, it would be folly for the sugar producers to entertain the slightest hope of the passage of such a measure.

FOREIGN.

The government of Honduras has offered 5,000 troops to Nicaragua in order to aid the latter country in its operations against the rebels in the Mosquito territory.

The American Presbyterian Church at Shnkiang, China, has been destroyed by a mob. All the missionaries escaped, but a Chinese convert was beaten to death.

The Prince of Wales visited the United States cruiser Chicago at Cowes, Aug. 11. He was received with a royal salute and the crew of the American warship manned the yards in his honor.

At Dijon, France, on Aug. 10, three anarchists were convicted on the charge of upholding the action of Cesario, who assassinated President Carnot. One of them was sentenced to three years' imprisonment, and the other two to five years each.

Just at this time when China needs all the improved arms she can secure, the factory and steel and iron works established by the viceroy, Chang Chi Tung, of Hu Kuang, at Han Yang, have been destroyed by an incendiary fire. The loss will amount to $1,000,000. The incendiary is thought to be a coolie who had been severely punished by the officials in charge of the works.

The past week or ten days have been without important engagements between the Chinese and Japanese. Both sides, however, are hurrying forward war preparations, and it is evident that a prolonged and bitter conflict has been entered upon. The first fighting reported since the series of battles in Corea, more than a week ago, occurred Friday. The Japanese fleet made a bold attempt to capture the Chinese naval station at Wei-Hai-Wei, but were driven off by the fire of the forts.

Cholera is slowly, but steadily spreading in Germany. The disease has obtained a foothold in nineteen provinces, where deaths by hundreds are recorded daily. Cholera exists in seventeen districts of Galacia, and scores of deaths from the disease take place every day in that section.

It is stated that nearly 3,000 Russians are in Eastern Siberia and they have with them sixty-four heavy guns. This in connection with the fact that Russia has sent eight warships under sealed orders to Corea, and that the commander-in-chief of Eastern Siberia has been instructed to hold the troops of that district in readiness to march at any moment is regarded as significant.

S. J. DAVIES, P. E.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

BY J. R. EASTWOOD.

Not fancy, merely, or the rush
Of feeling, guides the pen or brush,
As tint by tint, and line by line,
The verses grow, the colors shine!
We find with these the crowning art,
Whose magic can alone impart
To genius all its highest gains—
The faculty of taking pains.

Lo, for the joy of years to be,
Destined for immortality,
We hail the statue's marble grace,
The loveliness of form and face.
Nor dream what hours the sculptor wrought
With tireless hand and anxious thought,
Till from the stone, with stroke on stroke,
The unveiled beauty stirred and woke!

The rapt musician, whose sweet strain
Bids vanquished sorrow smile again,
Threw his whole soul, the while he wrote,
Into each heaven-aspiring note,
Pausing a thousand times before
His judgment passed the perfect score;
For, holding meaner work in scorn,
He toiled for ages yet unborn!

They learn the secret of success,
Who seek—content with nothing less—
Perfection, with no aim beside,
And, missing this, dissatisfied!
And they alone, in life's brief day,
To fame and honor win their way,
Who first achieve, for such high gains,
The strenuous art of taking pains.

Woman's Work in Brazil.

(Published by order of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference, June, 1894.)

A missionary, writing for the Missionary Review of the World, says: "South America, though, perhaps, least heard of and least thought of, has its own case to urge, its own plea to make." We can say this specially of Brazil, that fair country situated in the central portion of our southern continent; rich in all the varied and beautiful possessions of creation, sparkling with many-hued gems, but having the light of life darkened by the grossest superstition and fanaticism. Our blessed Master said, "If, therefore, the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!" Can not we say of Brazil that the light that is in her is darkness indeed? The existence of such gross superstition is necessarily accompanied by great ignorance. "The Bible is not read; the gospel is not preached; the right to search the Scriptures is not conceded; the authority of Pope, Bishops and priests is made absolute; the Virgin Mary is the chief object of worship; Jesus is to be approached through his mother; the saints are made intercessors with God and the Virgin Mary and Jesus." The result of such teaching is shown in the corrupt lives of the priests and the many kinds of vice indulged in by the people. Miss Watts, in her last letter to our Missionary Advocate, gives us a hint of this corruption.

Brazil has a population of 14,000,000, of which 2,000,000 only have the gospel preached, or have any knowledge of Christ. Only about thirteen per cent. of the population can read and write, and, with a few exceptions, there are no schools worthy of the name, while the public schools provided by the government are poorly equipped, and do little toward educating the people, except in superstition and depravity. The priests, as a rule, are ignorant men. The question is often asked, Why do you send missionaries to such countries as Brazil, which already have the gospel, perverted, perhaps, but still some knowledge of Christ? Their arguments are based on the assertion that even muddy water will quench thirst; but, dear sisters, can the fountain of living water springing up within us be anything but pure? Let us send these darkened souls the pure water of life, that they may drink and never thirst.

Since the change in the form of the government of Brazil from a monarchy to a republic, the door of that country is opened before us as it has never been, for is it strange that the people who have modeled their government after that of our own land should look to us as a Christian nation for help and counsel? While the Church of Rome was the Church of State, the people clung to it, and would defend it even with their lives; but the most cultured and enlightened people of Brazil have long seen the evils and corruption of their religion, and since the introduction of the Protestant faith have become more and more dissatisfied. Rev. J. L. Kennedy tells us that multitudes of the people have swung loose from the fetters of Rome, and are lapsing into infidelity. We want to bend every energy to give them the true light. Do we all know, dear friends, that so far none but Americans have been called to send the gospel to those nations in America who are without this light? It seems that God intends us to do the work; but if we fail to do it, as he has given us the ability and opportunity, he is able to raise up those who will, and the talent that was ours will be taken away and given to him who has ten talents.

The Methodist Church, as well as other denominations, is at work in Brazil. The Parent Board of the M. E. Church, South, has one Conference, comprising three districts. They have established schools for the education and training of Christian workers, and the reports from the work are encouraging, but they need help, and Bishop Wilson says: "Brazil—God help it!—requires all the forces of the gospel for its redemption, and no class of missionaries can find better opportunity or reap larger results, notwithstanding the disadvantages under which they must labor, than the women."

Our Woman's Board of Missions has been interested in the work in Brazil since its organization, though they did not send a missionary to that field till 1881, when Miss Watts, of Louisville, went out to take charge of a school in Piracicaba, where she labored faithfully for one year with only one scholar. She won the confidence and respect of the people, however, and has had a flourishing school ever since. The beautiful buildings occupied by "Collegio Piracicabano Americano" are owned and were erected for this purpose by our Board.

By the advice of Bishop Granbery, the next point entered by the women was Rio, the capital city of Brazil. The funds for purchasing a building here were raised as a centenary offering, and the school was established in 1887, with Miss Bruce, who had then been in the field three years, as principal. After continuing the work for several years in Rio under the disadvantages caused by frequent epidemics of yellow fever, our Board very reluctantly decided to close the boarding-school there, but opened an institution at Juiz de Fora, in the State of Minas Geraes, with the same principal, Miss Bruce, leaving a day-school at Rio under the care of Miss Ross, which has continued with success for two years.

Juiz de Fora is delightfully situated in the mountainous section, is only about seven hours' run from Rio, and is quite a health resort. A boys' school has also been established at this point by the Parent Board. Collegio Mineiro has met with wonderful success, but the ladies are occupying two rented houses, and because they have not been able to secure suitable buildings, the work does not advance as rapidly as it might.

Since establishing work in Brazil our Board has sent out sixteen missionaries, [one of whom, as we all know—our beloved Anna Clara Chrisman—did not reach the field, but found a grave in her own land and among her dear ones; but, as she gave her life for Brazil, ought not we to feel a special interest there? Do you remember that when she was called to her reward, while on her way to Brazil, that Miss Sallie Phillips, of Louisiana, offered herself to fill the vacancy? Miss Phillips' approaching marriage will sever her connection with the Woman's Board, and Clara Chrisman's place in Brazil will again be vacant. May not this vacancy be filled by one of Mississippi's daughters? We come nearer home and ask, May it not be filled by some member of the Mississippi Conference Society? Of the fifteen who have labored in this field, only eight remain, several having been lost by marriage and others by resignation. The first two who went to Brazil, Miss Mattie Watts and Miss Mary Bruce, are still with our Board, and have labored as none can, save those who put their faith entirely in the Lord Jesus Christ, and look to him to bless and keep them. They are both at home now. This leaves in the field Misses Phillips and Alice Moore, at Piracicaba; Misses Ross, Littlejohn and Bessie Moore, at Juiz de Fora, and Miss Amelia Elerding at Rio, in charge of the day-school.

The troubles caused by the late revolution, and the absence of both Miss Watts and Miss Bruce, and the fact that those who remain at work are not all well and strong, have crippled our work in Brazil, but the outlook is brightening, for Miss Watts will return to her labors next month with renewed energy, zeal and preparation for the Master's work; and it is announced that Miss Layona Glenn, of Georgia, one of the recent graduates of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, will return with her.

The great need of Brazil to-day is not only the gospel as it is preached from the pulpit, but Christian education and the influence exerted by Christian teachers. Who but God can tell of the good that has already been accomplished by our schools in Brazil, and by the example of the consecrated women who have gone out to teach in these schools? They make no compromise with Romanism, but teach and instruct their pupils in the Bible and in Christian principles, and their labors have been blessed in the salvation of souls. Beside their duties in the school-room, our missionaries are bearing the message of eternal life to many homes, and every moment of their time is taken up in service for the Lord. Their purpose among these people is "to open their eyes, and turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God." "What shall 'we' render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward 'us?'" Our prayers are helpful. Do we pray faithfully that God will bless the labors of those who have gone out to bear his Word and his will to those who sit in darkness, and that he will strengthen and keep them? "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The commission is surely to every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. All are not called, all are not qualified to go, but we can give of our means to send the Word, not stintingly or sparingly, but abundantly, for does not all we have belong to God? And the command is, "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first-fruits of all thine increase." Do we give the first-fruits to our Lord's work, or do we first supply our own needs—imaginary though many of them may be—and give the remnant, or, perhaps, only a part of it, to the spread of his kingdom, when he hath said, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse?"

Dear friends, there are some who can go. Is there not one here who has heard the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" Will not the answer go back, "Here am I; send me"? Just as sure as the call is heard, and the heart willing to respond, the dear Lord will prepare thee for the work as he did the prophet of old, by sending a coal from off his altar to touch thy lips. Is there not one who has consecrated herself to God's service, and for this reason is singing praises with gladness in her heart, who can and will enter the missionary field? "Now ye have consecrated yourselves unto the Lord, come near and bring sacrifices and thank-offerings unto the house of the Lord." What offering so acceptable as ourselves, the first-fruits indeed?

Dear sisters, "the harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth more laborers into his harvest."

MRS. E. D. JONES,

"Don't Oppose Holiness."

I have heard this deprecatory request made more than once. I think this request is the outcome of a needless fear. No Methodist minister (not to say ministers of sister churches) that I have heard, in a long and large experience, has ever opposed holiness. They have all preached it, and almost unanimously lived it, as they have understood it to be taught in God's Word. All have taught men to "do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God." All have taught their hearers that they must deny themselves "ungodliness and worldly lust; to live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world; to be a peculiar people, zealous of good works; to add to their faith all the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit, and to grow in grace and the knowledge of Christ."

Personally, I have never known a man that I thought was too good. The danger of excess in this direction, I think, is too small to be an appreciable quantity. I must confess I do not feel the least alarm. Yea, let us be holy in heart and life, and adorn the doctrine of God, our Savior. It may be, however, that our brethren who are afraid "holiness" is going to be opposed may only mean that technical and peculiar form of it known as the "second blessing." I wish it to be understood that I do not mean to antagonize holiness; not even the phase of it known as the "second blessing." If brethren believe it, let them; and if they are made better and happier by it, amen! But as they insist on the rest of us adopting their views and possessing their experience, a decent respect for their views on this point, and for the opinions of others, makes it due to ourselves not to attack or quarrel with them, but to state as plainly and succinctly as we may the reasons that render to us the doctrine of difficult, if not of impossible, reception.

I have read the Holy Scriptures with prayer, with close attention, and the best helps I could secure, for more than half a century, and I have noted with care every text that treats of regeneration in the New Testament, and I have not found one that has made the impression on me that regeneration is a partial or imperfect work; and if it be not, where is the need of a supplementary and second cleansing? As we see it, nothing is needed by the spiritual "babe" but the guidance and support of the "Word," that it may grow thereby. They are the temples of the Holy Ghost, and he will guide them into all sanctifying and saving truth.

The next difficulty in the reception of the partial regeneration and "second-blessing" theory is the vagueness and variety of the statements of the advocates and professors of this doctrine. Some years ago Bishop Janes got together a large number, perhaps a hundred preachers, with the purpose of formulating some definite statements in relation to this second cleansing or blessing; but they failed to agree, and separated without arriving at any clear-cut and well-defined statement. I have read Wesley, Fletcher, Watson, Peck, Foster, Summers, Boland. I have read many articles and heard many sermons. Some say the blessing is gradually attained and realized; others, that it is instantaneous. Some that it is an experience as well defined and distinct in the consciousness as pardon, regeneration and adoption; others say that they believe there are those who are the subjects of this gracious secondary work of grace, without realizing what it is. In the work of seeking and finding, the statements show variety. Some find it, hardly expecting it, somewhat surprised; others have remarkable visions. Some who are seeking are urged to get up and profess it, and they will have it. After profession some say they can not sin; some that they are not susceptible of temptation, and that they are as holy as the Lord Jesus. Such a variety and contrariety of statements might well make one pause and ask: "What is it I am seeking? What am I to expect? How am I to attain it?"

Another difficulty to me is this: Unregenerate men still in spiritual darkness are enabled so to understand the plan of salvation as to realize pardon, regeneration and adoption; but multitudes long since walking in the light, and students of the Book that is able to make them wise, are not able intelligently to seek the "second blessing"—not knowing what it really is, and how they are to obtain it.

Another difficulty in accepting partial regeneration and the necessity of a second cleansing is this: It assumes that God will fully pardon all my sins that I have voluntarily committed, and for which I am to blame, but will not fully cleanse me from the "carnal mind," for which I am not to blame, seeing I inherit it, but leaves me only partially cleansed, and the victim of a carnality that is enmity against God, and continually inclines me to sin.

Another difficulty in the way of accepting this theory is that it teaches that God adopts me as his child and joint-heir with Christ, while within me there are the remains of the carnal mind, which is enmity against him, and not subject to his law. I am not able to believe this.

Another objection to the theory is that its advocates continually insist that in order to the retention of this "second blessing" it is essential to be constantly professing it—"witnessing," as it is called. Now, perfection in holiness must necessarily involve perfection in humility, but it must be a paradox to suppose perfect humility must be constantly advertising itself in order to maintain its existence.

And, finally, another reason for not accepting the theory is that its advocates proclaim that there is great danger of losing this exalted experience, and the sad fact that it is so often lost. In more than a half century of ministerial life I have heard multitudes of experiences, and all along I have been pained to hear how many have lost this special experience—a very much larger proportion than of those who professed no more than to be "new creatures in Christ." I have heard of a case of a preacher who had lost and found this special blessing some eight times. It is to be hoped, however, that this is a phenomenal case. It has always seemed to me the more Christly, the stronger and securer we ought to be, and the greater likelihood of being faithful unto death, instead of being in greater danger of failing.

There are a number of other difficulties in the way of accepting the theory, but let what has been said suffice for this writing. J. B. WALKER.

Hinds County Prohibition Election.

At the July meeting of the Board of Supervisors the Prohibitionists of Hinds county filed a petition submitting the question to the qualified electors whether or not alcoholic and malt liquors should be sold in the county. After a most careful comparison of the names on this list with the qualified voters, it was found that it contained more than the requisite number, one-third, and the Board ordered the election for Tuesday, July 31. Immediately the Prohibitionists quietly, but earnestly, set to work organizing for the campaign. A central club was formed, with Mr. C. H. Alexander as president; Capt. Calvin Wells, vice-president—two of our best lawyers, official members of the Presbyterian Church, and leading citizens; and H. H. Hines, secretary, with T. P. Barr, treasurer, and a large Executive Committee of our very best men. This club held meetings two or three times a week; appointed sub-executive committees at every precinct in the county, with whom constant communication was kept up. Lists of all the qualified electors were furnished them, so that they had little or no trouble in getting the right men to the polls on election day. But few speeches were made. Mr. Alexander, Capt. Wells, Rev. F. M. Harmon, of the Christian Church; Rev. Dr. Murrah, president of Millsaps College, each made effective speeches in two or three places in the county. The club sent out an appeal to the ministers throughout the county to preach a sermon on prohibition the Sunday before the election, to which very general response was made. Dr. West, of the Capitol Street Methodist Church; Rev. A. F. Watkins, of the First Methodist, and Rev. F. M. Harmon, of the Christian Church, preached excellent sermons. I had the pleasure of listening to the one preached by Rev. A. F. Watkins, which was most eloquently delivered and soundly convincing in argument. Truly, it was a grand sermon, and just such, if preached in every community, the saloons would be driven, like affrighted ghosts, from the State, and there would be no need of prohibition elections any more. Will not our preachers generally take the hint and govern themselves in future accordingly? The election was the most quiet and orderly of any we have ever had, and resulted in a splendid victory for the Prohibitionists, more than 300 being their majority.

Mr. Editor, permit me to mention Mr. T. P. Barr, a faithful steward of the First Methodist Church, who, from the beginning to end of the campaign, did most effectual work. At all times and under all circumstances he could be found in the vanguard in the thickest of the fight—everywhere where duty called. He worked with the zeal of one who knows he is in the right, working for God and home and country. He now has a reward in the pleasure of seeing the city after the first of next June free from the curse of the saloon, with all its concomitant evils. Some other names, had we time and you space, I should mention, did good work; but suffice it to say, they will have their reward in the consciousness of knowing that our Capital City of Jackson, the great center of education for our boys and girls, is soon to be freed from the curse of the saloon.

Besides the public schools, the best in the State, we have Millsaps College for boys, and Belhaven for girls, and for the colored boys we have the Jackson Academy, and for the colored girls the Mary Holmes Academy—both good schools, and doing well.

Surely we have too much at stake to ever again permit the accursed saloon in our midst, and, by the help of God, we never will.

In the Living Present.

The Tariff bill passed by both Houses of Congress is that presented by Congressman Wilson, smothered by several hundred amendments introduced in the Senate. Have had an object-lesson in "how not to do it." The adoption in the Lower House of several special bills, among them one to put sugar on the free list, are obviously mere "blinds" to cover retreat. They will furnish fine material for sky-rockets during campaign speeches.

The Coxey movement, which for a while seemed to assume threatening dimensions, has collapsed. Coxey is now posing as candidate for Congress. He sought notoriety, it would appear, for this very purpose. His followers, duped ignoramuses, though tramps, are now the pest of the farmers whose homes they infest.

The outcome of the Coxey movement exposes a very weak point in our national character. We crave for sensation. Notoriety succeeds better than popularity. Sullivan, after his successful fight with Kilrain, was engaged as an attraction by a theatrical company. Though a mere dummy, he enriched his employers. Madeline Pollard is about to be similarly engaged. What is it that gives some preachers such phenomenal success? Alas!

The great strike has come to naught. Debs, too, will somewhere appear as candidate for political office. What does he and co-demagogues care for the poor laborers who have lost millions of dollars in wages? Sad, that in our age of boasted general intelligence the masses can be so readily led astray by designing men! Capitalists ought not, and will not, submit to the dictations of impecunious labor. Denouncing capital and unduly extolling labor is preaching rudimentary anarchism. The poor, Christ says, ye have always with you. Labor, say what you will, is a mercantile commodity. Demand fixes the value. Forced and fictitious valuation will not stand. Compromise is difficult. Sometimes even the judges of the United States Supreme Court disagree on a given question.

The "law's delays" are not so exasperatingly observed in France as in our country. Within six weeks after the murder of President Carnot the anarchistic slayer was guillotined. He was executed on Aug. 16. He refused to receive a priest. In an interview during his incarceration the benighted criminal is reported to have remarked: "When a child I believed in God. Since then I have learned that not God made man, but that man made God." A commentary is unnecessary.

ICHDIEK.

Never.

Never neglect daily private prayers; and when you pray, remember that God is present, and that he hears your prayers.

Never neglect daily private Bible reading; and when you read, remember that God is speaking to you, and that you are to believe and act upon what he says. All backsliding begins with the neglect of these two rules.

Never ask God for anything you do not want. Tell him the truth about yourself, however bad it makes you; and then ask him for Christ's sake to forgive you what you are and make you what you ought to be.

Never let a day pass without trying to do something for Jesus. Every night reflect on what Jesus has done for you, and then ask yourself: "What have I done to-day for him?"

If ever you are in doubt as to anything being right or wrong, go to your room, and kneel down and ask God's blessing upon it (Col. iii, 17). If you can not do this, it is wrong.

Never take your Christianity from Christians; nor argue that, because such and such people do so and so, therefore you may. You are to ask yourself: "How would Christ act in my place?" and strive to follow him.

Never believe what you feel if it contradicts God's Word.—Phillipsburg Dispatch.

ANSWERED.

BY MRS. M. A. HELLER.

"Give us this day our daily bread,"
In humble trust we pray;
Then do not idly fold our hands,
And with assurance say:
"As ravens in the olden time
The hungry prophet fed,
So we shall have our wants supplied;
For God will give us bread."

Oh, no, not so, the answer comes,
God never willed it so;
The earth must first receive the seed
Before the grain can grow;
Then, watered by the rain of heaven,
And nurtured by the sun,
The blade springs up, and in that blade
The answer is begun.

When harvest comes the ripened grain
In golden sheaves is bound;
Then gathered in, and threshed and cleaned,
And in the mills is ground.
By busy hands, in myriad homes,
The fresh, brown loaves are made;
This is the "bread" and this the "day"
For which, long since, we prayed.

A Gun that Kicks.

Rev. T. L. Mellen "is aggressive, if not vicious, in his attacks on Bishop Hargrove," and on the Committee on Episcopacy, and on the action of the last General Conference in passing the character of said Bishop, and on six out of the ten Bishops. The proof of this statement is found in his communication in the ADVOCATE, of Aug. 2. Let us see.

Of Bishop Hargrove he says: "His official character and administration tainted for all time, and forever subject to the most unfavorable inferences." This he says in face of the fact that the Bishop's character and official administration were passed upon and approved by the General Conference by an overwhelming majority.

Of the Committee on Episcopacy, Bro. Mellen writes such words as these: "Miserable performance of the committee," "shirking responsibility," "refusing to decide questions of law," "dodging," "trying to screen by the late lamentable committee." These are samples of the untempered zeal of our good Bro. Mellen. Such writing is not creditable to him. It reflects badly on his wise head, good heart and high attainments in the divine life.

What Bro. Mellen says of this committee applies to the General Conference, for the Conference received, considered and adopted the report of that committee. The General Conference passed the character and approved the administration of Bishop Hargrove. A very small minority signed the protest written by Bro. Mellen. Bro. Mellen and "twenty-three others" were with three hundred and nineteen contrary men who "shirked," "dodged," "screened" the Bishop.

It is remarkable that so few honest, honorable, high-toned, law-abiding and manly men were elected to the General Conference, and still more remarkable that the "shirks," "dodgers," and those disposed to "screen" the Bishop, got on the Committee on Episcopacy.

Bro. Mellen tells us he was on the Committee on Appeals, and that "it did not shirk duty." Why, of course not. It had, at least, one true, good, brave man on it. That committee reversed the action of the Tennessee Conference in the Kelley case, not on the rulings of the Bishop, but on the merits of the case. If the rulings of the Bishop were wrong, the case should have been remanded for a new trial, and not reversed. Why did Bro. Mellen let it go this way?

Bro. Mellen says: "If that Committee on Episcopacy had done their duty, they would have, at least, criticised those five other Bishops" whose advice Bishop Hargrove sought in this case. It seems to me the Committee on Episcopacy knew their duty as well as Bro. Mellen did. Perhaps it might be well enough to make him advisor-general to the General Conference and its committees. I call this kind of writing very "aggressive," if not essentially "vicious."

Much learning and an excess of zeal—if not of piety—have made Bro. Mellen mad. Listen, now, and see. "I go farther and say that never before has one been so openly honored and rewarded for continuing such a course as was done when the fraternal messenger to Canada Methodism was appointed." This cruel insinuation is utterly unworthy of the head and heart that conceived it, and of the hand that wrote it.

"It is useless to heap honors and rewards on those who stand by the Bishops, right or wrong." Who has done this? Name the man, or the men. Prejudice and untempered zeal make men blind. If other people were as suspicious and as critical of Bro. Mellen as he is of those who do not agree with him, why, he would be in a bad box. I do not believe that six out of ten of our Bishops are bad, designing, vengeful men. I do not believe this of anyone of them. To tell the plain truth, I believe that the three hundred and nineteen members of the General Conference who did not agree with Bro. Mellen and twenty-three others were as true to God, to the right and to Methodism as Bro. Mellen and his company.

Bro. Mellen says if certain things are not done, "there will be such a disruption to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as will astonish Bro. Gildoroy' and the editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate and the majority of the late, but not lamented, Committee on Episcopacy."

Now, I can not speak for the editor of the Nashville Advocate, nor for the majority of that committee, but "Gildroy" has seen a good many disruptions in the M. E. Church, South, in his short day. He has known a number of persons who could not have their own way, and split off; and he has known some preachers who got cranky, and imagined that they were bigger than the church, and set up shop for themselves, and called the church to join them, and they got a following. This has often happened, even here in Mississippi, in my own Conference and in my own pastoral charge. "Gilderoy" will not be surprised by any disruption of this kind. The Methodist Church will move right along as if nothing had happened. The sun will continue to rise in the east and set in the west. "Gilderoy" is not to be bullied and badgered by this kind of talk. He is used to it. He knows that "such disruptions" are like throwing a stone into a lake. There is a splash, a brief commotion, and the hole closes up, and you could not find the place where it went in.

I do think that such writing is vicious. I said this of Bro. Haynes. I now say it with double emphasis of my good Bro. Mellen. He has out-Haynesed Haynes. For Bro. Mellen, personally, I have the highest regard. The recoil of his gun makes its back action more dangerous and deadly than its front action. It kicks Bro. Mellen over nearly every time he shoots.

What I Saw in My Garden.

Tall weeds were growing apace, and day after day I said, "I must send the gardener to cut them down;" but there always seemed something else to be done. One morning I went to gather melons, and finding none were ripe, I knew the tall, rank weeds and stinging nettles that overshadowed and sapped the life of my vines must be taken out; so I nerved my grasp and pulled close to the earth—a strong, vigorous wrench. The weeds released their hold, and came out clean and free, leaving nothing behind; but I found the tall weeds were not the ones that were dealing deadly blight to my vines. There were beautiful, delicate, trailing things that followed close, and lovingly clasped my pretty runners everywhere. Blooming in beauty, yet almost unseen, they twined about the growing vine. I stooped to uproot the trespasser, and found my beautiful vine ruined and withering in my grasp. I had thought there were only the great, towering, careless weed and bramble to blight my plants, and here were trailing morning glories that said: "I only mean to beautify; I can do no harm." Looking still closer, entirely hid from view, deep in the bosom of the earth, there were patches of smaller weeds and grass that must be uprooted before my vines could flourish and bear fruit. My task seemed only begun. As the tall, rank weeds with one strong pull gave way, root and branch, and left the vine untouched, so out-breaking sins—drunkenness, debauchery, the violation of all the Ten Commandments—without question have often given way before the plowshare of divine truth, while trailing vines of attractive vices—unseen, unfelt—interweave their beautiful tendrils and sap the very life of Christian growth; energies that ought to be directed and time devoted to higher development, absorbed by the card table, the enchantment of the dance, the social glass, and their excesses. "Vice to be hated needs but to be seen." The more dangerous enemy is the one who comes in winning guise, unseen, unknown, except by the final result, having entertained a foe as dearest friend. And still deep in our nature are other weeds—envy, pride, jealousy, wrath, and all uncharitableness. Not less do these detract from the life of the vine. The weeds of selfishness and untruth all came into our garden with the first fall of man; and, alas for humanity! some of us, by searching closely, will find in our garden not only the tall, rank weed of violated law, but the blooming trailer of "innocent amusement," as well as the hidden growth of besetting, individual sin. The Great Gardener has said, "Every plant that my heavenly Father hath not planted must be uprooted." ISOLA.

Of one thing I feel sure—nothing could be better for rousing the spiritual life of a congregation, and leading it on to a higher life, than the cultivation of missions. The progress of the kingdom of God in the world is a study well calculated to enlarge the mind and soul, and rescue torpid congregations from their self-satisfied ease. What a power for good would be our home millions of Christians, if really alive to their privilege and duty in helping forward the work of God in all lands! —A. M. Mackey.

The Shreveport District Conference.

The twenty-eighth session of the Shreveport District Conference met in the beautiful little town of Pleasant Hill, July 26, 1894, with Rev. Robt J. Harp, P. E., in the chair, and the writer as secretary.

All the various departments of church work were carefully looked into, and from the first the session was interesting and profitable. The preachers, with one exception, were all present; also a large number of lay delegates. The local preachers, however, were rather conspicuous for their absence, only two being in attendance. Why was this?

Our new president of Centenary College, Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., was present, and both in his sermon and address made a fine impression on the audiences, arousing, I think, a deeper interest in the college than has ever been felt before, either by preacher or people. Prof. C. C. Weir was also present, and in his quiet, earnest way brought Centenary, with its various advantages, so clearly to view that the enthusiasm of the Conference expressed itself in a collection of $128, to pay the expenses of a young preacher there for one year, and the report of the Committee on Education was ordered sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

Prominence was given to devotional exercises, and seeds of truth were sown which will, doubtless, bring forth an abundant harvest.

There were committees on the various interests of the church, and the reports presented were discussed freely and to profit. Each report, of course, was followed by the inevitable resolution. Some of these resolutions I send you for publication, thinking they will be of interest and beneficial to the cause.

The general organizer of the W. F. M. Society, Mrs. B. F. Alexander, was on hand, and ably represented the cause of missions.

Letters were received by the chair, and read to the Conference, from Bishop Granbery, Drs. H. C. Morrison and S. A. Steel and Rev. J. W. McLaurin, in which they expressed their regrets at their forced absence. Each of the last three called attention to his special department, the interests of which were carefully looked after.

This being the last year of our presiding elder on the district, resolutions of appreciation and regret were unanimously passed.

The appended resolution of thanks gives expression to the delight of the guests and the kindly feeling of all concerned.

S. B. McCutcheon, Rev. John Franklin, W. G. Wadley and J. W. Taylor were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, and L. T. Jackson and W. R. Jackson, alternates.

Keachie was selected as the place for holding the next session.

Sunday was a day of spiritual feasting. W. F. HENDERSON, Sec.

RESOLUTION OF THANKS.

There is a suggestive influence in the name of "Pleasant Hill," because the crystal stream of pleasant, genial hospitality has flowed down this hill of Zion to gladden our hearts with refreshing waters of Christian kindness. Our stay here will linger as the choicest fragrance in the gardens of our memory.

Resolved, That we thank the people of Pleasant Hill most heartily in Christ's name, and, as a District Conference, pray that they may have a triumphant entrance into the glorious kingdom of Calvary's shining One.

[Owing to lack of space, the publication of the other resolutions has been deferred to our next issue.—EDITOR.]

"What is Doing for the Cause of Missions?"

This question is put at every Quarterly Conference. The presiding elders in the three Conferences patronizing this ADVOCATE are asking it now for the third time this year of 1894. Soon the inquiry will be made the fourth time. What will be the conclusion? It is time for all our people to wake up, to give attentive ears to this voice of the church, and to mark the question as an appeal for the Bread of Life to hungry millions who wait on our tardy service to receive it; to mark it as a call for the fulfillment of our obligations to Christ, of our duty to the church at whose altar we vowed to "support her institutions," and of the love which seeks to do good to all men. There is no escaping this obligation. God has laid it upon us; its reason is in the very terms of our salvation; its spirit is in the very breath of any Christian life, and we can not annul it. The only thing, and the great thing, for us to do is for each one to act his part with a loving joy that he is called to be a "worker together with God" in the salvation of men. How can any human being hold the treasures of this salvation in his heart and life, and hesitate to give to the utmost of his means to send the gospel to the last sinner on earth? There are now one thousand million of these sinners groping their way in the darkness and superstition of idolatry. Are they to be left destitute? The cry of "heathen at home" is a delusion and a subterfuge. We must give the gospel to all men; the world is the field. Nor are we to withhold because we can give but little. Gathered littles make the much. The value of any gift is not measured by the quantity, but by the motive and the ability. Behold the widow's mite! The point is for each one to do what he can, out of his love for Christ. Can any degree of poverty quench that love, or justify the withholding of that mite which is proof of its reality? (II. Cor. viii, 2.) Suppose every member in these Conferences were to do his duty this year, or even half his duty—in that case not a single charge would report a deficit on the assessment; not a member would fail to pay something, except the absolutely helpless. What is the fact? The North Mississippi Conference reports less than twenty cents a member, and I suppose these members are average ones in our church. Is it not time to wake up? What will the Master do with us when he calls us to account for our opportunities? Shall they be wasted opportunities?—"nothing but leaves?"

The Sabbath.

The Sabbath is a great day, and we are thankful to the Lord that its observance is being agitated. But should it not be much more agitated? We think it should. We think that ministers and Christians generally should not be, in the least, at rest until it is rightly observed. It is expected, and properly, too, that they should observe it most rigidly themselves first, and then, by example as well as by precept, induce the people at large to do the same. If this was done, we might hope to have a President and a Congress that would reverence the Sabbath. Congress holds sessions on the Sabbath, and President Cleveland started from Washington on Sunday evening on a fishing tour, even this year. Our country is not the only unfortunate one in this respect, for Gladstone, on the Sunday following his resignation of the premiership of England, wrote a letter of congratulation to his successor, Rosebery; and his successor, Rosebery, the present premier of England, held the first cabinet council on Sunday, all members being present except Asquith and Henry Fowler. We think this is a sad record for our country and England, the two greatest countries in the world. Laying all this aside, there is much we can do to increase reverence for God's holy day.

Among the many things we may do is the closing of postoffices on the Sabbath by petitions to the Postoffice Department. The following is given as a model:

"We, the undersigned citizens of ———, believing that the practice of receiving mail matter on the Sabbath is unnecessary and undesirable, respectfully petition the Postoffice Department to close our postoffice from Saturday night to Monday morning, and to omit any collections or distribution of mail matter on Sunday."

(Names.) (Names.) (Names.)

Be sure to put V. by every voter's name, so as to distinguish them from non-voters and ladies. One petition should be circulated among the white people and one among the colored. If a sufficient number of signers is sent from any community where there is a postoffice to the Postoffice Department, why, it will be closed. Brethren, let us, by the grace of God, close them.

Memoir of Mrs. Frances Stuart Harmon.

Mrs. Frances Stuart Harmon was born in the city of Baton Rouge, La., March 13, 1832, and died at Stafford's Springs, near Vossburg, Miss., on Saturday, June 2, 1894, at a quarter to nine o'clock P. M. Her parents were J. D. Stuart and Mary Gayle. Her mother is said to have been a pillar of Methodism in Baton Rouge, La.

On July 25, 1849, Miss Frances Stuart was married to Rev. Dr. J. W. Harmon, then a member of the Louisiana Conference. It was on this wise: Dr. Harmon was stationed in Baton Rouge, and he met and wooed Frances Stuart under singular and providential circumstances. She moved with the gay, fashionable society of the Capitol City. Conference was in session, and during a missionary meeting, of which Dr. Harmon was secretary, a collection was raised, and two exceedingly valuable bracelets were found in the collection basket, and the young secretary, judging that a big heart lay behind the gift, redeemed them and began an inquiry for the generous giver, whom he found to be Miss Frances Stuart, and thus an attachment sprung up which ripened into marriage.

At the close of the Conference a series of meetings were held, and Miss Stuart was a penitent at the altar. Upon a profession of faith she was received into the church by the young preacher, and from the hour she assumed the sacred vows of Christianity she gave up the dance, theatres, fine jewelry, and the world, and was joined unto Christ, and was ever afterwards a devoted Christian. Several months after this she united her destiny with the Methodist itinerancy, and became the wife of Rev. Dr. J. W. Harmon, the ceremony being performed at her mother's residence in Baton Rouge, La., by Rev. W. H. Crenshaw. And from then to her death, as her husband would often say, they "enjoyed an unbroken honeymoon for forty-five years." The writer has never seen a more beautiful devotion between husband and wife, and during an acquaintance of many years has never heard a harsh word or seen an unkind look between them.

God blessed this devoted couple with eight children. Two died in infancy, and four sons and two daughters reached their maturity. Mollie B. Harmon became the wife of L. P. Brown, of Meridian, Miss., and died in 1882. Of her it has been well said, "Her life-work was a golden sentence written by the hand of Divinity." The six living children all became members of the church; three of the boys joined old Felicity Street Church, of New Orleans, under the ministry of the now patriarchal Dr. J. B. Walker. Her son, Nolan B. Harmon, is a minister of the gospel and a member of the Mississippi Conference, and Duncan S. Harmon is an efficient lay worker.

Sister Harmon's devotion to her children was strong and beautiful, and her influence over them was Christly and magnetic. No epitaph in stone, or costly marble sarcophagus is needed to commemorate her virtues, for each child is a monument to this Christian mother. "Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." (Prov. xxxi, 28.)

She sat upon the throne and ruled as the queen of love in her home, and her will was the law that governed the family, and each member eagerly obeyed her. Her acceptance with God was clear, and her communion with Christ uninterrupted. But in November, 1889, at Anguilla, Miss., she received the blessing of entire sanctification under the ministry of the writer, and from that time her joy was unspeakable.

But her life-work stands out boldly as a "mother in Israel" in the rearing of her children for God, and as a "heroine of the parsonage," sharing the labors and sacrifices of the itinerancy with her husband, who is now left in loneliness as a superannuated preacher of the Mississippi Conference. Her last illness extended over two years, and she was at times a great sufferer. But medical skill and devoted attention could not conquer the disease. When the end drew near the husband and children, except one son, were constant attendants at the bedside, and went with her down to the verge of the valley of death. All during the day before her death she spoke beautifully to the loved ones about her trust in Jesus and her hopes of heaven. Just before passing away she said to her husband, "All is well." Then the husband spoke of the daughter in heaven, and said, "Mother, you will soon see Mollie." She replied, "Yes, father, I'll tell Mollie;" then her lips failed.

Her son, Rev. N. B. Harmon, writes of the last hours thus: "On Saturday morning I repeated to her several passages of Scripture. One was, 'In my Father's house are many mansions;' also, 'The Lord is my shepherd,' etc., and when I reached the clause, 'Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,' she preceded me, and said, 'I will fear no evil, for thy rod and thy staff they comfort me;' also, 'We know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands,' then she lifted her hands in triumph and completed the sentence, 'eternal in the heavens.' At one moment she was in great pain, which seemed to pass away, after which she lay quiet. Her last words were, 'Light! light!' when, I think, a glorious light burst upon her from the city of God, and she fell asleep in Jesus as sweetly as a babe in its mother's arms."

Her remains were brought to Meridian, Miss., and the funeral discourse preached by the writer in the Central Methodist Church on June 4, and on Tuesday, the fifth, we escorted the body to Jackson, Miss., where it was laid away in the beautiful cemetery to await the coming of Jesus and the resurrection of the righteous.

Her pastor, W. W. HOPPER.

Giving to the Cause of Christ.

When we learn that true living is to be like Christ, and that life fails in its highest good which has not this aim, then will we understand the force of the words, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Remember, these words came from the lips of him whose whole life was one glorious gift. He who spake them not only died for humanity, but day by day, through all his life on earth, lived for it, and by word and example taught his children how he would have them live.

Did he, understanding men perfectly, teach his disciples a manner of living which he knew was impossible for them to practice? Is the sermon on the mount, which breathes in every word the spirit of deepest consecration and unselfishness, simply a high ideal which Christ held up for his followers to admire, but not to follow? When he gave the command, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," did he mean that we were first to gratify our wants, and then, if we had time and means, think of our brother's needs? Surely we are called to be his disciples, and only do we obey that call as we are like our Master.

A very common reason for ignoring the claims of benevolence is debt, but often this is only an excuse. Those debts which do not reduce our income have no right to rob the Lord's treasury. Many enterprises are carried on by debt, and a man might always have that plea for refusing to do his share in the world's redemption. But if he obey his Master, he will as carefully, systematically, give his money for the Lord's use as for his own business. As at the beginning of the year he put aside generously for the use of his family, so will he provide as generously for these higher demands.

Selfishness shows itself again in the spirit which would confine all work to a limited field. It seems impossible for many to comprehend that Christ's kingdom extends beyond their own church, or, at the most, beyond their limited range of view; they scarcely recognize in the negro, the Indian, or the heathen abroad, a brother with equal claims with themselves on God's bounty.

This indifference often arises from ignorance, but is ignorance excusable in a department of God's work, where he placed us with the command that we finish the work which he began, and in which he has given us every opportunity of informing ourselves? What a mission work would be accomplished if this class could be brought to understand what they are losing in neglecting so rich a means of grace! And we might soon revolutionize the whole missionary world through the children of to-day if we were to educate them in right views and methods of giving.

When we are truly spiritual-minded then shall we give joyously of our means, our time, ourselves. So shall we be disciples of him who is the ideal giver, and the perfect gift.—Annette Winters Shattuck, in The Standard.

Beyond.

There is a right way and a wrong way of looking at almost everything. Spiritual discernment is a very important grace, for many of our joys and many of our sorrows proceed from our method of looking at those things which concern our peace. Salvation depends upon a right view of Jesus Christ. The difference between the impenitent sinner and the same person after he is regenerated is that he looks at Christ with a new eye, and has discovered him to be the very Savior and guide that he needs.

How prone we are to regard many of God's dealings in a wrong light, and to call them by wrong names! We speak of things as afflictions which are really great blessings under a dark disguise. We often congratulate people on gaining what turns out to be a dangerous snare or a lamentable loss. Quite as often we condole with them over occurrences which are about to yield to them blessings more precious than gold. Be careful how you condole with a man who has lost his money and saved his character, and be equally careful how you congratulate a man who has made a million of dollars at the expense of his religion.

Once more we repeat that there is a right and a wrong way of looking at all things. To the eye that has spiritual discernment this world is no avenue to that one that lies beyond it. Talents, wealth and influence are simply loans to be held in trust for God. High station means high work for him. A Christianized eye sees in money just so much bread for the hungry, just so much gospel for the godless and just so many lifts for the degraded—as well as innocent and refining enjoyments for one's own heart and household. Christ's image and superscription ought to be on every dollar. To a truly regenerated soul all things become new, and we may well doubt the genuineness of that conversion which does not bring an altered estimate of everything earthly. Faith breaks the false charm of this world and adds a charm to the better world. My friend, "thou hast well seen" when thou dost behold Jesus Christ as the Lord of thy life—his service thy sweetest occupation, and his presence thy perpetual joy.—Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, in Independent.

Not a few count it a matter of small moment to subscribe for and read their church literature. These are never good Methodists, for they are, of necessity, ignorant. Moreover, they do not care enough for the church to support it. Such people are generally very unworthy Methodists, and it is rare that we find one such who is truly a useful man.—Exchange.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

EGG OMELET.—To make egg omelet, allow a cup of milk to three eggs. Beat the whites and yolks separately, stir into the milk, add a little salt; pour into a buttered frying-pan, cover tight, and cook very slowly on the top of the stove till done.—Selected.

JUMBLES.—Three pounds of flour, two pounds of sugar, one pound of butter, eight eggs, with some spice. Add a small quantity of milk if the eggs are not sufficient to make the dough soft enough, roll a small piece of dough very thin, cut it out and fry in boiling lard.—Exchange.

PEACH CREAM.—Boil a pint of canned peaches with a coffeecupful of sugar; strain them through a sieve or colander, then add half a package of dissolved gelatin and a cup of cream. Stir well, and when nearly cool add a pint of whipped cream; beat all together, and pour into a mold.—Selected.

CREAM SALAD.—Chop fine one-half head of cabbage, and mix thoroughly with one-half cupful of sweet cream and one-quarter teaspoonful of salt. Into one-half cupful of vinegar stir one beaten egg, one teaspoonful of sugar, and one-half teaspoonful of made mustard. Pour this, while very hot, over the cabbage, and serve immediately.—Weekly Times.

EGGS IN BATTER.—An appetizing way to cook an egg was illustrated by eggs in batter. Mix two tablespoonfuls of thick cream with one tablespoonful of fine bread crumbs and one-fourth saltspoonful of salt. Butter a china egg-baker, put in a teaspoonful of cream mixture, a raw egg seasoned with salt and a little pepper, and the remainder of the mixture. Bake in a moderate oven eight minutes.—Boston Cooking School.

BEATEN BISCUIT.—Aunt Hannah's pride was her old-fashioned beaten or kneaded biscuit, and this is her recipe: One quart of the best flour, half a teaspoonful of salt, four tablespoonfuls of lard chopped fine and rubbed thoroughly into the flour. Mix with cold water just as stiff as possible, so stiff that you feel almost hopeless of ever doing anything with it. Put it on a board and knead until it is perfectly pliable and makes a popping sound under your hands from the air bubbles breaking in it, and until you can pull it down in long strips. These tests are infallible, but you have to knead hard and long before the dough will answer to them. When it does, you can make the biscuit. Break off pieces about the size of an egg, mold them into round balls, and roll three-quarters of an inch thick with rolling-pin. Stick through and through five or six times with a fork. The oven must be well heated, but not too hot, or they will be underdone in the middle, and all their excellence ruined. They will cook in twenty minutes, if the oven is properly heated. A quart of flour makes twenty-four biscuits of ordinary size.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HYGIENE.

Effects of Alcoholic Abuse upon Posterity.

A man became a drunkard after middle life; children born to him before his degradation remained free from the vice of drunkenness, while those born afterward became drunkards.

Erasmus Darwin states that diseases inherited from druckards descend to the third and fourth generations, until, finally, the family dies out.

Another observer says that of ninety-seven children of drunkards only fourteen remained free from some defect.

Still another maintains that fifty per cent. of the idiots and imbeciles of cities are the children of drunkards.

The children of drunkards inherit the same or a greater predisposition to nervous disorders than those of nervous or really insane parents. They suffer most frequently in infancy from convulsions and epileptiform diseases.

Districts known as "drinkers' districts" in Europe furnish far fewer good recruits for military service.

A law was passed in Sweden against drunkenness—that is, making it a punishable offense—and since then the number of persons unfit for military service on account of undersize and general weakness has grown much less.

A distinguished specialist in children's diseases observed ten families of drinkers and of temperate parents for a period of twelve years. He records his observation as follows:

The ten drinking families produced in those twelve years fifty-seven children. Of these, twenty-five died in the first week of life, of weakness, of convulsive attacks, or of edema of brain and membranes; six of the children were idiots; five were stunted in size, and were of real dwarfish growth; five, when older, became epileptics; one, a boy, had grave chorea, ending in idiocy; five had inherited diseases and deformities, such as chronic hydrocephalus, harelip, and club foot; two of the epileptics mentioned became, by inheritance, drinkers. Only ten, therefore, of all these fifty-seven, or 17.5 per cent., showed during youth normal disposition and development of body and mind.

The ten temperate families produced in twelve years sixty-one children. Of these, five died in the first week, of weakness; four, in the later years of childhood, had curable nervous affection; two only showed inherited nervous defects. The remaining fifty, or fully 81.9 per cent., were normal in every way, developing well in body and mind.

My friend, Dr. Vandenburg, has kindly furnished me with a list of forty-four patients treated by him for alcoholism. On examining the notes carefully I find that twenty-five of them had ancestors, or at any rate relatives, who drank. Of ten of them there was no previous history obtainable; these, very likely, ought to be added to the twenty-five, as it appeared from certain signs that they merely did not wish to expose their family histories.

It is a curious but very general fact that there exists a sort of instinctive tendency in the members of a family to hide from others as well as from themselves anything that would tell of the defect by a family nervous inheritance—I mean an inheritance of defects in the central nervous system. Men do not like to acknowledge the controlling influence of such a fate, and they often instinctively take pains to refer diseases that are unmistakably inherited to very ordinary, accidental, and always different causes. To try to obtain information in such matters from family members is too frequently a fruitless undertaking. They will often throw impediments in one's way, even leading one into wrong paths; and to make a proper diagnosis and prognosis in nervous diseases one must try to learn not the history of his patient, but also the diseases that are prominent in his family.

But to return to my Vandenburg statistics: Four mothers and sisters were tuberculous; one has a father who is very nervous and smokes incessantly; one has an asthmatic grandfather. Only three have a family record that seems free from all defects. Eleven of them have shown tuberculosis or some other lung difficulty in their families; one had insanity on the mother's side, and of one the father's sister was insane; and one had insanity in two aunts on the father's side. There was insanity in the father of one, induced by drink, and in one instance the paternal grandfather drank heavily, the father moderately. In one case the paternal grandfather drank hard and died of apoplexy, the great-grandmother was tuberculous, and the mother paralytic. In four instances the grandfather drank heavily, though the fathers were free from the vice.—Dr. A. E. Schmid, in The Medical News.

PERIODICALS.

We regret that for some weeks notices of the several magazines and illustrated weeklies have been crowded out.

Cassell's Family Magazine, for August, has its usual quota of excellent articles. In this number Elizabeth L. Banks discusses "New Paid Occupations for Women." "People Who Face Death: Firemen," by A. E. Bonser, gives some thrilling incidents. Sir Robt. S. Ball, in "A Talk About the Pleiades," gives some instructive facts. The illustrations are taking.

The midsummer number of the Century is full of interesting matter. F. Marion Crawford describes "Washington as a Spectacle," handsome illustrations being given by A Castaigne. "Walking as a Pastime" is a helpful, timely article by Eugene Lamb Richards. George F. Hoar ably discusses "The Right and Expediency of Woman Suffrage," and Dr. J. M. Buckley tells of "The Wrongs and Perils of Woman Suffrage." The magazine contains a number of other good articles, while the illustrations, both numerous and beautiful, add to its attractiveness.

George Card Pease, in the August number of Harper's, has a very entertaining account of a journey, "Up the Norway Coast," seven fine illustrations by de Thulstrup being given in connection therewith. "Old Monmouth" is entertainingly described by Julian Ralph. Part II. of "The Golden Horse," a story by Charles Dudley Warner, is also given. George W. Smalley's article, "Chapters in Journalism," contains some instructive things. We have not space to call attention to all the excellent articles in this issue. The illustrations are always of the best.

Scribner's Magazine, for August, is a fiction number, and contains six complete short stories by H. C. Bunner, T. R. Sullivan, W. H. Shelton, W. G. Hewlit, Octave Uzanne and Harrison Robertson. This number also contains Lowell's unpublished letters to Poe during the years 1843 to 1844. "The People That We Serve," is a humorous, realistic description of the ways and airs of servants, hotel keepers, and others who are supposed to serve us. Fine reading for Summer weather does this number furnish.

The Missionary Review of the World, for August, opens with a most interesting and able paper from the pen of the editor-in-chief on "The Real and Romantic in Missions." In it Dr. Pierson gives a masterly and somewhat adverse criticism of Dr. James Johnston's recent book, "Reality vs. Romance in South Central Africa," and shows the many hasty judgments which are formed regarding African Missions by those who have not studied them sufficiently. Dr. Arthur H. Smith, author of "Chinese Characteristics," discusses "Time as a Factor in Christian Missions," and utilizes his wide experience and learning to prove that hasty evangelization is impracticable, and attempts at it are productive of evil. "The Place of Higher Education in Missionary Work," is considered by Rev. Dr. Ellinwood, and is shown to be one of great importance in order to place Christianity on a firm footing in heathen countries. Among other articles of especial interest in this number are: "Practical Confucianism and Practical Christianity in Korea," by Rev. Samuel Moffett, "Missionary Work in Northern Bulgaria," by Rev. L. T. Guild, "The McCall Mission," by Mrs. Houghton, and "Missions in Spain and Austria," by Rev. Dr. H. A. Schauffler. The other departments of the Review are up to their usual standard of interest and usefulness.

One swallow does not make a Summer; neither does an occasional prayer or act of self-denial constitute a Christian.

If we were as eager to put into practice the truth we already know as we are to hear new things, what burning and shining lights we would be!

Church members often say that they pray for their pastor; yet so weak is their faith that when somebody is converted at a regular service, they are as much startled as if a great accident had happened.

The man who says, "We need a revival in our church," often voices his own great need as much as he does that of the church. Brother, let the revival start in your own heart, and it will soon spread.

The failure to realize that the devil is a spiritual adversary who is able to transform himself into an angel of light, causes us to stumble ofttimes. The pursuit of pleasure and the haste to be rich so deaden the sensibilities that we can not see evil except when it appears in hideous garb.

New Orleans, like many other cities of the Union, has long been cursed with a corrupt city government, but a manful effort is now being made to wipe out this rottenness. Several councilmen have already been indicted for bribe-taking; and if a jury can be had to convict, they will no longer pose as martyrs before an indignant public. With one exception, the secular papers of this city, we are glad to say, have taken the side of right, and have boldly unearthed many startling things which the city officials would fain have covered up. We sincerely hope that a clean administration will soon be the order of the day.

The death of Dr. James Strong, of Drew Theological Seminary, which occurred Aug. 7, at Round Lake, N. Y., is a great loss to the Christian world. He was one of the foremost scholars of the century, and was a prolific writer. Prof. Strong was the only American layman who was ever honored with the Doctorate in Sacred Theology. "McClintock and Strong's Cyclopædia of Biblical, Theological and Ecclesiastical Literature" was his greatest work. Dr. McClintock having lived to see only three of these volumes issued from the press, the task of completing the undertaking devolved upon Dr. Strong. His "Concordance of the Bible" he regarded as his crowning work. Methodists everywhere have profound reason to lament his death.

Comparative Righteousness.

There is in the world to-day a deal of what may be called "comparative righteousness;" and, sad to tell, it is hindering the progress of pure and undefiled religion. Some persons imagine that, because they are as good apparently as other Christians, they have discharged their whole duty. Men and women living in the neglect of duty, as, for instance, the reading of the Scriptures and attendance upon divine worship, and guilty of what they choose to call "little sins," nevertheless seek to justify themselves by saying that they are no worse than their fellow-church members. When a pastor denounces certain forms of sin, especially the "sins of society," many a man or woman is at once ready to say: "He'd better preach against profanity or stealing or drunkenness or something of that sort. There are people in the church who do things much worse than any I am guilty of. Why should I be made a target while they are allowed to pursue the even tenor of their way?" When remonstrated with personally as to certain courses of conduct, people often give answer thus: "If I don't do anything worse than that, I shall get to heaven all right."

Because Bro. A gets drunk occasionally or Sister B's tongue gets the better of her now and then, Sister C thinks that her worldliness is by no means a thing to be condemned. One brother boasts that he always pays the preacher, which is more than can be said for many of the flock. Yet this brother is very quiet about his continued absence from prayer meeting and his neglect of Bible study. A certain good sister loves to talk in meeting about how near she is living to the cross, but at home she is as sour as a crab apple.

When we compare our lives with those of others, like the Pharisee, we become inflated with pride, and imagine that the world is not worthy of us. Alas! that we should live upon so low a plane. Because we appear to be better than other people is no reason why we should be content with ourselves. Some people act as if they were afraid of making others feel bad if they should live too far above them. In the first place, if the man who has been carefully trained by Christian parents is not better, relatively speaking, than one who never had such training, then he is a poor sort of Christian. Those who all their lives have had gospel privileges and teaching ought to exhibit a purer form of Christianity than those who have been denied these privileges. Some come into daily contact with gross vices and sins, while others, by reason of the nature of their respective vocations, have few temptations. Our women, for the most part, have such safeguards thrown around them that for them to become otherwise than pure-minded and noble-hearted is well-nigh impossible. How great, then, is the sympathy that should be shown those erring ones who have never had the protecting shield of good environment! Many who now pride themselves in their uprightness and respectability might have belonged to the so-called disreputable and unworthy classes had their environment been different.

Who art thou, O man, who boastest thyself in thy goodness? Wouldest thou excuse thyself from leading a holier, more consecrated life because thou art better than thy neighbor? Who told thee that thou wast better? "Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?" God has nowhere said that a man shall be saved because he is as good as other men. No class of men were more scrupulous in keeping the law than were the Scribes and Pharisees, and the people regarded them as models of piety; yet our Savior declared to the men of that generation that if their righteousness did not exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, they should in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven. The man who thinks he is in no danger of being lost because he is not so mean or close-fisted as his fellow-church member is deceiving himself. Because one member has so little religion as to desecrate the Sabbath or oppress the poor, another thinks he has license to dance or play cards or drink wine. O that church members could see the folly and danger of doing questionable things because the things which others do appear more harmful! If the church does not stand for purity and holiness, it is a fraud. Where is it written in the Word of God that he will punish great sins and overlook small ones? Hear what the Savior says: "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." Since no man is justified by the deeds of the law, we are without excuse if we trust in comparative righteousness, or any righteousness of our own, to save us. A man may be more pious than any of his friends and neighbors, but unless he endeavors to live up to his duty as he knows it, he will fail of the grace of God. We are not commanded to model our lives after those of others, but to follow Christ. Whether we are as good as other Christians or not should give us little concern. Our greatest concern should be to walk in the footsteps of the Savior.

The artist who aims no higher than to equal the productions of his average fellow-artists never immortalizes himself. Likewise the Christian who aspires to be no better than his fellows is unworthy the name. Every man will be judged, not according to his piety as compared with that of somebody else, but according to the light he had. "For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required; and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more."

Let us have done with this foolish talk about being as upright and religious as somebody else. We may be, in some respects, models of piety; but unless we are conscientious, and do our best to lead blameless lives, our religion is but a sham, a "form of godliness without the power thereof."

Schools and Colleges.

Advertisements of the following schools and colleges will be found elsewhere in our columns:

WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE

Needs little commendation from us, being one of the oldest and best-known schools in the State. Its interests will by no means suffer in the hands of its new president, the Rev. John W. Chambers, who is a jovial, wide-awake man, well equipped for his work, and withal one of the most tireless workers we have ever known. The college will open Sept. 12 with greatly increased facilities. New furniture, new pianos, new apparatus and many other improvements will make things at Whitworth doubly attractive and comfortable. Several members of the faculty we know personally, and we can say with assurance that the instruction given will be of the best quality. Parents should investigate well the claims of this school before sending their daughters elsewhere.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

Is well reported of. Its worthy president is a man of pleasing address, scholarly attainments and long experience in educational work. We are glad to report that this school, which is the only female college belonging to the Louisiana Conference, is increasing its patronage and its efficiency each year. As it has a carefully selected faculty, offers superior advantages in music and art, and is desirably located, Louisiana Methodist girls have no need to go afar in order to receive the best instruction. We commend this home-like school to the public, and especially to the Methodists of Louisiana, as one well deserving their support. Write to the president for particulars.

NORTH TEXAS FEMALE COLLEGE.

This institution is presided over by Mrs. Lucy Kidd Key, wife of Bishop Joseph S. Key. The success of Sister Key as president of this institution is marvelous. She took charge of it a few years since, when it was literally broken down. It was burdened with debt, and had been suspended for a year or more. Within a very brief period she placed it in the very front rank of our Southern Methodist female colleges. New buildings have been added until it now has a capacity for two hundred boarders, and it was full during the last session. In its departments of music, art, elocution, etc., as well as in its literary department, it offers first-class facilities. Whoever will write to Sister Key for a catalogue, will receive the handsomest article of that sort we have ever seen.

SOUTHERN FEMALE COLLEGE.

This historic school, located at Petersburg, Va., offers splendid courses in literature, language and science, and conservatory advantages in music and art. Low terms, modern improvements and perfection of climate are other things that make it a desirable school.

VIRGINIA COLLEGE

Is one of the leading schools for young ladies in the South. It boasts magnificent buildings, fitted up with all the modern improvements, as steam heat and electric lights, a campus of ten acres, and grand mountain scenery. The corps of teachers, some European as well as American, numbers twenty. Those who wish to try for the B. A. and M. A. degrees have thorough courses offered them.

EMORY AND HENRY COLLEGE

Is no new claimant for public patronage, it having been founded just fifty-eight years ago. Its alumni are scattered throughout the South and Southwest, and many of them are found occupying prominent and honorable positions in their respective communities. The State Superintendent of Education of Mississippi is a graduate of this school. Beauty of scenery, healthfulness of climate and wholesome influences all conduce to make this an attractive school for boys and young men. It is located at Emory, Va.

DAVIS MILITARY SCHOOL.

This North Carolina school offers courses in science, the classics, civil engineering and a preparatory course in medicine. Excellent preparatory work is also done for those not ready to enter college classes. There is a business college department in connection with the school which offers a fine commercial course. A chance to get a good education at low rates is one not to be lightly considered. So then write for particulars.

CLASSICAL AND COMMERCIAL INSTITUTE.

This school, located at 7 Prytania street, in this city, offers superior advantages to those desiring either a classical or a business education. Such a school being at hand, there is no need that students should go elsewhere to prepare themselves for university or for assuming commercial positions. Shorthand and type-writing are both taught. Write for further information.

CLINTON FEMALE ACADEMY.

This is a home school of high grade and excellent reputation. It is located in a spot noted for its healthfulness and attractiveness of surroundings, and has not the disadvantage of being a new school, it having been chartered in 1832. Considering the advantages offered, the rates are remarkably low. Write for a catalogue.

Resting.

Several weeks since we found it necessary, for hygienic reasons, to take a partial rest. Hence we canceled a number of engagements to preach and lecture. We had engagements at Oxford, Miss.; Booneville, Miss.; Shelby Springs, Ala.; Center, Texas, and at several other places. We were anxious to meet these engagements, but saw that it was necessary to cancel them. A little later we saw that we must take an absolute rest for a short period. So we went to Monteagle and remained two weeks. We can not, in this issue, say anything of our trip, but hope to do so in next issue. We are again at the old stand, somewhat invigorated from our rest and change of latitude and altitude, but still not at our hygienic maximum. We need, at least, two weeks more of rest. The readers of the ADVOCATE are under obligations to Rev. M. M. Black, of the Mississippi Conference, for editorial work on this and the previous issue.

Fellow-Christian, you say you received a great blessing at the revival meeting. Does this mean that you got enough religion there to run you until the next camp or protracted meeting a year hence, so that you are exempt from attending preaching and prayer meeting? Does this mean spasmodic effort for two or three weeks at being religious, and then a dropping into the old rut, or does it mean permanent reformation?

From the report of 1894 of the trustees of the John F. Slater Fund for the education of freedman it appears that appropriations were made during the year 1893-94 to the amount of $40,000, divided in sums varying from $1,000 to $5,000 among sixteen institutions. For the coming year the Board appropriated $45,000, if needed.—Central Methodist.

An instrument called the "solarometer" has been invented by an officer in the United States Navy, which bids fair to supersede entirely the mariner's compass. On account of the fact that modern ships are constructed so largely of iron, the magnetic needle of the latter instrument varies so much as to be almost worthless. It is to be hoped that the invention will prove a success, as it would save many a vessel from shipwreck.

During July about 20,000 steerage passengers sailed from our ports for Europe, while only 11,500 arrived in this country. As many of the incomers are returning passengers, we see that the number of immigrants has greatly decreased. We take it that this is a hopeful sign.

We see from the Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger that Miss Kate M. Power, a daughter of Col. J. L. Power, expects to start a weekly magazine about Sept. 1, to be called "Kate Power's Review." Miss Power is a gifted writer, and we wish this new literary venture much success.

We heartily indorse the following recent utterance of the Picayune with regard to the present method of selecting a jury:

This is a reading age, and the idea of seeking jurymen who do not read the papers, and who do not know what is happening in the world around them, must be abandoned. The time has passed when it is thought necessary that the intelligent jury must be composed of idiots and ignoramuses.

The President-elect of Brazil, Dr. Prudente de Moraes Barros, was a patron of the Southern Methodist College, and his daughters, now the foremost ladies of the South American Republic, owe a large part of their culture and fitness for their position in life to the work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.—South African Methodist.

A returned missionary who has been among the Catholics of South America says that "the only way to meet the wants of the case is to scatter the Bible among these peoples, and present to them the gospel of Christ in its purity and sweetness. On the contrary, direct or covert attacks on priests or people, or their methods, only exasperate. 'We can not make a man better by lampooning him, or calling him names.'"

It gives us great pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of an elegant volume of "Select Sermons," just from the press, by our friend and brother, Rev. J. W. Harmon, a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference. Judging from what we know of Bro. Harmon's preaching ability, we feel sure a rich treat is in store for us. We hope the volume will have a large sale. A more extended notice will appear later. Send $1 to Bro. Harmon at Paulding, Miss., and get a copy.

Last Thursday morning we had a brotherly call from Rev. Thomas A. Hearn, missionary to China from the Little Rock Conference. Bro. Hearn came from China on leave of absence last September and will return in a few weeks. During his stay "at home" he took a course of study and degree at Drew Theological Seminary, spent a few months in Vanderbilt University, and by his sermons and lectures since has rendered valuable service to the cause of missions.—Arkansas Methodist.

We clip the following from the Alabama Advocate:

The State Normal College has engaged Mrs. E. B. Harding, of Shreveport, La., as instructor of drawing, vocal music, elocution and physical culture. She has taught these subjects for several years past in Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, and has a large acquaintance in these States. The Normal College is to be congratulated in acquiring such an efficient instructor. Mrs. Harding is the daughter of the late Dr. J. C. Burruss, well known in Alabama and Mississippi as a teacher and as a Methodist minister. The late Bishop Linus Parker married her sister.

Bishop and Mrs. Newman recently chartered a little steamer and, with seven Greek sailors as their only companions, visited the Island of Patmos. They were received by the Greek monks of the "Monastery of St. John, the Evangelist," with much ceremony and entertained a day and a night. Five thousand people live on the island, all Greek Christians. The monks own half of the island, which is ten miles long and five wide. Bishop and Mrs. Newman also visited the "Grotto of St. John," where it is said the seer received his revelation.—St. Louis Advocate.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2.25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to August, '95.

BOOKS.

THE ART OF ILLUSTRATION By C. H. Spurgeon. 12mo. Cloth. 208 pp. $1, postpaid. Wilbur B. Ketcham, publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

Whatever Spurgeon has written is worthy of careful attention. He has shown himself a master of the subject of which the volume treats, and the reader will not be disappointed in finding it a storehouse full of suggestions, most interesting and valuable. No one can afford to be destitute of the helpfulness it imparts. These lectures were originally delivered to the students of the Pastor's College. Among the subjects are the following: Illustrations in Preaching. Anecdotes from the Pulpit. The Uses of Anecdotes and Illustrations. Where Can We Find Anecdotes and Illustrations? The Sciences as Sources of Illustration. It is the first of his unfinished books to be published, and one to which he had himself given the title, "The Art of Illustration." Mr. Spurgeon has said of his lectures to his students, "I am as much at home with my young brethren as in the bosom of my family, and therefore speak without restraint. I do not offer that which has cost me nothing, for I have done my best and taken abundant pains. Therefore, with clear conscience, I place my work at the service of my brethern, especially hoping to have a careful reading from young preachers, whose profiting has been my principal aim." We can commend this work to our readers as a most profitable and suggestive volume.

THE YOUNG MAN FOUR-SQUARE. By Rev. James I. Vance. New York and Chicago: Fleming H. Revell Co.

This little book contains a series of talks on "The Young Man in Business," "The Young Man in Society," "The Young Man in Politics," and "The Young Man in Religion." We wish every boy and young man would read these wholesome, stimulating talks. They are gems in their way, and will prove helpful to all who read them.

To the Brethren of East Mississippi.

At the suggestion of Dr. W. R. Lambuth, our Bro. Tokichi Masao comes to our Conference on a lecturing tour. He expected to reach Meridian on Saturday, Aug. 18. After spending a very few days in that city, he purposes going first to the towns on the M. and O. and the N. O. and N. E. railroads. He will deliver interesting lectures on Japan and its customs, and will give the people an opportunity to subscribe for the Kobe Girls' Industrial and Training-school. Having heard him more than once, we can speak unhesitatingly of the excellence of his speech. We commend him as a Christian gentleman of unusual sprightliness. A small collection at each place will meet his expenses. I trust he will secure many subscriptions to the very worthy cause he specially presents.

From Rev. T. S. West.

I am taking a rest in this high latitude. My church gave me the leave, and provided me with funds to relieve me of the expenses of the trip. My time will be up just one month from to-day. Will you make this statement in the ADVOCATE, so that the brethren will not rush in their home mission funds before the middle of September? Then let the rush come, for it is greatly needed. T. S. WEST, Treas.

A Traveling Man.

Mr. B. C. Wolfe, of Washington, Mo., writes that after taking Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism for one week, the pain had almost left him entirely. He slept better, had no more night sweats, and appetite was good. He also wrote that he would not take $100 for what the remedy had done for him. There is no waiting weeks and months to get satisfaction. The remedy attacks the disease at once. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and the full month's treatment of two large bottles will be sent to you by return express. Agents wanted.

Notice.

My address is Pontotoc, Miss. If any of the brethren desire my services in their protracted meetings, I am only engaged up to the week after the first Sunday in September. Have no engagement for the second Sunday in September and after.

The Best Nerve Tonic,

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. A. MONTEIRO, Richmond, Va., says: "I have used it in many cases of nerve depression and have always found it beneficial. The exhaustion of debility so prevalent in chronic alcoholism has been benefited in every case. I consider it one of the best tonics we have where nerve tone is needed."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. McDonald, P. E., Forest, Miss., Aug. 7: "We are having some precious revivals in the Brandon district. At Bay Springs, Raleigh circuit, we continued the services until Tuesday. Several joined the church, some of whom important persons in the community. This was a needed meeting in a country rapidly developing. It is near Taylorville, Smith county. I visited this section fifteen years ago, and now I am surprised at the home-raised citizens. I am of the opinion that we do not need foreign immigration societies. We need the territory for our home-born people; they are fast filling up the waste places. Besides they make our most orderly citizens. These people in this real pine woods show a degree of prosperity not here before. Some of them have lightning rods on their houses, and, of course, a man will not buy one as long as he has any other use for his money. At Bethel, on the Wostville circuit, we had a pleasant quarterly meeting and a protracted meeting going on when I left on Monday afternoon. At these two meetings we preached six sermons—more than would be commonly expected of us. On the Walnut Grove circuit we held a week-day Quarterly Conference. Bro. Vandenberg is doing well. On the Carthage circuit, at Liberty Church, we had a remarkably good Quarterly Conference. Two persons licensed to preach, and a very spiritual meeting on Sunday. On Sabbath night we heard Bro. Morrill, of Cartersville, Ga., preach in the Methodist Church at Carthage. He is carrying on a successful meeting there. His work seems to be faithful indeed. Dr. J. R. Whittington is back again in his work. His sick family has so far improved that he is here in the forefront of the battle. Rev. J. R. Hays, who has been supplying this work in the absence of the preacher in charge, is still here, and these three just mentioned are all engaged in the Carthage meeting, and they are a first-class protracted-meeting force. On this circuit, at Pleasant Hill, there were 26 accessions, and the same number of accessions at Rocky Point. This circuit is taking on new life. The accessions during the protracted season will likely reach a hundred. We are having good meetings nearly all over the district. The preachers, I hope, will write you."

SURPRISED AND POUNDED.

"A pint's a pound the world around" is not true within the meaning of this caption. It is an indefinite expression of avoirdupois, and may mean ½ owt., or any number of "owt." "Surprises," "poundings" and "stormings" seem (?) to be synonymous. They each do service in the expression of the same idea or thing. They neither frighten, bruise nor devastate. Like the Mississippi river, they conform to no laws—they recognize no boundaries—they leave an enriching deposit when they are gone. But this deposit is unlike that left by the "great river"—that is physical, this is reminiscential; that makes things grow, this makes people think. In these depositing deluges of the river you "can not tell whence they come, nor whither they go." But of the kind of deposits to which I allude, in this comparison, you know it all. They come from hearts, and these hearts are in the women. They go directly to a house, and that house is the parsonage. Moreover, there are whole years when these river deposits are not sent to enrich the farms and fertilize the forests. But here in Lake Charles the Broad street parsonage receives such annually.

Tuesday, July 24, was "annual storm day," and right well did the agencies conspire to produce the desired results. The only infelicity about it was the incapacity of the parsonage. The women and the things! There was room for neither either to sit down, lay away nor hang up. We should have a "drill" at our Annual Conference sessions to practice our preachers for such emergencies—some of us do not know how to do. We, doubtless, seem "green," if not ungrateful. We intended not to be either, but only guess how it seemed. Valued solely by dollars and cents, these things would be contemptible. Therein is not the value. Remembered—that's what they are worth. Hands respond to heart impulses. Thanks, sisters; come again. J. A. PARKER.

Lake Charles, La.

HEBRON CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We think this work gradually developing in church work and enterprise. We have had our Children's Day services at each of our three appointments, which resulted in more than doubling our collections of last year. Much credit is due the good sisters of the respective churches for their painstaking in preparing the children for those days; also for the good dinners brought out on those occasions (for we had an evening service at each place). Lately we held our protracted meeting at Hebron, our home church, which resulted in 6 additions to our church, 2 prayer meetings organized, a few family altars erected, a doubling of our Sunday-school numbers, and quite a revival in the membership. We are much indebted to Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Macon, Miss., for effective service rendered. May the Lord reward him! Our Parsonage and Home Mission Society still lives, and, by the way, when we get through with the repairs on the parsonage (which are under headway), we will have one of the most comfortable homes in the Conference. We will organize an Epworth League as soon as we can get the Constitution which we have ordered. Steps are being taken to repair our home church. The good Lord has blessed us with the best crop for years. Health good, people generally contented. A few want to leave magnificent farms and go to town to educate their children. In my judgment, unlawful to both home and children's interest, and I know prejudicial to the prosperity of the country, from which all unrest, where boys and girls are raised with fewer temptations, more solidity of principle, more inspiration to things pure and lovely, and where a very large per cent. of our men and women of usefulness, both in Church and State, are reared.

The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is read by a larger number here than ever before. God bless you in your work! Pray for us. D. W. BABB.

TEMPERANCE.

(Prov. xxiii, 29-32; Isa. vi, 11-22; Luke xxi, 34.)

On the principle of "Line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little, there a little"—here is another temperance lesson.

1. In striving for mastery, that is, in attempting to achieve success, the Apostle Paul admonishes to be temperate in all things.

(1) Have no fault to find with people who make the advocacy of "temperance" a specialty—a hobby. Maybe the Lord wants them to do so. But ministers of the gospel have been called to present to the people the glad tidings of salvation. This includes the presentation of the law.

(2) The Christian man will certainly abstain from the use of alcoholic beverage. But such abstinence, alone, does not make us children of God.

(3) Be temperate in all things: in the chase after honor, office, honor, pleasure; in dress; in table-comfort, etc. Intemperance in any one of these will damn the soul forever. Cultivate symmetry of character.

2. "Intemperance" is one of the great evils of our day.

(1) I despise prating about "personal liberty." That this liberty should preclude special prohibitory legislation. We legislate against dishonesty, theft, incendiarism, etc. Why not against intemperance?

(2) Intemperance ruins man, pecuniarily, intellectually and morally. But not only himself, but also his wife and progeny.

3. I shall add a few pertinent reflections.

(1) The "temperance cause" is gaining ground. The various Christian denominations are coming over to our Methodist way of thinking. Even the Romish Church, clumsily enough, is trying to fall into line.

(2) As a church we can not advocate political prohibition. Our members may be Democrats, Republicans, Populists, but at the same time prohibitionists in principle and practice. Said advocacy would locate us politically.

(3) The pages of history are sadly crowded with narratives of talented, good men being brought low to disgrace and premature grave by "intemperance." Think of Lord Byron, Edgar Poe, etc. Beware! Touch not, taste not, handle not!

THE SIN OF OMISSION.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone
That gives you a bit of a heartache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten;
The letter you did not write;
The flower you did not send, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way;
The bit of heartsome counsel
You were hurried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle winning tone
Which you had no time or thought for
With troubles enough of your own.

Those little acts of kindness
So easily out of mind,
Those chances to be angels,
Which we poor mortals find,
They come in night and silence,
Each sad, reproachful wraith,
When hope is faint and flagging,
And a chill has fallen on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great
To suffer our slow compassion
That tarries until too late;
And it isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone
Which gives you a bit of a heartache
At the setting of the sun.

Husbands at Home.

Women are constantly advised to remember that they are the constituted guardians of the home; that they make its sunshine and dispense happiness or misery to those within its shelter. To meet her husband with a smiling face on his daily return to her, no matter how trying and disturbing a day she may have had in the home, is assumed to be the wife's special obligation. Is it not at least equally incumbent on the good man to bring sunshine and pleasure back to her, even though the street or the office may have had its solicitudes and trials?

When the sound of the father's latch-key is the signal for a joyous rush on the part of the children, a glad thrill in the voice of the wife, even a cheery stir in the region of the kitchen, the tokens are evident that the man of the house is a cheery, sensible, big-hearted fellow, who can carry his end of the load without the unmanly murmuring and complaint. No doubt he is weary. Most people are after the allotted tasks of the day are over. Work takes a good deal out of the strongest of us, even when we love the work and find our environment agreeable. But the man going out to his business engagements has one great advantage over his wife. He has had change of scene and companionship. He has been brought into touch with the wide-awake life of the world. Strangers have addressed him. His letters, his callers, his work itself, however monotonous, have made him for a while forgetful of the petty solicitudes and small frictions of the household. Perhaps he was cross and unreasonable there, and said something sharp and satirical which wounded his wife, something over which she brooded for hours after he had rushed pell-mell down the street to catch a car, forgetting all about his sudden gust and flurry of temper because breakfast was a trifle late and the steak overdone.

Of course this behavior in a husband is infrequent and accidental, and is seldom long treasured against him by a loving wife. A certain element of the maternal mingles with the affection of a wife for her husband, and she excuses his occasional irritability as patiently and with as much toleration as she does the same thing in the children or in her older boys. Nevertheless, a man should not presume on this amiability, nor strain it too far. If a man were cross at breakfast it behooves him to be angelic at dinner, by way of making up for the first lapse in deportment.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

The husband who may be relied on for sympathy, for cheerfulness, for sunshine, is as much a home-maker as his wife. He builds for future years, his boys copying unconsciously his very tricks of manner and the tones of his voice. The chivalry which induces him to make smooth and easy the path of his wife will make good husbands of them when their turn shall come. It will give his girls a standard by which to measure when wooers come to claim them in the regular order of things. They will say, as a girl did the other day, "When I marry it will be when I find a man as sincere, as upright, as gentle, and as full of fun as my father; not till then!"

Nor should the husband forget that attention in trifles, little thoughtful acts, a gift at an unexpected moment, a flower or a book, or the new magazine, something inexpensive, but indicating remembrance and care for the wife's tastes, keeps alight and glowing the flame of love. In home life none need fear to be affectionate and demonstrative.—Harper's Bazar.

The Message for Mothers.

Does not the message come to us to be more conscientious in the fulfillment of our duties as mothers, and to watch ourselves that we may be examples to those little ones who pattern after us? When we talk to Bessie and Willie about the naughty spirit that gets into their hearts sometimes, are we careful that they have no occasion to take notice that there is a naughty spirit in mama's heart at times? Children's eyes are very bright, and their ideas of justice are very clear. It would be disrespect for them to criticise mama, but their powers of reasoning by comparison are quite keen.

It is trying and wearing to the nerves to take care of the little ones all day, to attend to their thousand and one wants. Many a quick, harsh word is spoken, because of over-wrought nerves, and irritability and unjust censure come from weariness of the flesh. Things go wrong with ourselves, and we blame the children oftentimes in consequence.

It is such a pleasant way, that of leading the little ones through babyhood and childhood, if we only have grace and strength given us to walk along and see only the beautiful things that grow by the roadside. It is so sad to lead the little ones over rugged, thorny places, and bruise their tender feet, because we have strayed out of the right way ourselves. Let us show the dear children the beautiful things of life and keep their eyes from the shadowy, gloomy outlooks as long as we can.

Motherhood is such a holy, sacred office, that its responsibilities seem overwhelming at times. It is only by following the Lord Jesus Christ, not afar off, but in close companionship, that we can show our little ones how to always look upward toward his face.

A Noble Youth.

How many young men, just budding into manhood, have taken the first fatal cup! And not stopping at the first, as they may have thought of doing, but taking a second soon after the first, and so on, until their ruin was complete.

There was once a young man who was clerking in a large dry goods store where many other young men were employed.

Some of the latter urged the newcomer to accept a social glass, but he refused. The young men laughed at him, calling him a "baby," and they also said that "one glass would not hurt him."

"Ah, no," he replied, "if I should take one glass, I could easily be persuaded to take another. My mother taught me to shun the fatal cup. And when I was a little child, she taught me this verse among many others, 'Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.'"

The lads laughed and sneered at him, but it was useless to try to remove his scruples.

"My father," the brave boy continued, "went that downward path and at last filled a drunkard's grave. I do not intend to follow in his footsteps."

If other young men would only stand their ground firmly for the right, doing nobly as this one did, there would be a great many fewer drunkard's graves and a great many more happy hearts and homes.

MOTHER'S BOYS.

Yes, I know there are stains on my carpet,
The traces of small muddy boots,
And I see your fair tapestry glowing,
All spotless with blossoms and fruits.

And I know that my walls are disfigured
With prints of small fingers and hands,
And that your own household most truly
In immaculate purity stands.

And I know that my parlor is littered
With many old treasures and toys:
While your own is in daintiest order,
Unharmed by the presence of boys.

And I know that my room is invaded
Quite boldly all hours of the day;
While you sit in yours unmolested
And dream the soft quiet away!

Yes, I know there are four little bedsides
Where I must stand watchful each night;
While you can go out in your carriage,
And shine in your dresses so bright.

Now, I think I'm a neat little woman;
I like my house orderly too;
And I'm fond of all dainty belongings,
Yet would not change places with you.

No! Keep your fair home with its order,
Its freedom from bother and noise;
And keep your own fanciful leisure—
But leave me my four noble boys!

—Exchange.

A Dying Soldier's Memory of His Mother.

After one of the hard-fought battles of the war, a Confederate chaplain was called hastily to see a dying soldier. Taking his hand, he said:

"Well, my brother, what can I do for you?"

He supposed, of course, the young fellow would want him to cry to God for help in his extremity; it was not so.

"Chaplain," he said, "I want you to cut a lock of hair for my mother; and then, chaplain, I want you to kneel down and return thanks to God for me."

"For what?" asked the chaplain.

"For giving me such a mother. Oh, she was a good mother! Her teachings are my comfort now. And then, chaplain, thank God that by his grace I am a Christian. What would I do now if I were not a Christian. And thank him for giving me dying grace. He has made this hard bed feel 'soft as downy pillows are.' And oh, chaplain, thank him for the promised home in glory—I'll soon be there."

"And so," said the chaplain, "I kneeled by his bed with not a petition to utter; only praises and thanksgiving for a good mother, a Christian hope, dying grace and an eternal home in glory."—Exchange.

"Let Not the Sun Go Down Upon Your Wrath."

Two men had a quarrel one morning. In the course of the day one of them remembered the Bible command, "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath." Towards evening he knocked at the door of the man whom he had offended, who opened the door; and when he saw who stood there he drew back surprised. Then the first said, "The sun is just going to set."

"Come in, my dear friend; let us be at peace. Do we hope to pass eternity together with him who has pardoned us both, and who has taught us this prayer, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us?"

It is not only individuals who have need to remember the command—"As much as lie in you, live peaceably with all men." It would be well for nations also to walk by this rule. If kings and cabinets had but heeded the wise saying, "It is an honor to cease from strife," what bloodshed and misery would have been saved in the world!

The golden rules of the Sacred Scriptures are the true words of wisdom and sound policy both for individuals and nations.—Primitive Methodist.

The Happy Home.

I have peeped into quiet parlors where the carpet is clean and not old, and the furniture is polished and bright, into rooms where the chairs are neat and the floor carpeted, into kitchens where the family live, and the meals are cooked and eaten, and the boys and girls are as blithe and joyous as the sparrows overhead, and I see that it is not so much wealth, or learning, or clothes, or servants, or toil, or idleness, or town, or country, or station, as it is tone and temper that render homes happy or wretched. And I see, too, that in town or country, good sense and kind feeling and God's grace make life what no teachers or accomplishment, or means, or society can make it—the opening stave of an everlasting psalm—the fair beginning of an endless and blessed existence—the goodly, modest, well-proportioned vestibule to a temple of God's building that shall never decay, or wax old, or vanish away.—John Hall.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. James G. Sibley, P. C., Columbia circuit, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, Aug. 9: "Yesterday evening I closed, at old Hopewell Church, one of the most profitable meetings I have ever held. This circuit is prospering all over in all things."

Rev. R. T. Nolen, L. P., Tranquil circuit: "The Lord is with us in great power at Tranquil Church. Only two days of our meeting have gone, during which the Lord has wonderfully blessed us. Five grown people have given their names as applicants for membership in our church. Our much-loved pastor and this writer are doing the preaching. Pray for us. Glory to God!"

Rev. J. S. Sanders, Rayne, La., Aug. 11: "We have just closed an eight days' meeting at Church Point, Plaquemine Brulee circuit. The meeting was a great victory. We had between 15 and 25 conversions and reclamations, one gloriously sanctified, 15 accessions to the church. The congregation increased till all the standing room was taken up and numbers sat in buggies at the windows. The outlook on this circuit is good."

Rev. James G. Sibley, Columbia, Miss., Aug. 9: "Bro. M. L. White has held his meeting at Blountville, and it was a decided success. Methodism is on her feet in that locality. He began there three years ago with fifteen members. There are now more than sixty, and they have a neat, new and beautiful house of worship, completed and painted; organ, lamps and all other necessary furniture. Bro. White is in favor with his people. They very much want him back next year. He is growing, still growing in favor and usefulness among them."

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, P. E., Arcadia, La., Aug. 10: "I am rejoiced to be able to report the Arcadia district a-glow with revival fire. Haynesville, Arcadia, Minden, Tulip, Sparta, Ringgold and Lisbon circuits especially have had meetings of unusual power. Other charges have meetings in progress and to begin soon, from which we expect glorious results. Our District Conference was a grand occasion from which many will date the beginning of spiritual life. Finances are far in arrears, but with the abundant harvest that evidently awaits us we expect to come up all right in the end."

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, P. C., Pelahatchie, Miss., Aug. 10: "God's people have won another grand victory for the Master on Clarksburg circuit. We closed our meeting at Lodabar last night. It was the greatest revival of true heartfelt religion that I ever witnessed. I never saw Christians happier in the love of God; never knew God's servants pray more earnestly or work more faithfully for the salvation of souls. About 20 conversions. Many backsliders reclaimed, 20 accessions, 15 or 20 promised to erect family altars. Rev. J. C. Ellis, of Westville, rendered faithful assistance. To God be the praise! In my report from the Clarksburg meeting, published this week, it should have been 50 conversions and reclamations, not 15."

Rev. A. J. Foster, P. C., Big Creek, Miss., Aug. 9: "Rev. Joe J. Jones has just held two meetings for me—one here at Big Creek and the other at Pittsboro. Results: 46 accessions to the church, a number of others awakened and promised to join. Bro. Jones held a meeting for us last year, and great good was done, but I believe more good was done this year than was done last year. We think Bro. Jones is a better Christian and preaches better than he did last year. The more we hear him preach the better we like to hear him and the better we love him. I believe he is a holy, good man. No one knows the good he has done in this country. My church would not seat the people. They built a tabernacle at Pittsboro at the end of the church, and here we held the meeting out-of-doors. Sin was denounced, Christians exhorted to live better lives. I thank God that Bro. Jones has been here and preached. Bro. Gilreath was with him."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Lisbon, La., Aug. 6: "We resumed our revival work (after the district meeting) on last Saturday. The glorious work moves on with great power. Lisbon is deeply stirred and souls are being saved. Our meeting at Arizona in last month was a grand success. The church at that place is in better condition than at any time since I have been in charge. I was assisted in the services by Rev. C. R. Seward, of Tulip circuit. My whole circuit is in very good condition spiritually."

Rev. F. M. Keen, Heidelberg, Miss.: "Heidelberg circuit is tending upward in many respects. Have had some gracious revivals, and all departments of church work appear to have received a fresh impetus. Rev. Joe Jones assisted me in a meeting at Heidelberg. The visit and preaching of this faithful and fearless man of God was indeed a benediction to our little town. Results: 29 accessions and the church wonderfully blessed. Rev. D. P. Bradford assisted me in a meeting at Saudersville. There was very little material outside of the church for us to work on. Bro. Bradford did us faithful work, which was blessed of God to the awakening of the church and caused 4 persons to take up their cross and follow Christ. In the early part of the year Rev. W. W. Hopper spent a few days with me at Laurel. This meeting was of great benefit to the church, and if Bro. H. could have remained longer we would doubtless have had a sweeping revival, as the indications were very good indeed. On the first Sunday in June was begun what proved to be the greatest religious awakening ever known in the town of Laurel. I was assisted by Mrs. M. M. Snell, of Columbus. I rarely ever saw the power of God so manifest in the conviction and conversion of the people. Visible results: 33 accessions to our church, several to the other churches, and every member of our church, so far as I know, who had not professed conversion did so during the meeting. I have received 96 members into the church, most of whom have been converted; made 333 pastoral visits, and baptized 19 children; 50 per cent. of the pastor's and presiding elder's salary paid; over 50 per cent. of the Conference collections collected in cash, and most of the remainder in good subscription. To God be all the glory!"

Rev. J. W. Anderson, P. C., Kosciosko, Miss.: "I beg a little space in your paper to tell what great things the Lord has done for us recently in Kosciusko. On Sunday, July 15, we began a protracted meeting here in the Methodist Church, and on Wednesday following the Rev. W. M. McIntosh, according to previous arrangements, joined us in the good work and preached with great power from two to three times every day for nine days, to the close of the meeting, July 27. For more than six months we have been working and praying for the baptism of the Holy Ghost to come upon Kosciusko, and now, thank God, it has come in great power. There were about 140 conversions and reclamations. About 80 gave their names to join the different churches, and great numbers of church members pledged themselves to live better Christian lives. It was an old-time revival. Sinners were pungently convicted for sin, mourners were happily converted to God, while Christians were enabled to rejoice aloud in God, their Savior. Many old difficulties and hard feelings between neighbors and relatives were happily settled, and the parties promised to love and pray for each other from this time on. Hundreds of Christians pledged themselves publicly to stand by their pastors and to be more loyal to the church in every way. The pastors and members of all the other denominations joined with heart and hand in the good work, and will share largely in the results of the meeting. So deep and far reaching were the influences of the meeting that every store, bank and office closed for the forenoon service, and the people turned out in mass, Jews and Gentiles, to hear the Word of God preached. At a call, made by Bro. McIntosh on the last day of the meeting, more than 200 men stood up and promised to stand by and assist the officers of the law in putting down vice and lawlessness. Indeed, Mr. Editor, it was 'good to be here,' and hope it will be better. We received 33 members into the church yesterday, and ten or fifteen more are yet to join. We hope to organize an Epworth League for our young people before long and do a grand work for God and the church in Kosciusko. Bro. McIntosh endeared himself greatly to this people, and will long be remembered by them. He is truly a man of God and well fitted for the work of an evangelist. I heartily commend him to all who may need his services. Many thanks to Bros. Worsham, Dullar, McCullough, Newsom, and other visiting brethren, for valuable services rendered, and especially do we thank Bro. Rhymes, the Baptist pastor of this place, and Dr. Alexander, the ex-pastor of the Presbyterian Church in this town, for their co-operation and faithful work throughout the meeting. May the Spirit of God abide among us!"

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Vaiden charge, North Mississippi Conference: "We are on higher ground and still rising. Just closed a glorious revival at Kilmichael. Some were convicted, some converted, some reclaimed, and all blessed and strengthened together. God is more loved, his cause more appreciated and reverenced and his people are stronger and happier and holier. 'The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.' We thank God for these seasons of refreshing and strengthening. We can not get along without them. We have had signs and evidences all along during the year of the presence and power of God in our work. We often, at our monthly appointments, call for decision and open the doors of the church. In a call like this, not long since, I received 4 into the church. One of the number was an old man 78 years of age who lived 29 years out in the far West and never heard a sermon. I have also received a little boy into the communion of God's people, only 4 years of age; so I have the extremes. So we preach and so the people believe. Our revival meeting was prefaced by our third Quarterly Conference. Our efficient and much appreciated presiding elder, Bro. S. M. Thames, was on hand early Saturday morning almost before anyone else reached the church. He was there in the spirit and power of the gospel of Jesus Christ. His preaching was in power and in demonstration of the Spirit, and more than met the expectation of those who knew him best. His sermons were masterpieces for thought and logical precision and deep moving pathos and touched all minds and hearts in the audience. The people laughed and cried and responded in hearty amens, and promised to be more faithful to their Lord and more zealous in his service. We are sorry Bro. Thames' time on this district expires with this Conference year. The people regard him as a man of God, actuated only by his love of the church and the cause of human souls. He has done a great work on the Winona district in these four years, and we all hate to give him up. Bro. J. Ritchey, the strong and noble man of Winona station, came to our rescue on Monday morning, and took up the work where the presiding elder left off. He remained with us four days, doing some of the strongest and best preaching it has been my privilege to listen to. He finds the truth, gets down into it and presents it to his hearers in a clear, simple, but forceful and masterful manner. When he preaches the people see the truth and feel its force and power. He makes no attempt at oratory or eloquence, but the truth as he presents it is eloquent and powerful. It is applied as he goes on, and each one feels the application. I have not heard a stronger and clearer preacher anywhere in North Mississippi. We shall never forget the faithful work he did among us. We had 10 accessions, and I do not know how many we would have had but for the fact that almost everybody in the whole community belongs to some church. I think all that attended joined over in their heart of hearts. The last night of the meeting we took a subscription for the purpose of building a new church in the town, as the old one is some distance away, and we held our meeting in the academy in the town. We got about $600 for this purpose, and we think we can run it up to $900 or $1,000."

NORTH KEMPER'S GRAND REVIVAL.

The meeting at Union Ridge Church began on Saturday, July 21, at eleven o'clock, and closed on Friday night, July 27, having had two services each day.

This meeting was pronounced by several as "the grandest meeting ever held in this county." The influence of the meeting is felt for miles beyond the community. The attendance upon this meeting was large from beginning to end. The conversions in the meeting were as bright as this writer ever witnessed. Hard sinners were made to quake and tremble. Everywhere the people would be found talking about the grand meeting at Union Ridge. During the service of one morning many penitents were at the altar seeking pardon. As we rose from prayer one young man went out into the congregation, making his way to his father, who was out of Christ, and there the son entreated the father to live for God and heaven. How that father could sit unmoved was a mystery to me. The young man referred to arose one day in the presence of the large congregation and said: "I ask you and everyone in this house who has any love for a poor sinner to pray for me. I'll pray for myself, for I tell you all to day I am lost! I am lost! I am lost!" That night he came back to the church rejoicing in the hope of the glory of God. He came up to the altar and said: "I am saved and am in the hands of the Lord and church, willing to do anything I can for my Lord." I called on him to offer prayer during the altar service; and such a prayer he did offer! He was a backslider, a member of the church; but, thank God, he is a-fire with the love of God now. He never refused to discharge a single duty I put upon him during the meeting.

The results of this meeting will never be fully realized until eternity itself reveals them. The visible results are as follows: 27 conversions, 10 accessions to the church, a weekly prayer meeting established, several family altars erected, the church revived as never before.

The pastor gives the following as a synopsis of his work for the month of July: 32 sermons preached, 6 infants and 1 adult baptized, 12 members received into the church; married 1 couple. There were 47 conversions on North Kemper charge during July. To God be all the glory and praise! Nothing but divine power could move things as they were moved on North Kemper during the month of July.

Mt. Pleasant and Union Ridge Churches are to-day a fire with the religion of the Lord Jesus. Pray for us, Doctor, that we may be encouraged to go on to yet greater conquests of victory. God bless you and the ADVOCATE!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Many people have been lost because their heads refused to follow their hearts.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Don't run after a lie. Just let it alone and it will run itself out of breath.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The bribery case of Councilman Callahan is being tried in the Criminal Court, this city.

The Savannah News says that a large number of Norwegian farmers, who have been settled in Iowa, are preparing to leave that State and make their homes in Florida.

The forty-fifth Annual Convention of the Louisiana State Baptist Association met in Amite City on Aug. 18. Rev. Dr. D. I. Purser, of New Orleans, was elected president.

The House Committee on Judiciary, on Aug. 17, decided to favorably report Senator Hill's bill for the exclusion and deportation of alien anarchists, which passed the Senate.

The Democratic Convention of Texas completed the ticket for State officers on Aug. 17. Chas. A. Culberson was nominated for governor. He is a young man, thirty-five years old, a finished scholar in law and literature, and a finent and eloquent speaker.

For perhaps the first time the price of corn exceeds that of wheat. This is due to the opening up of the wheat lands by the transcontinental railways and to the invention of improved machinery for sowing and harvesting. Farmers in Illinois are feeding their wheat and selling their corn.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Hon. Joseph Miller, in a letter to Collector Carter, collector of Internal revenue, in this city, ruled that all sugar produced before the approval of the new Tariff bill will entitle the producer to a bounty on the same, in accordance with the provisions of the bounty law. The day the Tariff bill goes into effect the bounty law, system and bureau will cease to exist as completely as if it had never had a being.

On Aug. 18 the United States Senate adopted, by a vote of 27 to 16, a resolution, introduced previously by Senator Murphy, to the effect that no further tariff legislation should be considered at this session. This practically shelves the popgun bills, including that providing for free sugar, until the short session in December. The sugar planters of this State will hail the action of the Senate with satisfaction, as it will at least insure that the sugar interests will have to fear no further cutting down of the protection for the next six months at least. The loss of the sugar bounty on this year's crop was a serious enough blow; but the passage of the House free sugar bill, or even the substitute of 30 per cent. ad valorem offered by Senator Jones, would have meant annihilation.

Congressman Robertson, of Louisiana, said on Aug. 17: "No free sugar bill will be reported from the Finance Committee of the Senate this session of Congress is the general impression of the leaders of both the House and the Senate. There is little or no hope of securing a continuance of the bounty even for this year, by reason of the fact that it is impossible to ascertain what bounty could be fixed until it is known whether the single shot bill will pass. There is a general disposition of the House on the Democratic side to give the bounty or a portion of it for this year. If sugar should be free I believe the House would be willing to give the entire bounty already earned I feel convinced that the wrong which has been done in the failure to provide for the bounty this year will be rectified to some extent at least when Congress meets in December."

FOREIGN.

A bloody battle has been fought at Songhwan, Corea, in which the Chinese were defeated with 1,400 loss. The loss of the Japanese was less than 100 men.

Many tin plate works in South Wales, which have been closed for some time, are preparing to resume work in view of the passage of the Tariff bill in Washington.

On account of the war between China and Japan, both governments are seeking loans of money. Fully $500,000,000 have been offered to China, while Japan has authorized a loan of $80,000,000.

Ben Tillett, who was the organizer of the great London dock strike, has been repudiated by his followers, who are tired of stinting themselves to pay him a salary of $1,500 a year for getting them into trouble.

A firm of wool dealers in Hamilton, Ontario, have over 1,000,000 pounds of wool stored in warehouses, nearly all of which will be shipped to the United States when the new tariff becomes a law. The Canadian wool clip, as well as the clip of the last year, is nearly all in the country warehouses.

The celebration of the feast of the Assumption has been made the occasion for a riotous demonstration in Belfast, Ireland. The disturbances were begun by a mob of nationalists, who first attacked and beat a party of Protestants and then vented their wrath upon Protestant people. The residences of a number of Protestants were then attacked and more or less damaged.

The Samoan question is again giving the government uneasiness. A rebellion has existed in the islands for some time past, and the forces of the native government have not been able to suppress it. As Great Britain, Germany, and the United States have guaranteed the autonomy of the islands and the preservation of good order, the three powers are morally bound to extend assistance to the native king.

Real Faith never grows weak by having to wait. Sufferers taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for chronic complaints should be patient and the result will be satisfactory. Hood's Cures.

Hood's Pills act easily, yet promptly and efficiently, on the liver and bowels. 25c.

The Japanese government wants to secure the services of 1,000 Americans to go to the dominion of the Mikado and help the Japanese in their struggles with the Chinese. The sum of $25 per month, besides transportation to and from Japan, and necessary rations, are promised those who will enlist. It is contended that a regiment of 1,000 men would furnish material from which officers could be secured to lead the nation's troops.

The Malone College.

The Malone College, for the education of girls only, is situated at the junction of the K. C., M. and B. and I. C. R. R., in the town of Holly Springs, the highest point in the State of Mississippi. The property is owned by a stock company; but the college is under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South, at Holly Springs and of the North Mississippi Conference.

The college building is well ventilated and furnished throughout with new furniture, and the fare is just such as the president, his family and the teachers have, for they all eat at the same tables. Our faculty is composed of seven members of the Methodist Church and one Presbyterian. Two of them are daughters of Methodist preachers, and one of them a Methodist preacher's widow. Not one of them could be induced to play a game of cards, pass the wine glass or attend a dance.

Our prices are out low to correspond with the scarcity of money. Board at ten dollars per month. Tuition in collegiate department, three dollars; French, two dollars; music, including use of piano, three dollars; art, two and three dollars. Elocution in class, one dollar. This we are enabled to do by spending no money to publish costly catalogues or send drummers abroad, depending alone on the health and accessibility of our locality and the work we are doing to advertise us.

We closed our last session with forty music pupils, and twice the number of boarders we had the year before.

There are no incidental fees. Patrons are only bound for the time they send; can withdraw at any time. Traveling preachers are charged only half-price for board and tuition.

The next session will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 18, and continue nine months. Payments monthly or in advance. J. W. HONNOLL, Prest.

UNFAILING.

BY THE REV. HENRY BURTON, M. A.

There is an arm that never tires,
So gentle, yet so strong;
The arm on which our grief expires,
And sighing turns to song.

There is a well that never fails;
When earthly springs are low,
The weary heart, in Baca's vales,
Hears the soft overflow.

There is a light that never dies,
Clear shining through the years;
For changeless love lights up our skies,
The rainbow gilds our tears.

There is a song our soul may sing
When lying in the dust—
A stricken bird with broken wing—
It is the song of trust.

There is a joy does not depart,
Whatever seeming ill
May throw its shadow on the heart—
The joy of his sweet will.

There is a rest, a Sabbath rest,
Beyond the sin and care;
But he who leans on Jesus' breast
Finds heaven is everywhere.

Liscard, England.

"Why They Did Not Join the Methodists."

In the second table, as he calls it, Bro. H. says: "They"—the Methodists "are broader than the Bible and broader than their own Discipline." How so? In this way: The Discipline says: "No one shall be admitted to the Lord's Supper among us who is guilty of any practice for which we would exclude a member of our church," and then it provides that "if a member of our church endeavor to sow dissension in any of our societies by inveighing against either our doctrines or Discipline," and shall persist in such practice, he shall be expelled from the church.

Now, taking these two provisions of our Discipline in connection with the fact that Baptist ministers inveigh against our doctrines and Discipline, he concludes that when we invite them to the Lord's table we are broader than our own Discipline, and guilty of breaking our solemn vows. To superficial minds his reasoning may appear to be sound. He asks his good sister if such an invitation as we extend would include him, and she, always ready with a convenient answer, says, "It certainly would." But she is just a little too fast for safe traveling.

Bro. H. had fixed his eyes on "inveighing against either our doctrines or Discipline," and thought that was the thing for which a member of our church can be expelled. But if he will look again, he will find that something is said about endeavoring to sow dissension in our societies by this inveighing against our doctrines and Discipline. Let him go into any Methodist community and endeavor to sow dissension in the church, and then present himself at the Lord's table, and he will find that the invitation does not include him, and that we are not broader than the Bible and our own Discipline. He may preach against our doctrines and our Discipline if he wishes to do so, and we shall not call in honesty and sincerity in question, but when he endeavors to sow dissension in our churches, then he becomes guilty of unchristian conduct, and is not embraced in the invitation to the Lord's Supper.

Bro. H. says the Methodists have persistently misrepresented the Baptists. If so, he ought not to complain, for he has set them a most humiliating example.

Misrepresentation No. 7: Methodists teach a doctrine of obedience to ecclesiastical authority which is contrary to the Bible.

Hear him: "Then I wish to say another thing. Baptists believe that God alone has a right to say what we shall believe and do. Methodists say that men have a right to say to other men with what they shall believe and do; and they must obey under penalty of being excluded from the ministry, and even from the church."

Bro. H.'s little book has one excellence worthy of all praise. His accusations against Methodism are positive and explicit. He knows what he would have to prove. His logic, however, is exceedingly defective. He has not been able to sustain a single charge. The weakness of the arguments offered to sustain the charge made in the above quotation is so manifest that they can deceive no one except such as a very accommodating sister. For the benefit of such it may be well to look into this a little.

To prove his statement he offers three arguments. He refers, first, to a question and answer given in the ordination of elders. The question is this: "Will you reverently obey your chief ministers, unto whom is committed the charge and government over you, following with a glad mind and will their godly admonitions, submitting yourselves to their godly judgments?" This is the answer: "I will do so, the Lord being my helper."

Now, what is there wrong in this? Does not the New Testament authorize the existence of church government?—and does not the idea of government imply governors and obedience? And were there not different orders of ministers in apostolic times? "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." Paul was an apostle, and Timothy and Titus were evangelists, acting under his authority and directions. Timothy was stationed in Ephesus, and Titus in Crete. He wrote two epistles to Timothy, and one to Titus, commanding them to do certain things. Here we have an illustration of the government of the Methodist Church respecting the ministry, and we feel perfectly safe in following the guidance of such inspired directions. Paul not only exercised authority over evangelists, but the same thing is true of elders. "From Miletus he sent to Ephesus and called the elders of the church," and said to them: "Take heed, therefore, unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers." Here we have an illustration of the authority exercised by the ministry over the church. These elders were overseers, or bishops, over the flock. Paul gave instruction to the elders under him for the benefit of the flock under them. Other references to the teachings of the New Testament might be made. Peter exhorted the elders not to be lords over God's heritage, showing that they had authority over the church and might abuse it. (See also Heb. xiii, 17.)

Now, before it can be proven that the submission of one grade of ministers to another, in the exercise of their godly admonitions and judgments, is contrary to the Scriptures, it must be shown that the church government in the days of the apostles was wrong, and that when the spirit of inspiration was withdrawn no room was left in the church for the exercise of common sense. If at any time the admonitions and judgments of our chief ministers are not "godly," the responsibility is with them, and no one is under obligations to obey.

Our New Educational Plans.

Dear Brethren: The Board of Education established by the last General Conference appreciates the importance and the magnitude of the work committed to it, and will neither despise the trust nor shrink from its execution. The problems presented, however, are both difficult and delicate, and demand mature consideration before the policy of the Board and the line of educational advance can be safely defined and promulgated. Financial conditions also limit our activity for the present. Under these circumstances the action reported by Dr. Kirkland in another column is, we think, safest and wisest for the church, as it reduces the expenses during the period of investigation to the smallest possible sum.

According to the General Minutes of 1893, which omit many institutions (at least four in Virginia, with buildings and endowment of $400 000), our church has under its care 179 schools and colleges, in which $6 023,042 is invested. These institutions were all separately organized, and are held under every variety of tenure and of relation to our church. They have charge of the educational work of our people, which is not only important, but necessary to the church for the accomplishment of its mission.

The character of our educational institutions, and their maintenance and development, are of vital importance to us; hence it is that the General Conference, determined to give connectional strength and supervision to this great agency. When an interest is aroused proportioned to the importance of this work, and the energies of our million and a third of members are concentrated and directed on strategic points by a connectional system, we shall see a great advance along this line.

There is need also of wise counsel and united action, in view of the situation in which our church institutions find themselves in the presence of the modern movement for free education by the State, extending gradually into all fields of instruction and covering all branches of knowledge. It is scarcely too much to say that a crisis is upon us from this movement which must be met. We have a field and a mission in this work of education, and if we rightly understand and occupy the field, we shall achieve the mission. Otherwise our interests will suffer great loss, and our work of spreading scriptural holiness throughout these lands will be greatly impeded.

The Board has made arrangements for the necessary clerical work, and the members, including the secretary, will give unpaid service in planning and presenting this interest to the church. The brethren who have been announced as its representatives at the various Conferences were specifically elected by the Board for that duty, and go with its full sanction and authority.

As a part of the duty laid upon the secretary, I will visit such of our institutions as circumstances allow, and will be pleased to counsel with them as they may desire. While laden with many duties and responsibilities which prevent me from giving that undivided attention to this work which its importance would fully justify, I shall be glad to be useful where I may, and am pleased to feel that the church is not burdened for my support.

I ask the cordial co-operation of all the Conferences in the plans of the Board, which carry out the orders of the General Conference, and the prayers of our people for the success of this new movement in our church.

Fraternally, WM. W. SMITH,
Cor. Sec.

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 20, 1894.

Notes from Delhi District, Louisiana Conference.

MR. EDITOR: Having seen no news from this district for some time, I take the liberty of sending you some notes. We can't boast of such a scene as that enacted at the Arcadia District Conference—you know we are in the swamp—but we can show up very favorably along other lines.

On July 3 the Sunday-school Conference of this district convened at Oak Ridge. This was one of the most pleasant and profitable meetings of the kind I have ever attended. Men had been appointed to lead the discussions on the various subjects, and, with two exceptions, they were all on hand. The discussions on the various subjects were very interesting. Bro. Reames struck the key-note when he said that "head culture without heart culture is a dangerous thing." Our presiding elder, Rev. H. O. White, gave us the advantage of his large experience in many short speeches, always to the point, and always containing something for his auditors to take home with them. The young men did most of the preaching.

Rev. R. A. Davis and the good people of Oak Ridge made us feel perfectly at home, and, as a result, we enjoyed ourselves to the fullest extent.

The District Conference of this district met in Winnboro, La., on July 25. Pastor Chas. F. Staples and his good people had made ample provision for supplying every need of their guests, and, as might be supposed, every member of the Conference was put at the best place in town.

The first day of the Conference was devoted to Sunday-schools, many of the brethren giving glowing accounts of their schools. The remainder of the time of the Conference was devoted to reports from the work and from committees. Some good work has been done, some revivals were reported, some improvements in church property have been made, and many plans have been laid for the future.

We had the pleasure of having Rev. A. D. McVoy, president of Mansfield College, and Prof. C. C. Weir, agent of Centenary College, with us. We enjoyed their talks very much, and hope to be able to respond in a substantial way soon.

Rev. B. F. White, at Monroe, is, as usual, hard at work. Last Tuesday he had Rev. J. F. Foster, of Delhi, to address the Epworth League, and Rev. Robt. Wynn, of Parker Chapel, New Orleans, with Bro. Foster, to help him in a meeting. He looks for Sam Jones to storm the town in about a month from now.

Rev. I. T. Reames has had four good meetings on his work this year. He hopes to build a church this Fall at Clear Lake, having the ground and about one hundred dollars toward that end.

Rev. J. F. Foster is doing a good work at Delhi, and is going into the regions beyond.

Rev. N. S. Cornell reported his work in good condition. He has the banner Epworth League of the district.

Rev. R. A. Davis is in favor with the good people of Oak Ridge. He has completed a beautiful little church at Collinston, which he hopes to have dedicated soon.

The people of Lind Grove report that Rev. J. H. Brown is doing a good work.

Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker, at Bastrop, is hard at work, both for himself and his brethren in the ministry.

Rev. H. O. White, our presiding elder, is in favor with the people of the whole district, who, in this case, would like to see the time-limit abolished.

Rev. C. R Godfrey reports Floyd in a flourishing condition.

West Monroe has not grown as she should this year, as I have been sick off and on since May; but, with the Lord's help, we will be on hand at the great round-up this Fall. Rev. J. F. Foster is booked to help us in September, and Rev. I. T. Reames for the fourth week in August at Cuba.

Yours, etc., WM. G. EVANS.

Domiciliated.

This little note will inform the friends of Centenary College that we are now "at home" in the president's house, and will be ready to enter upon the work which begins Sept. 5. We were cordially received by the good people of Jackson, many attentions being shown us, which were highly appreciated. We had a weary time waiting on railroad rapidity to deliver our goods. Our car was ready to leave New Orleans, Wednesday evening, and it arrived at Ethel, a distance of one hundred and thirteen miles, the next Monday about noon. That is rapid transit that means something. However, clever friends took care of us meanwhile, and other clever friends hauled our chattels at a very small cost. Excepting a few articles smashed in transitu, we are all here, and expecting a good opening on the first day of the session.

I am constantly receiving letters of inquiry about terms, etc. Let me say now to every reader of the ADVOCATE that the instruction imparted at our school is inferior to that of no other college, and the terms are as cheap as at any other. The tuition is $35 for the whole session, which begins the first Wednesday in September and ends the first Wednesday in June. The best of board can be obtained for $10 per calendar month. The dormitory rooms are given rent free, but the student must furnish it, and he can do that as cheaply as he likes.

Now, let every Methodist in Louisiana who has a boy of school age, send him along to us. All we ask is a fair trial. C. W. CARTER, President.

Jackson, La., Aug. 26, 1894.

Report of Committee on Education, Shreveport District Conference.

Dear Brethren: Your Committee on Education heard with pleasure the speech of Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., president of Centenary College. We listened with interest to his recital of its past history, and that interest was accentuated when he spoke of its present work and future prospect. It is matter for just pride that so many of its graduates have taken first rank both in Church and State. This is as it should be. Methodism was cradled in one of the world's foremost universities, and throughout her useful career has been the persistent advocate and promoter of education.

Though Methodism has been foremost in her aggressive zeal for the world's evangelization, her zeal for the cause of education has kept pace. Wherever the voice of her heralds has been heard proclaiming the "glorious gospel of the blessed God," it has not been long until the walls of a college building arose, that sanctified learning might complete the conquest which revealed religion had begun. Pursuing this policy in the past, we have triumphed. Success in the present, or for the future, requires, more than ever, the continuance of the like sound policy. The facilities for knowledge are wider; the level of intelligence is higher. Other educational influences—some of them indifferent to Christianity; some positively opposed to its spirit and precepts—must be combatted. If our loved church is to continue her leadership of men, and maintain her place as the molder of mind, she must demonstrate her fitness for this lofty function by her superior culture.

In the cheering report made by President Carter, we would not overlook his earnest plea for co-operation, both with financial gifts and patronage. Brethren, the appeal is to you. You concede that the college is vitally related to the intelligent piety of our church. We, therefore, in conclusion offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That as an earnest of our devotion to Centenary College, we pledge ourselves, as a District Conference, to send one student who wishes to prepare himself for the ministry in our church.

We feel that this report would be incomplete unless we called attention to the Mansfield College for our girls. Whatever may be said for the education of our boys, that, and more, may be said for the education of our girls, if for no other reason because the burdens of life fall heaviest upon them. In the cultured, competent hands of Rev. A. D. McVoy, D. D., and the teachers associated with him, we are confident our girls will receive the best education under the most favorable circumstances. We, therefore, commend this institution to our people for their patronage.

Whitworth College.

There may be those who suppose that Whitworth College is an antiquated concern as to its furnishings, using worn-out "tin-pan" pianos, last century bed-room suits, etc. If there are such persons, they do not know the new president. The following, clipped from the Crystal Springs Meteor, will be an eye-opener on that subject:

A BIG PURCHASE—A FINE SCHOOL.

Under date of Aug. 11 the Commercial-Appeal has the following personal notice: "Rev. John W. Chambers, president of Whitworth Female College, of Brookhaven, Miss., was in the city yesterday, and, as a result of his visit, the two Behr Bros. grand pianos, purchased by O. K. Houck & Co. at a special sale in New York, have become the property of Whitworth College."

It may be a matter of interest to Whitworth's friends and patrons to know that the regular list price of these two instruments was $3,100.

The handsome oak suits purchased for the dormitory, together with other improvements going on at the college, backs up in handsome style the superb faculty which President Chambers' ability just gathered together.

In every department of the work is seen the hand of a master. So abundant have been the labors of our brother in other church work that we were surprised to learn that he had had fourteen years' actual experience in the school-room. No wonder that applications for catalogues are coming in more rapidly than the demand can be supplied. The school was never more worthy of the liberal support of our people than it is to-day.

Crystal Springs Camp Meeting.

The camp meeting on Hennington Camp Ground, near Crystal Springs, opened Thursday evening, Aug. 10, with a large attendance. Some thirty or more families were already encamped on the grounds, and many came out from Crystal Springs to hear their former pastor and present presiding elder preach the opening sermon. Bro. Norsworthy gave forth no uncertain sound. His preaching was clear and vigorous, and the congregation was deeply moved. The after service of consecration and prayer was one of the best of the meeting.

Rev. Joe Jones reached the grounds Friday, beginning his work Friday night. He worked untiringly from the hour of his arrival. With one or two exceptions, he preached four times every day. He had the ear of the people from the first. His manifest sincerity and candor gave him a sympathetic hearing, notwithstanding his powerful conscience-stirring denunciation of sin and castigation of sinners. Bro. Jones has rare power of humor, and sometimes was grandly eloquent. Congregations grew steadily, and on Sunday there was an overflow.

On Wednesday the Mississippi Chautauqua Assembly met, and elected officers for the ensuing year—Bishop Galloway, president, and this correspondent, secretary. It is expected that another year an excellent literary and educational programme will precede the annual camp meeting, and the plan is to organize as many local circles throughout the State as possible, making them tributary to the annual assembly. I shall be glad to co-operate with any of your readers in the organization of local circles.

A number of preachers were present, and helped to make this camp meeting a success.

R. W. BAILEY.

In the Living Present.

General denunciation is rampant. The "ins" are all rascals and rogues; the "outs," the quintessence of purity. That men may advocate a given measure from conscientious convictions of duty, though radically disagreeing with us, does not seem possible with many. Does not this impossibility prove that the said skeptics are also knaves, if not simpletons? Our government—National, State and Municipal—is representative. If the representatives are bad, then those whom they represent can not be good, for the latter put the former in office.

The New Orleans city government is now being indiscriminately condemned. Some of the councilmen have been charged with crime. One Callahan, a prominent Knight of Labor, has been convicted of bribe-taking. Let no guilty man escape. But now to charge that all the officials of our city are "boodlers" establishes, if it establishes anything, that we ourselves are not pure, are not to be trusted. When charged with crime, even the law of our land looks upon the party charged as innocent until proven guilty. Should we, under the reign of the gospel, do less? Of those in authority we should think and speak with respectful deference.

Our readers are aware that with the new Tariff bill an income tax has been fixed. Less than $4,000 go free. But on an income to that amount, and more, an annual tax of two per cent. has been imposed. Methodist preachers are not likely to be afflicted by this law. Treasurer Carlisle expects an annual revenue of fifteen million dollars from this source. All European governments have similar laws, most of them taxing incomes of less than $1,000.

The courts in Pittsburgh, Pa., have decided that nuns may be employed as teachers in public schools, and that they may wear, while thus employed, their official, outlandish garb. Have no idea that the decision will stand in the Court of Appeals, but it shows the great danger to which our free institutions are constantly exposed.

Much ado was made by Monsignor Satolli's decision in the case of Bishop Watterson, of Columbus, O. The Pope's representative endorsed the official action of the Columbus prelate in regard to temperance matters. But the great Italian has discovered that he put his hand into a hornet's nest. A little more than two-thirds of the entire liquor traffic in the United States is in the hands of Roman Catholics. Bishops, priests and laymen became alarmed, and apprised Satolli of the situation. Now the Pope's delegate announces officially that said criticised decision affected simply the Watterson case. That, and nothing more. That he had no idea of interfering with the administration of discipline in other dioceses, etc.

ICH DIEN.

It is related that the late Dr. Phillips Brooks, on seeing a caricature of himself with strictures on his appointment as Bishop, immediately penned the following lines:

"And is this, then, the way he looks,
This tiresome creature, Phillips Brooks?
No wonder, if 'tis thus he looks,
The church has doubts of Phillips Brooks
Well, if he knows himself he'll try
To give these doubtful looks the lie.
He dares not promise, but will seek
Even as a Bishop to be meek;
To walk the way he shall be shown,
To trust a strength that's not his own,
To fill the years with honest work,
To serve his day and not to shirk;
To quite forget what folks have said,
To keep his heart and keep his head;
Until men, laying him to rest,
Shall say, 'At least, he did his best.'"

PATHWAYS THROUGH LIFE.

BY EMMA C. DOWN.

You say, that your life is a failure,
Your future holds naught that is sweet,
That the troublous years bring little but tears,
And always, always defeat.

Mistakes—ay, sins you call them—
May cover your past like a pall,
But the soul that is strong to outlive its wrong
Is the bravest soul of all.

You long to go forth in the battle,
But your feet are fettered quite;
Remember, who serve in the corps of reserve
May be able as those who fight.

You chafe to enter the races,
For pleasure and gold and fame;
Yet many who win 'mid the plaudit's din
Find the prize but an empty name.

The toil that is yours seems fruitless,
Your days are dreary and long;
But the lowliest duty may glow with beauty
When wrought with a cheerful song.

The world's best sweets are denied you,
You have tasted earth's cup of woe;
But who suffers to give that others may live
Has the noblest life, I trow.

O, let us, my friend, do bravely
The work that to us is given,
And smile in belief that what causes us grief
May keep us the closer to heaven.

The pathways we traverse are many
And some are by the barrenest strand;
But with visions grown wide we shall wonder we sighed,
For they led to the Beautiful Land.

Tinnevelli, The Most Christian District of India.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

Tuticorin is in Tinnevelli district. Omnis India in tres partes divisa est. For official purposes India is divided into three parts: Bengal Presidency, Bombay Presidency and Madras Presidency. Each presidency is divided into districts. Madras Presidency comprises all the southeastern portions of the country, and its most southern district is Tinnevelli. It has twelve towns of over 10 000 people each, and it possesses much antiquarian interest, because of its many ancient and magnificent buildings. Along the courses of its rivers have been found sepulchral urns which contain bones, pottery, bronze ornaments, beads, iron weapons and other implements of prehistoric races. It was the seat of the civilization of the Dravidians, who, though at last subdued by the all-conquering Hindu Aryans, gave twelve distinct languages to forty-six millions of people in Southern India. It was in Tinnevelli that Francis Xavier, "the apostle to the Indies," began his preaching in India, 352 years ago. The coasts were at that time famous for pearls, and all the pearl fishers became Xavier's converts. During a whole hour one Sunday afternoon I watched the descendants of these fishermen perform mass in the cathedral at Tuticorin, and in the cool of the evening their Bishop was observed pacing the long, galleried roof of his palace. My native hotel proprietor told me that he was a Christian; that all the people of Tuticorin were; and then he hurried on to attend to his Sunday business. There are some Hindoos and Protestants, but most of the 16,000 people of Tuticorin are Roman Catholics.

The early history of Tinnevelli down to 1781 is a confused tale of anarchy and bloodshed, but it is now the most Christian district of India. The Roman Catholics and Protestants are about equal in number. Counting both, there are in the district about one Christian to every ten of the population, whereas in all India there is not one to each hundred.

In the district is a place called Nazareth, with more than 1,000 population, all of whom are Protestant Christians. Five miles from that place is another with 2,000 people, every one of whom is said to be a Christian. And at Palamoottah, just as the setting sun was casting his last rays over the scorched land, I climbed up and looked along the thoroughfare, and far out over city and distant plain, from a lofty cupola where sits the bell which rings the hour of worship for hundreds of Christians who exhibit in their lives the gospel they profess, composing, as they do, one of the largest Christian congregations of India.

Tinnevelli city itself is a stronghold of Hindnism. I walked all around their great temple, gazing upon its interesting architecture, and was going toward the inner shrine when a crowd of rough young fellows began to ask my purpose, and if I were a Brahman. I proceeded far enough to get glimpses of the temple elephant, the broad sacred tank and the 1000 pillared hall, and then, directed by a young Brahman who attached himself to me at the gateway, I was going to the high priest's house for permission to look further, when the following sign arrested my attention:

UPPER CLAPTON GIRLS' SCHOOL.

Entering, I found the Christian principal very friendly, and willing to take me in charge for the remainder of the day. We let the temple alone and visited instead several mission schools, both for boys and girls, right there in the thickness of the degradation of idolatry. Except at Benares, the Hindu's Jerusalem, the degrading effect of idolatry is nowhere else so visibly demonstrated as it is around the sacred wells and temples of the extreme south of India. But Christian schools and other forces will at last undermine it all.

The Upper Clapton Girls' School is new and has just opened. The money was furnished by a lady of Upper Clapton, London. The teachers are one male principal and 5 mistresses, costing altogether 60 rupees per month. There are 120 students, 8 of whom belong to Christian families, the remaining Hindoos. In boys' mission schools the students furnish books, but in all girls' schools everything is supplied by the society or donations. Boys come gladly and freely, but about one-third of the girls must be collected by a conductress who goes to their homes for them morning and noon. Boys' schools open at seven, the girls' at nine o'clock, because of home business. The schools have no vacations, except the Christian and Hindoo holidays, making altogether more than two months. Scripture lessons are taught daily. The five female teachers of the Upper Clapton School are graduates of the Sarah Tucker Institution, of Palamcottah, and the school is under the supervision of Annie Jane Askwith, who also manages the Sarah Tucker Institution with all its 53 branch and Zenana schools. This institution of the Church Missionary Society of England has many students, with a school of 60 blind girls and boys attached, and has done more than any other institution for the women of South India.

The following are the statistics of the Church Missionary Society for Tinnevelli district in 1893: Congregations, 52 670; baptized, 48,126; communicants, 12,652; school children, 13,218; result-grants, 8,535 rupees; contributions of agents, 8,204 rupees; contributions of congregations, 13,035 rupees.

Result-grants refers to aid received by some of the schools from the government, and contributions of agents means the contributions by the missionaries themselves.

The other society at work in the district is the Society for Propagation of the Gospel, also of England.

Bombay, June 14, 1894.

The Neglected District.

The following resolution, offered and passed, no doubt, by a unanimous vote at the last Opelousas District Conference, deserves consideration. If true, it should be corrected by the Board of Church Extension; and if untrue, the minds of the dear brethren serving in that district should be relieved from the hallucination under which they are laboring.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that our district, and the whole of Southern Louisiana which sorely needs the help of the Church Extension Boards, has been overlooked by these Boards, and that we call the attention of these Boards to the extreme need in this section.

(Signed) W. W. DRAKE,
J. S. SANDERS.

The zeal manifested in this resolution is beautiful and refreshing. The vast possibilities of that district, the expanse of territory undeveloped and wholly neglected by our church, the sweep of the prairies down to the sea, the room for the freezing thousands of the great Northwest, the balmy atmosphere, the soft breezes tempered with bromine from the Gulf—all these influences are enough to enthuse the most stolid, and make them magnify their presiding elder, their own appointments, and the whole district. Everything is apt to be touched with a roseate tinge; hence the desire to have this beautiful country fully developed spiritually, as well as temporally, is irresistible, and, giving way to the impulse, they would unlock the heavy chest of the Church Extension Society and pour out its coin generously for the capture of this land for Christ.

Now, second, our side—a view that is cold and calculating, with only facts before our mind. If this is true, who is to blame? And surely our champion for church extension in Louisiana would not let such a resolution pass through his District Conference unless it was true. But if it is true, thus blazoned to the world, is it not an indirect reflection on the presiding elders and pastors who have been serving this district heretofore? Leaving the writer out, who once had the honor of serving that district, it has been supplied by just as wide-awake, progressive men as now have the appointments in charge. During these ten years of neglect where were these men? It is distressing to have to cast an indirect reflection on all these brethren to awaken the Church Extension Society to its great neglect of this territory.

But there is still another side to this question; it is the inside facts and figures. These dear brethren have erected a man of straw, laboring under a hallucination which is wholly untrue. The facts are these: In the ten years since the organization of the Church Extension Society, the Opelousas district has received from both Boards three times as much as any other district in the State, except the New Orleans district. In that period the Opelousas district has received thirty-three hundred dollars ($3,300), two hundred dollars more than the New Orleans district has received. This district has received more than any three country districts in the State. This is neglect with a vengeance. These figures are taken from Dr. Morton's last report to the General Conference. During this period the Opelousas district has collected twelve hundred and fifty-seven dollars for church extension. That District Conference surely wants the whole of the church extension collection, if in the presence of the above figures it reiterates the statement that the Boards of Church Extension have neglected that territory. To say it has been "overlooked" is truly nonsense in the presence of the liberality of both Boards to this district. This resolution was certainly penned without reference to figures or facts, for these brethren would not have gone so far contrary to the real state of the case. It is to be hoped that the Opelousas district will not be neglected in the future, but be treated as liberally as in the past. May the forces that now man this district push the battle and plant churches in all the vast unoccupied territory till it shall be developed into two large districts!

The Residue Theory.

There is and has been from Mr. Wesley's day to the present time quite a number among his followers that advocate "The Residue Theory." Its advocates, however, do not always call it by that name. They speak and write of it as "inbred sin" and "remains of the carnal mind," etc. It will be observed that none of these phrases are found in the Scriptures. But I do not urge this as an objection to the doctrine of "inbred sin" in regenerate, pardoned believers if it can be shown that the idea is contained in the Scriptures. If it can be proved from the language of Scripture that sin, in the proper meaning of the word, remains in a justified, regenerated believer, we must accept it as true, even though unable to understand how it can be possible. Sin and guilt are correlatives; the one implies the other. It does not help the matter to call it "inbred sin," just as if all sin is not inbred. But waiving that point, if it be sin involving guilt (as it must, if sin at all), whether originating in or outside of the sinner, it needs to be pardoned and destroyed in the act that justifies him. We could tolerate the other phrase, "remains of the carnal mind," if allowed to put our own construction upon it, but not if made to mean sin and guilt. The "Residue Theory" logically necessitates the "Second Blessing Theory." The latter stands or falls with the former. If all sin is pardoned and subdued in spiritual regeneration, there is no necessity for the "second blessing." So we take it that our second-blessing brethren adhere to the "Residue Theory." They must accept the inevitable consequences of the theory. I put it this way: They either do or do not believe all sin pardoned in the act of regeneration. If they do believe it all pardoned, they renounce the "Residue Theory" and, by consequence, the "Second Blessing Theory," and hence there is no issue between us. But if they answer that all sin is not pardoned when God pronounces the sentence of justification, we are perplexed to know how much and what sort of sins are pardoned and what not. I suspect our second-blessing brethren will not be able to help us out of our perplexity.

I hope my second-blessing brethren will not rush into print to tell me what Mr. Wesley said and wrote on this subject; I know that already. I simply want to know how one can be pardoned and stand condemned at the same time; how sin can be subdued and yet remain regnant; how one can enjoy the consciousness of the divine favor through the witness of the Spirit, and yet be in bondage to sin; or how there can be "inbred sin" that does not involve guilt and condemnation; or how sin can be at all if not "inbred." The plot thickens; the difficulties increase in number and magnitude as we proceed.

Again, let me insist that these difficulties be removed before charges of antagonism to the doctrine of holiness be preferred against the writer and others of his way of thinking.

I believe in the doctrine of holiness, and preach it, and am trying to live a life of holiness. D. G. W. ELLIS.

Vicksburg District.

The spirit of the Lord is among us, and the shout of victory comes from almost every point along the line of battle. I have never been associated with a more earnest, laborious and self-sacrificing band of preachers, and the Lord is graciously rewarding their zeal. Unless the signs fail us, there will be good reports to go up to Conference next December of the labors of these faithful men of God. They are visiting from house to house, looking after the lost, the weak, the sick and the afflicted, and are preaching the gospel of power from their pulpits. While they do not claim merit for these things, they do claim to be in the line of duty as expressed by our Lord when he commanded us to preach to everyone, and Christ is fulfilling his promise to be with them. How beautifully and inseparably the duty and the promise are blended together!

And the people are not slow to catch the zeal that inspires the life of the pastor. They are not only receiving the Word into their hearts, but are manifesting the same by finishing, repairing and painting their houses of worship, and by repairing and securing homes for their pastors; but they also promise the full payment of their assessments. It is an unquestionable sign of a sound and growing religious life when people cheerfully put themselves and their money into the service of the Lord. I came home last night so tired and exhausted, I did not think it possible to think or act until I could get needed rest. And as I sat in the most comfortable chair in our humble home and listened to Mrs. W. read the letters that came while I was away, she read one from a young brother that made me forget for a season the fatigue of constant hard labor. It read thus: "I place at your disposal the money to pay the way of any young preacher whom you may select in Millsape College for one year." The young man was at that very moment in my house, and felt the Lord had heard my prayer by directing this brother to send me aid for one I did so long to help.

Providence Camp Meeting.

Our annual encampment for Providence Camp Meeting, Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, has come and gone, and the good impressions made and influences propagated will linger in the memories of preachers and people for months and years to come. The spiritual aspects of the meeting were said to be the best at Providence for years; and the social features were a factor, forming no mean part in the renewal of old friendships and the reunion of Christian hearts, while they had fellowship one with another and held sweet communion with our divine Lord.

In this tabernacle of feasts old feuds were forgotten, covenants made for more thorough consecration to God, resolutions formed, and vows made to erect and re-erect family altars, and to conform home life to the pattern of our great High Priest. The visible results were meager when compared with the deep spiritual work which God wrought among his people. Nine accessions and fifteen conversions were among the visible fruits, and who can estimate the value of such work?

Ministerial aid came promptly to our rescue, and I never heard better preaching at a camp meeting. The brethren came in the spirit and temper of the Master, and declared the whole counsel of God with that earnestness and unction which has marked and stressed our Methodism from the beginning. Entire consecration to God and his cause were characteristics in every sermon and service. The power of God was signalized in all the exercises—in the service of song, as in the experience meetings.

The ministerial brethren who came to our assistance were Revs. R. D. Norsworthy, P. E.; W. B. Lewis, of Natchez; M. L. Burton, of McComb City; Ira B. Robertson, of Bowerton; R. W. Bailey, of Hazlehurst; W. W. Simmons, of Fayette; F. M. Williams, of Mt. Olivet; Wiley Fergusson, of Yazoo, and J. G. Cammack, of Fannin. The labors of these dear brethren, like precious ointment, will linger long in our hearts and in our homes.

Our camp meeting association tenders a vote of thanks to Miss Fannie Larkin, Bros. B. F. Goza, Henry Henington and the choir at Providence for their untiring efforts to promote the glory of God in the sweet songs of our Zion.

Our third quarterly meeting was held at the camp ground, Monday, the sixth instant, with R. D. Norsworthy, P. E., at the helm, steering the ship of church. He is urbane, kind and tender to his preachers, yet punctilious and rigid, supervising all the interests of our Zion, having at heart the prosperity and progress of the church in the Brookhaven district. His administration has been a benediction to this pastor and his people. May the great Head of the church preserve and sustain his useful life for enlarged work in the Master's vineyard.

In conclusion, will you permit me to say that the article in your issue of the second of August, from our belligerent brother at Wesson, smacks neither of saintliness nor that charity which suffereth long and is kind; and at what remote period in the future will the Tennessee editor and our own-beloved Mellen cease their tirades against the authorities of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that wonderful committee of the last General Conference, which have rendered themselves so very obnoxious to these aforesaid brethren? Yours in the gospel,

W. W. HURST.

Do not forget a kind word to each member of the family on parting at night, or a pleasant greeting on meeting in the morning.

In Memoriam.

MRS. MARY S. MURRAH.

The subject of this brief sketch, relict of the late Rev. William Murrah, D. D, of the North Mississippi Conference, was an elect lady of the church, a matriarch of Methodism. Her place of residence for many years was on the boundary line between Alabama and Mississippi, about eleven miles east of Columbus, Miss.; but for several years past she had made her home at the residence of her son-in-law, Dr. Harrington, of Lowndes county, Miss., where she died April 30, 1894, at the ripe age of seventy-eight years. She was born Sept. 6, 1815, in Camden, S. C. Her name before marriage was Mary S. Cureton. Converted in early life, she joined the Methodist Church, and lived and died in its communion, adorning her profession by a pious walk and a godly conversation.

To her native graces of person and character were added the attractiveness of many excellencies of mind and heart. Her life was an exemplification of that spiritual beauty commended by the Apostle Peter; that adorning which, though hidden, is yet incorruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit. This inward adorning, which, in the light of God, is of great price, found expression in her person and character, and gave a charm to all her outward life. Of life's vicissitudes, its responsibilities and cares, and its sore chastenings, she had her share, and amidst them all bore her part in the spirit of meekness and of unmurmuring submission to the will of her heavenly Father. Such a life could not fail to leave an impress for good upon her family and those who knew her best. Her husband found in her a helpmeet in the work of the ministry, and a companion in all the relations of home and domestic life. He could safely trust in her, while her children were ready to rise up and call her blessed.

Though unable, by reason of bodily infirmities, to attend upon the services of the sanctuary, she yet found communion with God in the daily reading of his Word and in her private devotions. Her Bible, good books and religious newspapers furnished food for thought, and brought her into companionship with the good of all the ages, and kept her in touch and sympathy with the current enterprises and work of the church. Amid the delightful atmosphere of a pleasant home, with those who esteemed and loved her, kindly cared for by her excellent son-in-law, and enjoying the loving ministries of a devoted daughter, she had much to render her last days peaceful and happy. Her life's evening sky was serene.

Sister Murrah was truly a mother in Israel, not only by reason of her ripened age and the maturity of her many virtues, but also in that she was both the wife and mother of Methodist preachers. Her husband, eminent in the ministry, served the church in responsible positions, and stood as a conspicuous landmark in the early Methodism of Alabama and Mississippi. One of her sons, Rev. W. B. Murrah, D. D., is the popular president of Millsaps College. Another son, Rev. J. T. Murrah, is serving with great acceptability a charge in the North Mississippi Conference. When the latter, her youngest son, decided to enter the ministry, this Christian mother felt that her cup was full, recognizing herein the answer to her fervent prayers and the fruition of fondly cherished hopes. The memory of such a life is indeed blessed. To her children, specially, it is a legacy richer than gold or silver or worldly estate. The gates of the heavenly mansions, ajar to receive the glorified mother, let glimpses of celestial light down to earth. May the stricken ones see the open gates, and follow her footsteps along the shining way!

Seeking a Better Earth.

Do not be afraid of missing heaven in seeking a better earth. Be sure that, down to the last and pettiest detail, all that concerns a better world is the direct concern of Christ.

Where are you to begin? Begin where you are. Make that one corner, room, house, office, as like heaven as you can. Begin with the paper on the walls, make that beautiful; with the air, keep it fresh; with the very drains, make them sweet; with the furniture, see that it be honest. Abolish whatsoever worketh abomination—in food, in drink, in luxury, in books, in art; whatsoever maketh a lie—in conversation, in social intercourse, in correspondence, in domestic life. This done, you have arranged for heaven, but you have not got it.

Heaven lies within, in kindness, in humbleness, in unselfishness, in faith, in love, in service. To get these in, get Christ in. Teach all in the house about Christ—what he did and what he said, and how he lived and how he died and how he dwells in them, and how he makes all one. Teach it not as a doctrine, but as a discovery, as your own discovery. Live your own discovery.

Then pass out into the city. Do all to it that you have done at your home. Beautify it, ventilate it, drain it. Let nothing enter it which can defile the streets, the newspaper offices, the booksellers' counters; nothing which maketh a lie in its warehouses, its manufactures, its shops, its art galleries, its advertisements. Educate it, amuse it, church it. Christianize capital, dignify labor. Join councils and committees. Provide for the poor, the sick and the widow. So will you serve the city.—Drummond.

Gladstone and the Methodists.

The current number of the Methodist New Connexion Magazine contains a brief, but interesting article on Mr. Gladstone. It pronounces no opinion on his political course, but confines its remarks to his religious character and attitude towards the Methodists of Hawarden. There is a special reason for this tribute, because the New Connexion is the only Methodist body represented in Hawarden; and his bearing towards that denomination and its ministers has been most courteous and friendly. The ministers stationed at Hawarden have also had a good opportunity of witnessing his private life. His outspoken and consistent profession of faith, his habit of visiting and praying with the sick poor, and his able defenses of Christianity against the attacks of skepticism are spoken of in terms of warm appreciation. The following extract will be read with interest:

"The Methodist New Connexion, however, has stronger grounds for such gratitude than any other body. We have been Mr. Gladstone's nearest neighbors, and indeed his only Nonconformist neighbors in Hawarden. Unlike other modern statesmen in England, who have sought to crush dissent out of villages, Mr. Gladstone has not only preserved friendly relations with ourselves, but has sought our acquaintance by every possible courtesy. For more than twenty years he has taken the opportunity of calling in a free way upon our ministers resident at Hawarden, entertaining them at the castle and engaging in converse with them in that delightful way by which he puts everyone at ease with whom he converses. In one case, when Mr. Gladstone called at Hawarden manse, the minister and all his family were out save the minister's venerable and afflicted sire. The prime minister of England asked to be permitted to see him. On being introduced to the veteran, he sat down by his side and spent an hour with him, talking at first on general matters, but quickly entering upon the higher subjects bearing on personal experience. The old Methodist found that enjoyment of religion was by no means limited to his circle, and that a High Churchman and a prime minister could speak as good experience as any uttered in a class meeting. For Mr. Gladstone's transcendent abilities all feel admiration, but these things win our hearts."

The Malone College.

The Malone College, for the education of girls only, is situated at the junction of the K. C., M. and B. and L. C. R. R., in the town of Holly Springs, the highest point in the State of Mississippi. The property is owned by a stock company; but the college is under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South, at Holly Springs and of the North Mississippi Conference.

The college building is well ventilated and furnished throughout with new furniture, and the fare is just such as the president, his family and the teachers have, for they all sat at the same tables. Our faculty is composed of seven members of the Methodist Church and one Presbyterian. Two of them are daughters of Methodist preachers, and one of them a Methodist preacher's widow. Not one of them could be induced to play a game of cards, pass the wine glass or attend a dance.

Our prices are out low to correspond with the scarcity of money. Board at ten dollars per month. Tuition in collegiate department, three dollars; French, two dollars; music, including use of piano, three dollars; art, two and three dollars. Elocution in class, one dollar. This we are enabled to do by spending no money to publish costly catalogues or send drummers abroad, depending alone on the health and accessibility of our locality and the work we are doing to advertise us.

We closed our last session with forty music pupils, and twice the number of boarders we had the year before.

There are no incidental fees. Patrons are only bound for the time they send; can withdraw at any time. Traveling preachers are charged only half-price for board and tuition.

The next session will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 18, and continue nine months. Payments monthly or in advance. J. W. HONNOLL, Pres't.

Holly Springs, Miss., Aug. 6, 1894.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

The Cuisine.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

TEA CAKES.—Yolks of six eggs, half a pound of butter, one pound of sugar, one pound of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder; roll thin, and bake. Make icing with the whites of the eggs, flavor with cinnamon, and spread over the tops of the cakes.

DAINTY DESSERT.—Soak one cup tapioca in cold water for an hour or two, cover with boiling water and boil until clear; do not make it thick enough to make a stiff jelly. Add sugar to taste, and one or two oranges cut fine, or season with almond. Serve either warm or cold with rich cream.

In the absence of other green vegetables cabbage makes an excellent salad, but it must be cut in very fine shreds on a cabbage cutter, and if at all wilted, crisped in cold water and dried thoroughly. Use plenty of oil, and four tablespoonfuls of vinegar, and serve with crackers and cheese.

POTATO OMELET.—Take a pint of cold mashed potatoes and heat over the fire with two tablespoonfuls of sweet cream, beating with a fork until smooth and light. Add four beaten eggs, pepper, salt, and a little nutmeg, and press through a sieve, beat one tablespoonful of butter in a sauce-pan, and cook half of this mixture like an omelet.

TO SERVE COLD BEEF.—Cut cold roast beef in slices, put gravy enough to cover them, and a wine-glass of catsup, or a lemon sliced thin; if you have not gravy, put hot water and a good bit of butter, with a teaspoonful of browned flour; put in a closely covered stew pan, and let it simmer gently for half an hour. If you choose, when the meat is done, cut a pickle in thin slices, and chop a bunch of parsley small, and add it; serve with boiled or mashed potatoes with it.

PRUNE PUDDING.—Soak one pound of prunes over night. In the morning remove the stones, put the prunes in a porcelain-lined kettle with sufficient water to prevent burning, cover the kettle and cook slowly on the back part of the stove until the prunes are perfectly tender; this will take about an hour, then add a cup of sugar and stand aside to cool; when cold press through a colander, or, if you have a "Keystone" beater a few revolutions will reduce them to a smooth pulp. Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, add them to the prunes. Have one quarter of a box of gelatine soaked one half an hour in half a cup of cold water, stand this over the fire until the gelatine is dissolved, stir into the prunes with the whites of the eggs; turn into a mold and stand away to harden. When ready to serve, turn into a pretty dish and pour around it a custard made from a pint of milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and the yolks of three eggs. This custard may be very delicately flavored with bitter almond; be careful only to add a few drops or you will destroy the flavor of the prunes.—Table Talk.

Hygiene.

Exercise for Middle-Aged Men Whose Lives Are Sedentary.

Men whose lives are devoted to office business need vigorous out-of-door exercise just as much as any other class of people and too often confine themselves to driving in the parks or to walking. The London Hospital and Medical Journal suggests that these exercises are not sufficient for Englishmen, and asks, "Why should the literary man, the doctor and the stock broker or the merchant not play cricket after forty-five? What is to become of his dinner hour? is asked. If a better luncheon were taken at midday and a lighter dinner at six in the evening, there is no reason whatever why a man of forty-five and up to sixty-five or seventy should not be in the cricket-field at half-past seven, and play brisk until nine or half-past. An hour and a half at cricket after a light dinner would make the middle-aged men so young that they would not know themselves. Writers would write twice as brilliantly, and business men would be cleverer and keener by half.

"The average middle-aged Englishman of the professional and business classes grows fatter, wheezier, more pompous, and more dull and uninteresting every year of his life. To get a laugh out of him is impossible; to crack a joke at his expense is to commit the unpardonable sin. His innocent pleasures have vanished with his youth, and 'he has nothing now left to live for but his respectability, and his money bags.' The contrast between the youthful Englishman and his middle-aged parent is startling. The former is all life and fun; the latter is a moving mountain of fat. It is all for want of out-door exercise and recreation. Twenty-five years ago the solemn father of today was the fun-loving son of a middle-aged father. If anybody had then shown him in a prophetic mirror the figure he would cut at the end of a quarter of a century, he would have committed suicide in disgust. All this roundity, wheeziness, irritability of temper, incapacity for work, and general disgust with life and all things in it, can be cured forever, and the cure for the vast majority of cases is one or two hours daily vigorous exercise in the open air."—Journal of Hygiene.

The Soda Fountain.

"Nervousness is as much a fad as anything else," said Dr. Egbert Dixon, of Buffalo, to a Washington Star reporter, "and the modern soda water fountain has more to do with the increase of the mania than anything else. In days of old, when soda water was first added to the wares of the druggist, it was devoted entirely to satisfying the public taste for something cool, sweet and refreshing. Fruit syrups of a harmless character were fizzled up to a proper degree of gaseous bubbling and the mission of the soda water fountain was a commendable one. Nowadays it is devoted to bromos, nervines and lots of other things that are made from the deadliest sort of drugs, while they are hung with signs inviting people to become their own physicians by trying some of the countless nostrums which are alleged to cure anything from a headache to an ingrowing toenail in an almost inconceivably small space of time. The tired-out individual sees one of the nervine signs and mistakes his weariness for nervousness and straightway proceeds to doctor himself with something, he knows not what, but which, on account of its powerful properties, braces him up and makes him feel bright. The natural result follows. He takes some more of the soda water fountain stuff whenever he gets tired, and in a month or so his system is on the road to general breaking up. Drugging one's self at a soda fountain is dangerous, and, as I said in the beginning, nervousness is largely a fad. If supposed sufferers from nervous attacks would only go out and split wood for half an hour, if men, or take a brisk walk, if women, and then take a bath and take a nap, there wouldn't be so much heard of this silly rot about nervousness being our national disease."—New Orleans Picayune.

Bananas for Fatigue.

The satisfying qualities of the banana are becoming recognized by our athletes. This fruit is easy to carry, and its firm yet juicy substance affords meat and drink in one. It is better than an orange, for it is easier peeled and has no pips; and it is superior to grapes, because it contains a larger dose, and does not need such careful handling. Of course Stanley's travels have drawn attention to its sustaining power, and its cheapness has placed it within the reach of most people. Formerly bananas were a luxury reserved for the rich, and only figured at the desserts of the wealthy; but now every cyclist can obtain them, and for a long journey there is nothing more invigorating. It is true that they are insipid in this country, but a taste for them once acquired is generally lasting. They are not only refreshing, but they are more—they are sustaining. The insipidity may be overcome by sliding and putting lemon juice over them. If considerable lemon juice is used, a trifle of sugar may also be added.—New York Advocate.

From the Work.

Rev. G. W. Gordon, Neshit circuit, North Mississippi Conference, Aug. 21: "We have held 3 meetings, resulting in 61 accessions to the Methodist Church and several to the Baptist and C. P. Churches. Have two other meetings to hold. 'Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!'"

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C., Bayou Barbary, La., Aug. 21: "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, goodwill toward men! A hush arbor meeting was held at Bayou Barbary, conducted by Rev. J. L. Morrill, of Cartersville, Ga. Eleven new family altars erected, 17 accessions, about 60 conversions, 35 entire sanctifications. Thank God for calling such men as Bro. Morrill unto his glorious ministry."

Rev. J. W. Lee, Vinton, La., Aug. 15: "Have just closed a good meeting at Calcasieu. The church was edified, the wicked made to think seriously, a number professed conversion, two joined the church, and others are expected to join soon. Bro. Hocult, of West Lake, rendered me excellent help, preaching from beginning to end soul-stirring sermons. He waked the slumberers and fed us with the riches of the gospel. He got into the hearts of my people. May the Lord bless him and make him always a 'timing fuel'"

Mrs. Mary McGee Snell, Water Valley, Miss., Aug. 21: "I have been here eight days teaching the Bible. We have had a glorious time. Bro. Price says it is the kind of a revival he has prayed for for two years—a deep, thorough work in the hearts of church members. There were established yesterday thirty or more family altars. The church has been gloriously brought closer to God. I believe that is the kind of work needed. When the church is awake then sinners will be converted. We are now in the midst of happy times. I came from Amory here. In the Amory Church a deep hurt of two years' standing between two of the most prominent families in the church was healed in Christ. We had a great time there. Praise the Lord for wide open doors for my work for souls."

Rev. C. W. Perkins, Tyro, Miss., Aug. 18: "I have held two meetings on the Tyro circuit. Had 47 additions to our church and baptized 20 children. Bro. T. W. Dye assisted me at Free Springs. He planted and I watered, and God gave the increase. It was the old-time religion; deep convictions and then great rejoicing. Bro. Dye certainly captured the people at Free Springs and planted in them some good, clear-cut Methodist doctrine. Bro. N. C. Terry was with me at Mt Vernon. He gave us some good, sound preaching, and the Lord blessed us with a glorious revival. Bro. Studivant said that it made him think of the old meetings they used to have in his father's lifetime. Let us give God all the honor and glory for what has been done, and may God bless those brethren for their help in the meetings. More anon!"

Rev. J. R. Whittington: "Carthage circuit is on a boom. Closed our third protracted meeting last night. Results: 27 joined the church, about 30 professed perfect love in God, or sanctification. Bro. Morrill, of Cartersville, Ga., did the preaching, and in power and love he does it well. He backs everything up with a 'thus saith the Lord.' His preaching is forcible, logical and biblical, and he addresses himself directly to the hearts and consciences of men. His strongest efforts are direct to his hearers to know salvation, and to know that they have it now. It is amusing to hear his explanations between head and heart religion. In our three meetings we have received 79 on profession of faith, 53 adults baptized and 10 children. We asked God for 100 souls early in the year, and in our two meetings yet to be held we will reach the 100 mark easily. I can safely recommend Bro. J. L. Morrill, of Cartersville, Ga., to all our brethren. Many family altars and class meeting established. Pray for us."

A Veteran's Story

Jos. Hemmerich.

Mr. Joseph Hemmerich, an old soldier, 529 E. 146th St., N. Y. City, writes voluntarily. In 1852, at the battle of Fair Oaks, he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a struggle of several years in hospitals, was discharged as incurable with Consumption. Doctors said both lungs were affected and he could not live long, but a comrade urged him to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before he had finished one bottle his cough began to get loose, the choking sensation left, and night sweats grew less and less. He is now in good health and cordially recommends

The Temporal Advantages of Godliness.

Men all admit that godliness is quite profitable so far as the hereafter is concerned, but some seem to think that it has little, if any, value in this present life. While they acknowledge the great worth of religion in one's dying hour, they discount its temporal advantages. Such an attitude toward religion is due to ignorance or to thoughtlessness. The more we study the advantages of godliness, the more we are impressed with the universality of its influence. As Paul says in his first letter to Timothy, "It is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

The aim of religion is not primarily to better man's circumstances, but to bring him into harmony with God by making him pure and holy. One of the results of the hope of eternal life, however, is the improvement of man's surroundings.

In the first place, godliness conduces to physical safety. It is a truism that where Christianity is strongest, there human life is most respected. The fact that in Christian lands crimes of every sort are committed does not invalidate the statement. The God-fearing man lifts not up his hand against his neighbor. The ungodly and the profane, those who have not accepted Christ to reign over them, are the ones who do acts of violence, who fill our jails and penitentiaries. Were all men to obey the Golden Rule, there would be no need for prisons and reform schools, for police officers and courts of justice. But as long as a part of the race live without Christ, just so long will there be need for these things. When the nations of the world are ready to carry out strictly the commands of the gospel, then will war be no more. Truly did Isaiah say, "The work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever." Alfred the Great, who compiled the first written code of laws for England, prefaced it by the Ten Commandments and ended it with the Golden Rule. Referring to the introduction, he added, by way of comment, "He who keeps these shall not need any other law book."

Again, godliness conduces to health. He who observes the laws of righteousness observes the laws of health. Paul says: "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they [i. e., the contestants in the games] do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we are incorruptible." Because a man is a Christian is no reason why he should neglect the laws of health. Feebleness of body does not constitute piety any more than does asceticism. By cultivating physical health and strength we honor God, for in so doing we are enabled to labor more efficiently and earnestly. Moreover, we are told in the Word of God that our bodies are his temples, and that his spirit dwells in us. Shall we then despise "our earthly house of this tabernacle"? Shall we act so unreasonably as to take no care of the physical man? Temperance in all things should be the rule of our lives; then we shall enjoy the favor of God and the approval of our own consciences.

Another advantage of godliness is that it makes men faithful in business. Does a life of righteousness unfit a man for work? Who will dare to make such an assertion? The better the Christian, the better the lawyer, the better the doctor, the better the merchant, and so on in all the trades and professions. Where is the merchant or the farmer or the manufacturer or the railroad president who will say that he had rather not have Christians in his employ, because Christians, as a rule, are careless, unfaithful workmen? An employer has little need to watch those of his employees who, belonging to some Christian denomination, endeavor to practice the teachings of the Savior. The employee who attends church and Sabbath-school regularly is not apt to turn out a rascal. The chances are largely against it. How is it with him who is a frequent visitor to the saloon, the pool-room and the theatre? How is it with the young man who desecrates the Sabbath by playing base ball, and who swears like a trooper? Is he the kind of fellow that men naturally trust? Need such a young man be astonished if he is never promoted?

The most frequent objection raised against religion—an objection behind which many young people take refuge—is that it tends to make men morose, and causes them to think perpetually of facing death and the judgment throne. In a world so full of care and suffering, they say we can not afford to part with anything that brings brightness and refreshment. If the objection were true, it would be a very serious one; but, as a matter of fact, religion is not the handmaid of sourness and gloom. She is no foe to the beautiful and joyous. She teaches men to cultivate music and poetry and painting and sculpture and oratory and architecture and whatever else may add to man's comfort and enjoyment. She opposes these things only when they are prostituted to base uses. What musical compositions are grander, more inspiring than the oratorios of Handel? Even lively and artistic music when not wedded to debasing words, and disassociated from evil surroundings, is absolutely devoid of any corrupting influence. The master artists nearly all have pictured Bible scenes and characters in their sublimest productions. No other literature is superior to that of the English race, and the great reason of its excellence lies in the fact that it is permeated through and through with Christian truth. If you were to go through the masterpieces of English literature (leaving out a few exceptions), and strike out every Bible allusion and quotation and every thought of Scripture origin, you would render them almost worthless. The grandest passages in Plato and Seneca, and other ancient classical writers, are those which approach nearest to the teachings of Christ.

Who can number the blessings of Christian civilization? When we begin to enumerate the advantages of godliness even in this life, we are lost in wonder, love and praise. What can the atheist or the infidel offer that will compare with the transforming, uplifting power of the gospel of Christ?

Our Circulation.

Something was said recently in our columns about a slight falling off in our circulation. The reason of this should have been stated at the time. The falling off is due solely to the fact that the present publisher has carried out the instructions of the Publishing Committee in cutting off delinquents. At the last meeting of the Publishing Committee there were a few subscribers who were in arrears since '89; quite a number who owed for '90, and a still larger number who owed for each year since. The Publishing Committee gave instructions that the business should be conducted as nearly as possible on a cash basis. In obedience to these instructions the present publisher sent statements to all delinquents, and, after waiting a reasonable time, cut off all who were in arrears for one year or more. But for this cutting off we would have been able to report at this time a considerable increase. This wholesale cutting off, while it is rather a drastic measure, is nevertheless sometimes necessary. Soon after J. G. Grant became publisher he cut off about half the entire list, reducing the number of subscribers to about thirty-six hundred. He soon regained the old figures, however, and he has always regarded this cutting off as a wise financial measure. No publisher, unless he has unlimited means, can afford to carry subscriptions indefinitely. The ADVOCATE this year has paid cash for paper, ink and everything else. It is on a thoroughly sound basis financially. If all our preachers will bestir themselves during the fall months, they can largely increase our subscription list. If all would do as well as some have done, the ADVOCATE would flourish like a green bay tree. Of course, during the past few months, it has been hard to raise money for any purpose, owing to the general financial stringency; but a new era is dawning upon our section. Crops are good almost everywhere; and, as a rule, the crops have been made this year on less expense than usual. In a few weeks money will begin to circulate freely. Then we look for subscriptions to roll in at a lively rate. Our preachers know, of course, that they can have subscriptions charged to them when they know the parties to be perfectly good.

Schools and Colleges.

We know of no paper in the South that advertises more schools or better schools than does the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. In addition to those which have been previously noticed we invite attention to the following:

MRS. HAYES' SCHOOL.

This school is worthy of the attention of those who have either boys or girls to educate. First, it merits attention for healthfulness of location, Opelousas and the Opelousas country generally being noted for salubrity. We have a personal acquaintance with Sister Hayes running through a period of more than ten years. She is a woman of fine literary attainments and admirable Christian character. She has also had a large and successful experience as an educator. Those who patronize this school may rest assured that their children are in safe hands.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

This is one of the historic educational institutions of Mississippi, it having been founded in 1844. It has spacious, beautiful, well-shaded grounds, and buildings of ample dimensions admirably suited to college purposes. The president, Rev. W. H. Huntley, is a highly cultivated gentleman of genial manners and fine character. Those who are casting about for a place to send their daughters should send to Bro. Huntley for a catalogue. See advertisement.

MALONE COLLEGE.

This institution is located in a city which is unsurpassed in the South for healthfulness. The college buildings have been newly furnished throughout. Its faculty has been carefully selected with a view to efficiency. All the departments—music, art, elocution, etc.—are well equipped. Both board and tuition are remarkably low. Bro. Honnoll is to be congratulated upon his success. See advertisement in another column.

OUR OWN SCHOOLS.

If the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana do not educate their sons and their daughters, it will not be because the church has failed to make provision for them. Louisiana has Mansfield and Centenary. Mississippi has Millsaps for the boys, and for the girls there are no less than six colleges under Methodist control—Whitworth, East Mississippi, Grenada, Holly Springs, Edward McGehee and Port Gibson. Our Methodist people should certainly investigate carefully the merits of these schools before sending elsewhere. Other things being equal, preference should always be given to our own schools. If we do not sustain our own schools, who will?

That Protest.

We deem it proper to say a word about the protest which was published in the ADVOCATE soon after the adjournment of the General Conference. The editor signed that protest, believing then, as he believes still, that it was the duty of the Committee on Episcopacy to investigate all matters referred to them without regard to any possible action of the Committee on Appeals. But this is not saying, as some seem to think, that the Committee on Episcopacy ought to have condemned Bishop Hargrove. That is another matter altogether. The protest was simply against non-action. The protestants simply held that the Committee on Episcopacy ought to have made a report of some kind, either approving the Bishop's course or disapproving it. The publication of the protest, we think, should have ended the matter; but as we had admitted an article from "Gilderoy," making reference to the case, we allowed Bro. Mellen to reply, and then admitted "Gilderoy's" rejoinder. We do not expect, however, to open our columns to an endless discussion of this threadbare subject. One thing we wish to say, as a mere matter of justice: We think Bro. Mellen has been unjust in his references to Dr. Hoss. We do not mean that he is intentionally so—we know Bro. Mellen too well for that; but really so nevertheless. Dr. Hoss's action may be open to criticism; but to impugn his motives is quite another matter.

From now until Oct. 1 we will present a copy of Dr. Sawyer's book, "The World in the Church," to every new subscriber and also to every old subscriber who will renew for one year in advance, i. e., up to October, 1895. This work has been highly commended by our church papers and by many of the leading men of Southern Methodism, including most, if not all, our Bishops. Here is an opportunity to get the book as a present for doing something which you ought to do anyway—subscribe for the ADVOCATE. This offer is made only to those who send cash with the order at the rate of $2 per annum.

An anarchistic organization, known as "The Black Hand," has been brought to light in Chicago. This organization, it is said, is largely responsible for many of the incendiary fires that have raged in that city in the last few months. Branches of the organization are said to exist in other cities.

Education.

The Nashville Advocate, of the sixteenth, has a very able symposium on education. The several papers are from leading educators in our church. The following from the pen of Dr. W. B. Murrah is of such excellent quality and withal so timely that we leave out some matter which we had intended to publish in this issue in order to make room for it.

WHEREFORE THE DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGE?

You ask, "Wherefore the denominational college?" I might reply by asking, Wherefore the denomination? Answer one question, and you answer the other. A denomination can not defend its right to exist unless it stands for something distinctive in doctrine or polity or in both. A mission sufficiently well defined and of so great importance as to justify the existence of a denomination demands intellectual leadership, consecrated and devoted to the accomplishment of a great purpose. Such leadership must be trained under favorable conditions in order to secure loyalty and enthusiastic service. There may appear now and then exceptional instances of men who seem to contradict this statement. Mr. Wesley was trained intellectually at Oxford, but he well understood that if Methodism was to do anything really great it must have its own schools. His prescience in planning for the future, in the light of subsequent developments, is one of the marvels of history. At the first Methodist Conference ever held the question was asked: "Have we a training-school for our helpers?" The policy here indicated has characterized us as a church, especially in America, and our wonderful growth and marvelous achievements abundantly vindicate the wisdom of the policy. In thus insisting that the existence of the denomination implies the necessity for the denominational college, I do not mean that there is need for the sectarian college. The denominational college in its best sense is not sectarian. I doubt if the purely sectarian institution is ever worthy of the name college. It is too narrow. A college should exercise the largest intellectual hospitality. It should welcome truth always in every department of research, and love it for its own sake. This, however, is perfectly consistent with the statement that a denomination which has a mission worth accomplishing must have its own college, where its leaders, at least, are trained under conditions favorable to its distinctive and characteristic purposes. It is here that formative influences operate most powerfully in shaping and fixing character, and there is no future for the denomination that does not maintain its own college.

It is now very generally conceded that the educational work is not only a legitimate, but it is a normal function of the church. There can be no symmetrical and healthy church growth without it. A denomination is untrue to its high calling if it does not enter this important department of work. It has no right to relegate this part of its obligation to the State or to any other agency. The denominational college opens the broadest and most inviting field for the exercise of benevolence. There is nothing, not even the foreign missionary work, that offers such opportunities and motives to Christian beneficence. The life of the church is quickened, its otherwise dormant powers aroused, and its latent energies turned into active forces by founding and maintaining colleges. Without such institutions the resources of the church would not be fully utilized. A great deal of the wealth and zeal which flow through these channels could not be turned into other currents. Helping aspiring young men and women to rise from obscurity and poverty and fit themselves for larger places of usefulness in the world, stirs activities which would never have been brought into play but for the denominational college.

But the strongest and most influential argument for the denominational college is to be found in the fact that in no other way, in this country at least, can the cause of Christian education be promoted. Private and corporate enterprises can not be depended on. To the church, and to the church alone, we must look to emphasize the Christ idea in education. The State school is here, and it is here to stay. We had as well recognize this fact, and adjust ourselves to it. I do not believe the arguments against the State entering the domain of the higher education have been successfully answered; but I know of nothing vainer than a war waged against State schools. While we are quarreling with an established order of things, the State is going on equipping its colleges and making it harder every day for the denominational colleges to compete with its institutions.

What we need more than anything else is to have the Christian people of this country thoroughly saturated with the truth that Christian education in the sense of developing man in the entirety of his being must be accomplished by the church. The State will educate, in a limited sense, but it will do it upon precisely the same principle that makes cannon. It may or it may not employ Christian men to do its work. In many instances it does. As long as we have strong and influential denominational colleges the State will, as a matter of policy, respect, to some degree, the Christian sentiment of the country. But the State is accountable only to Cæsar, and Cæsar's work it will do.

Christian education is, and of necessity must be, the work of the church. Abandon denominational colleges and you give away with education in its true and highest sense.

A large aerolite exploded near Columbus, Miss., not long since. It created great consternation among the negroes, who imagined that the day of judgment was at hand.

Of the 238 men in the graduating class at Yale, about fifty have done something toward paying their way through college, and ten have received nothing at all from home. Money has been earned in all sorts of ways, from tending door in the State Legislature to shoveling snow and oaring for boarding-houses.—Nashville Advocate.

"Communications" are one thing and "reports from the work" quite another. When we receive reports from pastors we mark the date on the back and hand them over to the printer with instructions to publish in chronological order, giving preference to postal card reports. What we have said in the ADVOCATE about communications has no reference to reports from the work.

We invite special attention to a communication of Rev. R. Selby Harrison in another column. He represents a worthy cause. As is well known to many of our readers, the towns on the coast of Mississippi are strongholds of Catholicism. Protestantism is at great disadvantage. In order to succeed in that region Methodism needs neat, attractive, modern buildings in every town. Especially do we need them at Biloxi. Our little band there has done what they can, and their efforts should be supplemented by aid from abroad. Methodists elsewhere who see the Lord has prospered can render noble service to their Master by contributing of their substance in aid of this enterprise.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2.25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to August, '95.

Dr. R. M. Sanders, formerly president of Martin College, is spending the year in St. Louis at the home of his son.

The pulpit of Rayne Memorial was filled on Sunday morning by Rev. R. H. Wynn, and at night by Dr. J. T. Sawyer.

Bishop Wilson is in Brazil holding the Annual Conference of the Brazil Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Rev. George G. Smith has an article in this issue that will be of special interest to members of the Vicksburg District Conference.

Free Board at Centenary College.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes.

$500 Will Be Given

For any case of Rheumatism which can not be cured by Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. The proprietors do not hide this offer, but print it in bold type on all their circulars, wrappers, printed matter, and through the columns of newspapers everywhere. It will work wonders—one treatment curing any ordinary case. The full supply of two large bottles will be sent to any address by express on receipt of $5, together with special directions for use. Agents wanted.

A Pentecost.

By a private letter from Rev. H. C. Morehead, presiding elder of the Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, we learn that a great tidal wave of revival power is sweeping through that district. Large numbers are being converted and added to the church. The following pastors have seen the work of the Lord thus prospering in their hands: Young, at Pleasant Grove, Clifford, at Courtland; Geddie, at Panola; Braswell, at Morganville; Perkins, at Tyro; Brown, at Wall Hill; Dye, at Cockrum; Jones, at Pleasant Hill; and Gordon, at Nesbitt.

Such news as this is truly refreshing. Would that all the churches could receive such a visitation! What Methodism needs to-day worse than all things else is power from on high. Give us this and we can afford to wait indefinitely for new machinery, or a restatement of doctrines, or additional legislation.

An Appeal.

To the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference:

Biloxi is a city of 5,000 inhabitants, with electric lights, two ice factories, one flour mill, three large canning factories and several smaller ones, the population increasing all the time and the Catholic population largely in the majority. The Methodist Church has been struggling against this tide of Roman Catholicism for many years, and while we have needed help from the outside, this is the first time we have made an appeal for assistance. Our membership is 105, and we have a fine prospect for growth if we could only make our church as comfortable and pleasing to the eye as it needs to be. We have the largest congregation of any Protestant Church in the town, and if we were the recipients of $125 toward purchasing seats—we have $110 in bank—we would be encouraged to go forward with the completion of the church.

Our church, which is located in the center of the town, when completed will be worth $5,000, and all needed to complete the auditorium is to have the seats. Of course, on account of the stringency of the times, we can not expect you to send us large amounts; but if one hundred and twenty-five members of the Methodist Church in Mississippi would send me one dollar each, it would be worth to Methodism more than you can imagine.

Think of 1,100 actual communicants of the Catholic Church against 105 Methodists! We are doing what we can—can not you do this much toward establishing our beloved Methodism on a solid footing? We need your help, else we would not ask it. Send the money—what you can—to my address below.

A Traveling Man.

Mr. B. C. Wolfe, of Washington, Mo., writes that after taking Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism for one week, the pain had almost left him entirely. He slept better, had no more night sweats, and appetite was good. He also wrote that he would not take $100 for what the remedy had done for him. There is no waiting weeks and months to get satisfaction. The remedy attacks the disease at once. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Malden Lane, New York, and the full month's treatment of two large bottles will be sent to you by return express. Agents wanted.

Shreveport District.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Members of the M. E. Church, South, in the Shreveport District—

Dear Brethren: Convinced that it is not practicable to comply with the resolutions of the District Conference, to appoint an organizer of Epworth Leagues for the entire district, I have divided the district into two departments. Bro. H. W. Rickey will serve the brethren in all charges north of and including Mansfield, and Bro. N. E. Joyner will serve those south of Mansfield. These brethren will serve at such times as will not interfere with the work in their charges. Pastors and leagues will confer with these brethren.

ROBT. J. HARP, P. E.

The Illustrated Lesson Papers.

MR EDITOR: In the Vicksburg District Conference it was recommended that the questions in the Illustrated Lesson Papers be made more simple.

There are two papers for little children—the O. L. P. and Illustrated Lesson Paper. The I. L. P. is not intended for very small children. Will you be kind enough to ask the committee to say through the ADVOCATE how these lessons can be simplified. I take at random a lesson in June, and take five questions.

1. Where is the lesson found?
In the Book of Exodus.
2. Did Pharaoh consent for the children of Israel to go?
He did at last.
3. Who pursued them?
Pharaoh and his army.
4. Who went with the Israelites?
The angel of the Lord.
5. What was above them?
A pillar of cloud.

Now, let anyone of the committee be kind enough to tell how this can be simplified. As I have prepared these lessons, if they are not simple, I alone am to blame; but I really think they are, and the Little People is still more so. In justice to the criticised, please publish this. Do not do like one of the Advocates—publish the criticism, and reject the defense. Yours,

GEO. G. SMITH.

Vicksburg District Preachers' Meeting.

As the publication of the program of this meeting was so long delayed, as to make it impossible for some of the brethren to prepare for it at the time specified, I suggest a change of time to Oct. 9-11. What do you think of it, brethren? Write me.

HEALTH-MAKING.

Plenty of fresh air, deeply breathed in, and CREOLE FEMALE TONIC rightly used, will send pure, rich blood through the veins, put rose-bloom into the cheeks, and make of nervous ladies, new creatures abounding in good health. Try it.

Grenada Female College.

Presidents Malone and McIntosh are hard at work overhauling and refitting the Grenada Collegiate Institute, putting carpets on the floors and new furniture in the rooms, and getting ready to make all the girls comfortable who come to this school. The faculty is equal to the best, and the outlook for attendance is very encouraging. Pupils are already arriving. The health of Grenada is splendid—not a serious case of sickness been in the town this year. Parents will take no risk sending their daughters here.

T. B. MALONE, Pastor.

To Patrons of Millsaps College.

I have a boarding-house near Millsaps College. I have comfortable rooms, and will do all I can to make my boarders have a home feeling. Parents who entrust their boys to my care may be sure that I will do what I can, and may be sure that I will watch over them as I would my own. Rates, $10 and $12 per month. Address Mrs. L. A. Quin, Jackson, Miss.

Brethren owing anything either to me, or to the "Religious Book Co., Ltd.," will confer a great favor by sending at once all they can possibly raise on their accounts.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. N. M. Clark: "We have just closed a great meeting at Scooba. James McCaskill, of Columbus, did the preaching. He is a strong man. He has great power with God and man."

Rev. J. D. Newsom, Ethel, Aug. 17: "At Tabernacle, Ethel circuit, the Lord has been gracious. In a six days' series of services 12 or 15 converted to God and 6 added to the church. The membership was greatly revived and raised to a higher consecration in prayer meeting and Sunday-school work, long needful to promote the strength and growth of the Lord's Zion. Thanks to Bro. W. A. Dollar for efficient help."

Rev. J. H. Rogers, Poplar Creek circuit, Kosciusko district, North Mississippi Conference: "I want to say through the columns of the ADVOCATE that we have held two meetings with wonderful success. In the first one we were assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss. In this meeting we had 100 conversions and 31 accessions. In the second meeting we had no ministerial help, but we had a glorious meeting—50 conversions and 12 accessions. God be praised!"

Rev. W. F. Rogers, Brown's Creek, Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference: "We are glad to say that Bro. G. W. Bachman, our Sunday-school agent, has been on our circuit about five days preaching a gospel, pure and strong, and talking up the Sunday-schools, and lecturing the children and young folks, and selling good books, supplying the Sunday-school with literature. On Sunday he preached on the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper to the edification of all who heard him. We think Bro. Bachman is the right man in the right place. We hope he will come to see us again."

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, P. C.: "Franklinton is still moving on as usual. Held two of my meetings, Revs. J. M. Morse and V. D. Skipper doing the preaching in power and demonstration of the Spirit, and to the satisfaction and delight of those who heard it. Results: 22 accessions, a number of conversions. This is a pleasant work. People not hard to please with a preacher, for they let the writer stay here for three years. I think this country is building up in many respects, taking great interest in church and school work, besides they are constantly improving their farms. New houses going up in all parts of the country. I can say to my successor he will find as good, kind people here as he will anywhere I have ever gone. We expect a full report again this year. In three years we have gone from $340 to $650, losing one church this year."

Rev. H. P. Crowe, Cleveland, Miss., Aug. 22: "We have just closed two fine revivals. One held at Shipman's Chapel resulted in 26 accessions to our church, leaving only three men in the community out. I was assisted by Rev. W. H. Sanders, who did valuable service and was highly appreciated by the people. Also one at Cleveland, in which the town was greatly blessed, resulting in 9 accessions to our church. On Sunday afternoon the men of the town held a private meeting, pledging themselves to renounce sin, stand by the right and to lead a more consistent life. I was ably assisted by Bros. Whitehurst and Brooks, who rendered valuable service and endeared themselves very much to our people. Our prayers go with them to their respective charges. The Delta is fast surrendering to God. Revivals are sweeping the entire country—people joining the church by the scores. Much love to the ADVOCATE."

A GREAT MEETING.

Scottsville Holiness Camp Meeting this year measured up in extent and depth of the work of the blessed Holy Spirit of previous years. I thank God—and shall to all eternity—that it has been my privilege to attend that consecrated place seven consecutive years.

Preaching evangelical, scriptural, and in "demonstration of the Holy Spirit, and with power;" giving emphasis to the cardinal doctrines of Methodism. No come-outism, fanaticism, but a steady glow of fervor and sanctified enthusiasm that made the very atmosphere heavenly. Such praying and prevailing! Such singing with the "spirit and the understanding also!" Many were "born of the Spirit," and testified to the blessed fact; many experienced the work of entire sanctification by faith, as a subsequent blessing to regeneration, attested unto by the blessed Holy Spirit, and witnessed for themselves to the fact. Some came 2, 3, and 400 miles to get the blessing, and got it. How many converted and sanctified is not known.

Bishop Key, in the experience thirteen years, was present, and other "pastors, evangelists and teachers," numbering perhaps 60 to 75. Many of these preachers have "stood fast for years in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made them free," and quite a number entered into the rich and blessed experience that the "blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin." Hallelujah! THOS. B. WHITE.

HOME CIRCLE.

THE VACANT PLACES.

BY LILLY M. BRADFORD.

Only a clock tick, low and deep,
Only a flower on the window-sill,
Only a tabby, lying asleep,
And the house so perfectly quiet and still.
Only the page of the Book Divine,
Spread to be read in the corner there.
Only the knitting, where needles shine
On the stand that waits by the matron's chair.
China and glass, and glittering tin,
Grandmother's closet is bright to-day;
And I know so well, as I peep within,
That the dear "old folks" have gone away.

Close to the lattice the ivy clings,
Nodding to cypress and dark bluebell,
Where many a fledgeling has tried its wings,
Around the curb of the mossy well;
Grandmother's garden, so tastefully made,
Lilac and rose in bright array;
And near at hand, in the alder's shade,
A robin is singing his roundelay.
"Madam, indeed you are late to-day;
The dear 'old folks' have gone away."

Thickly strewn is the new-mown hay
Where evening shadows are deepening long,
And through the hedge, far over the way,
Comes the maid, with her pail and milking song.
And oft, when hours are growing late,
When duties of life seem cold and chill,
I shall stand and wait at the garden gate,
But will miss the face at the window still;
For other hands and other feet,
And other hearts will be here that day,
To fill the place that is now so sweet,
And the dear "old folks" will be gone for aye.

The Art of Conversation.

"The first essentials of good conversation are having something to say and being in earnest. Why did not you talk to Mr. Arnold to-night as you just have to me? He is so famous and so wise that you were afraid of him? Besides you are diffident by nature? Then conquer nature; for diffidence, as Joseph Jerrold says, 'is an acquaintance which hourly picks your pocket, which makes you hob and nob with fustian when otherwise you might jostle with court rufflers.'

"Some years ago the daughter of the American Minister to Germany asked an experienced woman for advice in her social career. The first requisite, she was told, was to learn the German language, of which she knew nothing. To get it she must lay aside her books, conquer her habit of reticence, and talk. 'Make people talk to you; talk to them; everybody—servants, shopkeepers, authors, princes. Never mind mistakes; nobody will laugh at the minister's daughter, but talk!' In six months she was the marvel of the place, having learned to speak the language with richness and purity."

"Fidelity and adherence," murmured Cinderella, "combined with courage. Go on."

"One learns to talk only by talking. Practice is the best of professional educators. Chesterfield, when a boy, resolved not to utter one word, even in common conversation, which should not be the most expressive and the most elegant with which the language could supply him for the purpose; and Doctor Johnson's rule was always to talk as well as you can, no matter what the company, and, by so doing, that which was an effort at first will become easy. No art, unless it be the art of thought, can be so constantly practiced as conversation; its very facility may be its way, for, excepting again right thinking, good conversation is perhaps the rarest of accomplishments."

"Now, having learned to talk," said Elizabeth dryly, "it may be well to inquire what to say. Shall one begin with the weather?"

"The weather is too marvelous to be despised, and Mr. Ellwanger is right in calling it the oil of conversation's wheels. It is capable, too, of more than the commonplace exclamations. One of the pleasant recollections of my life is a conversation beginning with, 'The sky to-night was a battle-field for the armies of glory and gloom.' I was a timid girl, but I was surprised into a response which led to a lively talk and a lasting friendship. The subject really matters little. The main thing is to begin at once, and to leave a gate open behind you. People who benumb their companions with monosyllables, and the utter dropping of the conversation ball as it is tossed, are as rude as the person who shuts a door in another's face. Periods are out of place in conversation, where the dash and the interrogation point should reign supreme.'"

"But the dash implies interruption. Is it not as rude to open a person's door uninvited as to close your own door in his face?"

"Interruption should come from one's self. A person should never talk so long as to require interruption. 'Take as many half-minutes as you can get,' advised Sidney Smith, 'but never talk more than half a minute without pausing and giving others a chance to strike in!'"

"You believe in questions, also—those torture-screws of society?"

"There are questions and questions, as there is laudable and ignoble curiosity. The people most worthy of attention do not intrude their views without knowing they are desired, and yet they may have treasures untold which are yours for the asking. 'We should have to be shipwrecked on Juan Fernandez,' writes Mr. Lowell, 'not to find men who know more than we.' Yet questioning must be discriminate. Mr. Mallock says he does not call a woman cultivated whose one question at dinner is, 'Have you read so-and-so?' But he calls a woman cultivated who responds as one passes from subject to subject—who, by a flash of her eye, by a slight gesture of the hand, by a flush in the cheek, makes him feel, as he talks of some lovely scene, that she too could love it; as he speaks of sorrows, that she herself has known them; as he speaks of ambition, or hope, or remorse, that all these things are not mere names to her, but things."—Lucy Elliot Keeler, in The Outlook.

"To Be Happy Is One of the Cardinal Virtues."

There is nothing better than to be happy; joy is the real root of morality; no virtue is worth praising which does not spring from mines contented and convinced, and free of dread and gloom. No religion was ever divine which relied on terror instead of love; and no philosophy will bear any good fruits which propounds despair and deduces annihilation. This is where, by their own true instincts, the great poets have done so much more for mankind than most of its benefactors, delighting as they do in life, and preserving amid its deepest mysteries and hardest puzzles a divine serenity about its origin and purpose. Observe our English Shakespeare! How calm, how complacent! how assured his glorious genius always abides! A page of him taken almost anywhere—set beside a page of modern pessimism—is like the speech of a prince in his pleasure house compared with the moanings of a sick wretch in a Spital. All genuine poets, from Homer to Browning, are radically joyous. Keats writes:

"They shall be accounted poet-kings
Who simply tell the most heart-easing things."

And Hafiz says: "It is whispered of me in Shiraz that I was sad, but what had I to do with sadness?" Art in all its highest forms bears no message so imperative as to emphasize the beauty and maintain the dignity and delight of life, and you may judge first-class writers and painters, as we shall some day judge philosophers, by their fidelity to this wholesome errand of joy.—Sir Edwin Arnold.

Much of the unhappiness which sometimes attends married life owes its origin to a lack of the amenities and courtesies which were so assiduously practiced by both parties before marriage. The feeling that it is not worth while to keep them up is answerable for much of the loss of respect, want of chivalry and indifference which gradually lead to the decay of affection. In the same way brothers and sisters rub off the bloom of fraternal regard by the absence of those gentle and respectful manners with which they greet all outside friends. Insensibly they become careless, indifferent and rude, and black looks, hard words and sharp answers poison the home which might have been the haven of peace and happiness, had not the respect for one another's personality been broken down.—New York Ledger.

IF I KNEW.

BY MAUD WYMAN.

If I knew the box where the smiles were kept,
No matter how large the key
Or strong the hold, I would try so hard.
'Twould open, I know for me.
Then over the land and the sea, broadcast
I'd scatter the smiles to play,
That the children's faces might hold them fast
For many and many a day.

If I know a box that was large enough,
To hold all the frowns I meet,
I would like to gather them, everyone,
From nursery, school, and street,
Then folding, and holding, I'd pack them in,
And turning the monster key,
I'd hire a giant to drop the box
To the depths of the deepest sea
—Worthington's Magazine.

How Children Educate Their Parents.

"One never knows how ignorant and helpless she is," exclaimed a young matron not long ago, "until she begins to train her first child."

She might have added, had she thought a little longer, that no human being ever does so much for others in an educational way as the first baby. His little hands guide his father and mother in a way of which they neither know nor dream. Often their first real lesson in responsibility is given them by their little one. The transformation effected by the dimpled darling in the crib is akin to the miraculous. The young mother, so careful about everything that can directly or remotely affect her baby's well-being, so heedless of her own comfort, so ready to lose rest and sleep in his behalf, was, you would have said a year ago, a giddy, flitting thing, a mere butterfly whirling here and there, caring for fun and for pleasure, for pretty gowns, for the last waltz, for her cat and her dog, for anything which promised a good time. But the baby has already made her aware of what life's supremest meaning is; she has entered into the holy of holies by way of the altar of sacrifice; she is responsible for another never-ending life.

So with the young father. He feels the throbbing of a manliness quite new. He works in the shop or on the farm with a greater resolution, a more definite purpose, he tells of "that boy of mine," and looks an inch taller. This son is a hostage to fortune; he is a pledge that the good old name is to be handed down in honor and pride.

The little one trains the mother in patience. If her temper was formerly quick or petulant, capricious or whimsical, she can not now indulge it; for it will not do to set the baby a bad example. Her tones, her expressions of face, are suited to the tiny bit of herself. For mother's eyes are baby's skies. She learns to be brave where once she was timorous; for she does not wish her child to be afraid of thunder storms, nor of cows, nor of beetles and centipedes. Father and mother try to be more truthful than ever. They want their boy to be true. They learn that every promise must be kept religiously; that they must not allow so much as a doubt of their word, once given. They acquire bit by bit a feeling of responsibility, unlike anything they have ever known before.

Children educate their parents psychologically too. In the hurry and din of the world's market men and women lower their standards of value; they grow complex as to motive; they think upon loss and gain, and value the pitiful dross of material success unduly. Children, left to themselves, are straightforward and simple; they go directly to the heart of things; they are wonderfully clear-sighted and keen. "Trailing clouds of glory do they come," and so their fancies are vivid and sweet, their imagination is active. Sometimes they baffle older people by statements which can not be verified in our customary scales, but this is only because they are nearer the angels than we, and hear whispers to which our ears are deaf.

A child can suffer as keenly over a deprivation or a disappointment as a man over the loss of a fortune. Therefore, it is worth while for parents to learn sympathy with children in children's trials, not calling that a trifle which deeply wounds a little loving heart. It was with the deepest wisdom that our blessed Lord set a child in the midst of his disciples, and bade them look and learn, and become like the little ones, of whom, as he said for all the ages, is the kingdom of heaven.—Harper's Weekly.

Let every man that is a man, every woman that is a woman, in some moment of sacred silence answer honestly one or two questions: Will your children have as good a chance as you had, not merely in temporal, but in spiritual matters? Or will they reproach you some day, and say that you have robbed them of the best part of what should have been theirs? Are you doing by them as you wish to be done by? They have a right to receive from you an example of positive piety. It will be worth to them more than lands and gold.

Household religion! Something which shall brighten the eye, sweeten the voice, check the hasty word, alter the impatient tone, make the brow smoother, the heart happier, and the home a paradise! This is what we need. May it grow and prevail mightily throughout the land in this year of our Lord, 1894!—Selected.

CARSON—Mrs. MARIANA CARSON, daughter of the late Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, of the North Mississippi Conference, was born at Marion, Ala., July 22, 1855; was married to Dr. R. B. Carson, Oct. 16, 1890, and died at her home in Durant, Miss., July 23, 1894.

Soundly converted, she faithfully served her Lord for many years. At all times solicitous for the welfare of the church, she was ever ready to take the load in every good work. A woman of a high order of intelligence and of extensive reading, she was fitted to grace any circle or fill in any place in the church open to her sex. She was a close Bible reader from her childhood. Her intimate acquaintance with its precious contents was shown by the frequency and appositeness of her quotations from its pages. She prayed a great deal in secret, and the effects of prayers were shown in a consistent and beautiful life. She loved her husband with an intense devotion, and made his home the dearest, happiest spot on earth to him. To our widowed mother she was not only a beloved daughter, but a trusted, familiar companion. To brother, sister or friend she was a safe counsellor; to the sufferiug or sorrowing, she was unselfish and tireless in ministering to their needs. The last year of her life was one of much feebleness of body and great suffering, but she bore it in meekness and submission. When the end came she was ready and died in peace. A good woman who loved God and worked righteousness has gone to her reward.

HER BROTHER.

RINEHART—Our dear Bro. and Sister S. D. Rinehart, of Douglas, La., received a terrible shock in the sudden and tragic death of their second son, DAVID. He had for some months been employed by Mr. Fisher, of Clarence, La., seven miles east of Natchitoches, on Red River. At the time he was engaged in getting some timber in the swamp when he was terribly crushed by a falling tree. The skull was broken and his right side terribly crushed, yet he lived seven hours after the accident.

He was brought home yesterday on the train and buried in the cemetery at Douglas. A large congregation of relatives and friends attended his funeral.

DAVID SUMPTER RINEHART was born in Edgefield county, S. C., Dec. 2, 1870. He made a profession of religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, at about thirteen years of age. His death occurred at Clarence, La., Aug. 7, 1894.

David was a young man of noble character. He was universally loved in the community where he was raised, as well as in the community where he met his sad and untimely death. His employer said to this writer: "He was the most trustworthy young man I ever had in my employ." He was out off in the prime of young manhood. May his young friends take heed to this lesson! God bless and sustain the bereaved family!

JNO. A. MILLER.

Ruston, La., Aug. 10.

WATSON—Mr. G. K. WATSON was born in Columbus, Miss., May 29, 1841, and departed this life at his home in Ellisville, Miss., July 24, 1894. He was married to Miss S. R. Saltonstall, of Shubuta, Miss., in June, 1867. Seven children blessed their union.

Bro. Watson was a member of the Methodist Church, and for years prior to his death he exhibited those graces and virtues which adorn Christian character and make it lovely and attractive. He seemed to have an overcoming faith, and the gentle, loving spirit as manifest in his home life and in social and business circles won for him the confidence and esteem of the people generally, and made his companionship desirable and helpful. He was one of the most guileless of men, and during his last illness, which was protracted, he murmured not, but submissively, with Christian patience, bore his sufferings and spoke of his dissolution with such calmness and serenity of soul that the living were impressed with the power of our holy religion. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn for him. May the good Shepherd lead them into pastures green, and by waters still, and may the light, the beautiful light of God, shine in unto them till the shadows flee away!

O. D. BOWEN,
Pastor Ellisville Baptist Church.

RAMSEY—THOS. Y. RAMSEY, infant son of Josiah B. and Sallie Carey Ramsey, was born at McComb City, Miss., Feb. 14, 1894, and died July 6, aged four months and twenty-two days.

He was a bright, beautiful baby boy, and filled the home with gladness. Our heavenly Father thought it best to take him to himself. The young father and mother are suffering sorely, but "it is well with the child." Heaven is far richer now than all the world besides. May the Blessed Spirit comfort the bereaved!

T. Y. RAMSEY.

WALKER—HULAN WILKINS WALKER, only son of Daniel and Fannie Walker, was born Nov. 18, 1892, and died July 17, 1894.

Mysterious are the providences of our God. Just why he took little Hulan away and made the home so sad, we can not tell; but we know he doeth all things well. Hulan can never come back to you, parents, but God help you to go to him.

SMITH—ROBERT HOWARD SMITH, infant son of C. M. and S. C. Smith, was born May 19, 1892, and died July 11, 1894.

Little Robert was laid nicely away at Bethel Church to await the resurrection morn, when he will be raised in power and in the likeness of Christ, when parents will see him again.

BROWN—BENJ. LEWIS BROWN was born July 21, 1813, and died at his home in Kemper county, Miss., Aug. 21, 1893.

Grandpa had been a sufferer with cancer in the face for several years, but two weeks before his death he did not suffer any, and when death came it was welcomed by "Thank God, I'm going home." He sang, "We'll work till Jesus comes," etc.; clapped his hands, shouting, "Glory! glory!" and thus sweetly passed away. Grandpa was faithful in all the relations of life; a true and loyal member of the M. E. Church, South, for more than a half century, his home always a home for ministers, and his charities for the poor abundant until infirmities deprived him of ability. He was highly esteemed and his advice sought as a Christian by those who knew him best. He was always opposed to any side-track worship of God in devotion or donation, preferring direct approach in service or offerings. He visited our home and would have us sing and play, "Angels, guide me home" for him, and it seemed he realized the guidance of the white-robed band. We mourn not as those who have no hope.

BRILLA BROWN.

JOHNSTON—LUTHER E. JOHNSTON, the subject of this sketch, was born in Albemarle county, Va., February, 1817. Of his parentage and early life nothing is known by the writer. He came to Mississippi in 1836. In 1845 he was married to Mrs. R. M. Breitling. Several children were born to them—all of whom, except one son and daughter, live in Texas. Our brother was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, the same year in which he was married, and remained faithful to the vows then made to the close of life.

He was honest, true and industrious, and respected by all who knew him. He moved to Texas in 1869, where his widow and most of his children now reside. He and his wife came back to Mississippi on a visit to their son, Abram Johnston, and other relatives in December, 1893. Bro. Johnston was attacked with la grippe before his arrival at the home of his son. He grew rapidly worse until his death, which occurred Dec. 28, 1893, in his eighty-sixth year. He expressed himself as ready and willing to die. Thus has passed away a good and true man.

D. G. W. ELLIS.

WHITE—BEATINA M., only daughter of Rebecca and A. White, died at their home in Pearlington, Miss., Aug. 2, 1891, aged one year and ten months.

When death strikes down the innocent and young, for every fragile form from which he lets the panting spirit free a hundred virtues rise in shape of mercy, charity and love to walk the world and bless it. The death of an infant child is like the sunset that rounds out and completes the perfect day. How lovely the light lingers in the upper atmosphere! How the cloud-specks catch and reflect the sun's rays, and soe-ere yet their golden tints are darkened—the evening star is shining!

Parents, weep not for thy babe, for by its death your affections are linked to heaven. So live and act that when you hear the Master calling, "Come up higher," you may meet little Beatina safe in the Shepherd's fold.

W. A. BROWN.

NELSON—CUTHBERT NELSON, son of Adolphus and Mary Nelson, was born Oct. 14, 1880, and died July 27, 1894.

Another pure, sweet spirit has taken its flight back to the One who gave it. He suffered one year. The last three weeks of his life he suffered the most intense pain, and the death angel came and bore him away. He was a patient sufferer; told his loved ones not to weep for him; that he was not afraid to go. Little Burtie knew he was not going to cross the dark river of death alone.

Weep not, dear loved ones; we know you are lonely and miss his bright face everywhere. The home does not seem the same any more, but he is safe in the arms of Jesus, and is free from pain and temptation. May his dear loved ones live so as to meet him on the other shore. "The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord!"

F. E. MCDONALD.

Americus, Miss.

JOHNSON—Mrs. ALICE JOHNSON, daughter of Mr. Stephen Miller, was born in Coahoma county, Miss., Oct. 22, 1848. At the age of twenty she professed religion and joined the Baptist Church. Fifteen years after, in Brownsville, Tenn., she united with the M. E. Church, South, in which communion she remained to the end of her earthly pilgrimage. May 7, 1877, she was married to Mr. W. H. Johnson, whom she survived five years in widowhood. After years of suffering from a painful bronchial cough she died in profession of great peace with God, July 4, 1894, in the forty-sixth year of her age, at Ethel, Miss.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Life hath a load
Which must be carried on, and safely may,
Yet keep those cares without thee: let the heart
Be God's alone, and choose the better part.
Through all thy actions, counsels and discourse
Let mildness and religion guide thee out;
If truth be thine, what needs a brutish force?
But what's not good and just ne'er go about.

—Henry Vaughan.

I, A. C. Hafflefinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

The conditions essential to a revival are found in II. Chron. vii, 14: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways: then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins, and will heal their land." - Record.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The prospects for the University of Mississippi are more flattering than any of the recent sessions.

Both Houses of Congress adjourned on Tuesday, the twenty-eighth, until the first Monday in December.

A fire in a mine at Franklin, Wash., on Aug. 24, created much disaster. About thirty-four men were killed.

It is proposed to remove the Government Building from the World's Fair Grounds at Chicago to Atlanta for the exposition there.

The encampment of the Mississippi National Guard, which was held near Meridian since the twentieth, came to a close on Aug. 25.

Another councilman was indicted for bribery by the Grand Jury, in this city, last week. This is the eighth councilman indicted for bribery.

Councilman Callahan, who was tried for bribery in the Criminal Court, in this city, last week, was found guilty. His attorneys have applied for a new trial.

There are 68,000 postoffices in the United States. About 67,000 of them do not pay their running expenses. The profit of the New York City postoffice is $4,000,000 a year.

Five thousand ex-Confederates, representing many commands, gathered at the Chautauqua grounds in Ruston, La., on Aug. 23, at the convocation of the North Louisiana Camps.

Within a comparatively short time the new navy of the United States will be strengthened by the addition to the active force of six new armored ships, including the three large battle-ships, Oregon, Indiana and Massachusetts.

Citizens in the thirteenth ward, up town, near Audubon Park, this city, have applied at City Hall to be commissioned as special police officers, in order to protect their property from the numerous thieves who nightly prowl in that part of the city.

The great textile strike in Fall River, Mass., developed into a lockout on Aug. 23, the employers closing all the mills. These mills include every establishment engaged in the manufacture of print cloth, and the shut-down throws 22,645 men and women out of employment.

The Wilson Tariff bill, which was finally accepted by the House of Representatives about two weeks ago, became the law of the land at midnight, on Aug. 27. At that hour the ten days allowed the President by law to consider the bill expired, and as he did not veto it nor yet sign it, it became law without his approval.

There is much speculation among the politicians in Washington City concerning the effect on Louisiana politics from the treatment which the sugar industry has experienced at the hands of the Democracy in Congress. The Republicans hope that the voters of the sugar districts have been so exasperated by the injustice and hostility toward the sugar industry displayed by the Democrats of the House and Senate that they will try to send at least three Republican members to the House. They will send their speakers to assist Republican candidates in the canvass to promise sugar bounties and protective taxes on all the products of the State.

FOREIGN.

For the week ending Saturday there were 146 new cases of cholera and 79 deaths from the disease in Galicia, Austria. In Bukowina 16 new cases and 15 deaths were reported.

The activity of the Chinese in hunting down the Japanese spies increases every day, and if the Chinese are to be believed, the coast must be overrun with agents of the Japanese government.

A statue of Joan of Arc has been unveiled at Dom-Remy, France, the native place of that heroine, in the presence of 20 000 pilgrims. Religious processions and fetes were also held in honor of her memory.

The report that the Rev. James A. Wyley, a Presbyterian missionary, has died from injuries received at the hands of Chinese soldiers at Liao Yang, north of New Chang, China, while they were marching to Corea, is officially confirmed.

A great anti-lords mass meeting was held in Hyde Park, London, on Aug. 26, by the National League. It is estimated that 70 000 persons were in attendance. It is said the addresses of the speakers were received with only moderate applause.

Nineteen Japanese warships and three transports arrived in Taiung river, on the eighteenth instant. They landed 6,000 men, who, proceeding inland were attacked by 1,000 Chinese, who succeeded in dividing the Japanese force into two parts. The Chinese artillery, located on an eminence, poured a heavy fire into the ranks of the Japanese, making great havoc. The Japanese were compelled to retreat to the sea, where their fleet prevented further pursuit by the Chinese. The Japanese loss is reported to have been over 1,300.

HOLINESS.

(Rom. vi, 22; 1. Cor. iii, 16, 17; Eph. iv, 24; 1. Thess. iv, 7; Heb. xii, 10.)

Holiness and sanctification—set apart to the service of the Lord—mean the same thing. The former is of Saxon, the other of Latin origin. We will treat here our first text. It contains a statement of

1. The design of our holy Christian religion. What is the object of its introduction?

(1) To free us from sin. From the guilt and consequences of the transgression of God's law. The blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin. Our Master was called Jesus, because he was to save his people from their sins. Sin an intrusion from hell.

(2) To make us servants of God. Angels are ministering spirits; we, ministering mortals. Milton speaks of the service of the former:

"Thousands at his bidding speed
And post o'er land and ocean without rest.
They also serve who only stand and wait."

Servants are expected to be humble, obedient, industrious, faithful. Up and doing. The night cometh, when no man can work.

2. Thus saved from sin, converted, being no longer servants of evil, but of God, we "have our fruits unto holiness." Holiness here indicates the necessary holy life, the invariable outcome of salvation. Holiness to the Lord our watchword. If holy in heart, the life, too, will be holy. Sweet and bitter water can not flow from the same fountain. With the heart

(1) The head holy. "Thinketh no evil." Intellect the workshop of the Holy Ghost.

(2) The tongue holy. No backbiting, slandering, equivocating, censoriousness. Speaking to edify, instruct, encouraging to do right. Commending the good. Calling the bad by the proper name. Peace-making.

(3) The hand holy. Giving to the Lord's cause. Helping the poor, sick and needy. Raise the fallen, lead the blind.

3. The finality will be everlasting life. Citizenship in the New Jerusalem.

(1) Having become children of God, we are his heirs.

(2) Having been his servants, we shall have our proper reward. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

(3) Having been freed from sin, and having led holy lives, we shall see God and live in his presence forever.

SAY THE LOVING WORDS NOW.

Year after year, with a glad content,
In and out of our home he went—
In and out.
Ever for us the skies were clear;
His heart carried the care and fear,
The care and doubt.

Our hands held with a careless hold
All that he won of power and gold,
In toil and pain.
O dear hands that our burdens bore—
Hands that shall toil for us no more—
Never again.

Oh! it was hard to learn our loss,
Bearing daily the heavy cross—
The cross he bore;
To say with an aching heart and head,
"Would to God that the love now dead
Were here once more!"

For when the love we held too light
Was gone away from our speech and sight,
No bitter tears,
No passionate words of fond regret,
No yearning of grief could pay the debt
Of thankless years.

Oh, now, while this kind love lingers near,
Grudge not the tender words of cheer,
Leave none unsaid;
For a heart can have no sadder fate
Than some one day to awake—too late—
And find love dead!

—Harper's Weekly.

"Why They Did Not Join the Methodists."

(Concluded.)

The next argument offered to sustain this seventh misrepresentation of the Methodist Church is the fact that "there are rules for silencing a preacher if he does not obey."

It is well known that there must be penalties provided for disobedience to the rules of any organization. There can be no effective administration without them. A man's intellectual inheritance and acquisitions must be very small not to be able to see this at once. If the New Testament contains any directions as to the government of the church, penalties for disobedience, even to exclusion, are based on Scripture authority.

To put some solidity, if possible, into the sandy foundation upon which this charge is based, Bro. H. reiterates what he had said before, to the effect that our church provides for the expulsion of members who inveigh against our doctrines and Discipline. As I have already disposed of this, I dismiss it without further attention. The fact is, all this hue and cry about Methodists submitting to the authority of man, in preference to that of God, is unreasonable and false. There is not a denomination of Christians on earth that does not have laws and regulations for which they can not find an express "Thus saith the Lord." All enlightened interpreters of the Scriptures teach that, in the place of specific injunctions and prohibitions covering every particular relation in life, there are great principles laid down, and that conformity to these principles is conformity to the Word of God. Some liberty is allowed man for the exercise of his knowledge and judgment in determining where and when these principles apply. All wise men, in all denominations, study these principles and use this liberty.

Misrepresentation No. 8: No one can be a member of the Methodist Church unless he is eligible to membership in the college of Bishops.

To make sure of putting an end to all Methodistic proclivities in the mind of his disaffected sister, Bro. H. said to her: "I want to tell you another thing. When you join up here, you will not be a member of the Methodist Church. Nor can you ever be; you would simply belong to the Methodist society." He told her this for her intellectual illumination. "For," said he, "I want you to be the most intelligent Methodist among them." She felt the enlightening influence of his oracular utterances in her inmost soul, and said to him: "I thought I knew something of the Methodist Church, but I guess I didn't." She was certainly fortunate in having the guidance of such an intellectual genius and master of arts. Encouraged by the scintillations of her increasing brightness, he brought forth out of his treasure the following matchless illumination: "The General Conference is the Methodist Church, or, more properly speaking, the college of Bishops. The laws of our State decide that the General Conference is the church. But the Methodists understand that the college of Bishops is the church. At the General Conference which met in Virginia some years ago, a Mr. Galloway was elected a Bishop. He arose and said: 'I thank God I have lived to see this day, for I am, for the first time in my life, a member of the Methodist Church. I have been a member of the Methodist society for many years, but for the first time in my life I am a member of the Methodist Church.' And what he said was true. So when Sam Jones says, 'Quit your meanness and join the church,' it is a pretty hard road he is sending the poor sinner on, if he knows what he says, for no one can be a member of the Methodist Church except he be a Methodist preacher, and he must first pass through all the grades from 'joining the Conference' to the office of Bishop."

When this extraordinary feat was accomplished, it is no wonder that all Methodistic taints were eliminated from the mind of his listener, and that she was ready to say: "I give it up. I did not know anything about it." At last, having the eyes of her understanding thoroughly opened, Bro. H. says to her: "Perhaps you can now see why the preachers first commune together and then invite the society to the second table." Yes, she ought now to be able to see most anything.

In reply to all this stuff, I have simply to say that there is not one word of truth in it. The General Conference is not the church, neither is the college of Bishops, and Methodists do not so "understand" it. Will there never be an end to the age of evolution? Anyone who can believe that the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, would vote for a man for the episcopacy as ignorant as the language put into the mouth of Bishop Galloway would indicate, and then, after such talk, ordain him to that high office, is too simple ever to make an intelligent member of the Methodist Church, and we are perfectly willing for all such to remain with congenial company.

There are many other statements in this unscrupulous little book that are either totally untrue, or so framed as to be misleading. Here are a few samples: Methodists "have hopelessly split on a question of politics." Every well-informed Methodist knows that the division referred to was not caused by a question of politics, but by a question of ecclesiastical administration. After saying that a minister's wife and children can not commune with him in the Methodist Church, he says: "If anyone denies it, I will take his Discipline and show it to him, written down for him by the Bishops whom the preachers swear to obey without question." The Bishops do not write the Discipline; neither do the preachers swear to obey them. There is no telling what will be evolved from a diseased or deformed brain. When certain questions are asked a preacher in the ordination of elders, he says, he answers on his knees. There is nothing of it in the Discipline, nor in the usage of the church. "He takes a solemn oath to obey his superiors, whom he consents to call masters." We take no oaths, and call no man master. For giving the invitation to the Lord's Supper, as written in the Discipline, a minister is "subject to be censured or dismissed from the ministry." It is all bosh. "If the presiding elder of this circuit should choose, for any reason, to shut up that house up there, which this community built for a meeting-house, he can lock the door and put the key in his pocket, and the whole congregation, stewards and preacher thrown in, can't help themselves. That house don't belong to them. It belongs to the Conference, and they might hold meetings in the street, but they have no power, legal or ecclesiastical, to make him let them in." How anyone, with two or three Disciplines to guide him, could perpetrate the above, is beyond comprehension. But, then, Bro. H. is a master of arts. Our church-houses do not belong to the Conference, and the presiding elder has no such authority. "You see now on what ground they assess every member so much. They furnish the house and the preacher, and have a right to charge." The Conference does not furnish the house, nor "assess every member so much;" neither is this done by anyone else, except the stewards, and then by their consent.

After all this, it is easy to see why Bro. H. put the word "Apology" as the caption of his preface, and then wrote, "I feel like begging pardon for sending out the following bit of personal experience." It is also easy to see why he said, "It would crush all the manhood out of me to be a part of such a system."

The University of Chicago.

The University of Chicago is unique in the fact that it gives no vacation. The year's work is divided into quarters. They, in turn, are divided into two terms. Professors and students may, within certain limitations, choose their rest time in that part of the year which suits them best. President Harper has just taken his recreation in the form of superintending, during six weeks, the work of the great Chautauqua Assembly. The work of the university goes on without interruption.

A common misapprehension has been that a Summer school, under the auspices of the university, is conducted during the Summer months. This is by no means true. No diluted milk for babes is offered to the eager student. Rigorous university work goes on from July to July.

The feeling is growing that most of us do not need three months for recreation. Instead of resting, we are likely to vegetate. My own experience has been, that after I had rested two weeks, the coming to a higher latitude has made it possible for me to keep at work throughout the Summer months. The time will surely come when all the larger universities will have to follow the example of their youngest competitor.

It is a young institution, just entering on its third year. During these few years President Harper has received gifts amounting to $8,000,000. He has seen ten university buildings erected. Two of these, the Kent Chemical Laboratory and the Ryerson Physical Laboratory, cost upwards of $300,000 each. Ground is broken for two new buildings, which will be ready for use in time to greet the new year. Much has been done, but, as President Harper says, "We have a beginning, a good beginning, a large beginning, but only a beginning."

A divinity school is an integral part of the university. A law department will not be established until some good friend is minded to give $1,000,000 for its endowment. From three to five millions are needed for the adequate endowment of a medical school. It will be remembered that President Gilman said years ago: The founding of a university is no longer a matter of thousands of dollars; it is a matter of millions. President Harper is a man of dauntless energy, and nobody seriously fears that he will not get all the money he wishes for the perfecting of his plans for a great university.

From what has been written, it will be seen that a wonderful opportunity is offered to teachers from the South better to equip themselves for their work. Forty Southern teachers have been here this Summer. More than six hundred students have been enrolled. Representatives from the faculties of the best institutions in the country have been present. Among the institutions so represented are: Vanderbilt University, The Universities of Ohio, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Washington, Utah, Oklahoma, Minnesota, Georgia, and Texas. Prof. Aven is here from Mississippi College; Prof. Swearingen and I from Millsaps College. It is not intended for this university to enter in competition with the colleges of the country. Stronger emphasis will be put on the graduate work each year. Before many years it is hoped that no collegiate work will be done here at all.

The divinity school is in the hands of the Baptist denomination. Its students are not confined to members adhering to that faith. Of the first fifteen students enrolled this Summer, no one was a Baptist. The Vanderbilt professor of Hebrew is studying in the University of Chicago divinity school. There can not be any such thing as Baptist Hebrew, chemistry, sociology.

The Disciple denomination will erect near the university grounds its own divinity house. A small theological faculty will be maintained. Their students will have the advantage of the equipment of a great university. No separate professorships of Hebrew, of church history, of New Testament Greek, of sociology, will be established. The main duties of the separate theological faculty will be to expound the doctrines which differentiate their denomination from all others.

In another respect the University of Chicago differs from other universities. It feels more than they (or, at least, in a different way) its obligation to the great numbers who can not attend college, but who have high intellectual aspirations. For such, a course of instruction by correspondence is offered. It is not claimed that the study can be done as well away from the personal influence of the teacher. But something akin to the best work can be done. The university recognizes the correspondence study to the extent of giving university credit to those who stand in Chicago satisfactory examination on the course pursued. Last year more than six hundred students were pursuing correspondence courses. It is interesting to know that among the students enrolled is a ranchman from Arizona, who is studying Arabic. Students are to be found in the Sandwich Islands, in Australia, in the South Sea Islands. In addition, every Winter a large faculty of university extension lecturers is employed conducting classes at "centers," both by means of lecture work and class work. Anyone who has read of the wonderful history of university extension in England will be ready to believe that America offers a fine field for extension laborers.

Mansfield Female College.

This college opens on Sept. 5, fully prepared for the work of another year. It has had in the past a good patronage, and those who have remained faithful in supporting the institution have been rewarded by the benefits they have received in the superior education of their daughters. It is an established fact that it is worth more to a Louisiana girl to graduate within the State than out of it, for many are seeing the folly of sending out of the State for the same advantages as are here obtained, and thereby weakening the institutions of the State. This suicidal policy has been largely followed by the Methodists of this State to the great detriment of the institutions of the church. The time has come to ask every Methodist, with a son or daughter to educate, what he proposes to do with reference to the claims of his own institutions, for more Methodists send out of the State than any other denomination. About $90,000 is expended by the people of this State in patronizing institutions without the State. This amount would place every institution of the State upon a solid and flourishing basis. The policy pursued by several institutions outside of the State is to underbid for pupils when they come in competition with the institutions bidding for their own legitimate patronage.

Mansfield College has suffered especially from this ruinous and dishonest method of securing patronage to go abroad. This Summer a new danger has threatened the patronage of Mansfield. A prominent Methodist institution of Texas, grasping for greater numbers, has made a bid for Louisiana patronage, and, securing a list of Mansfield patronage, has directed catalogues and personal letters to the patrons of Mansfield, offering free tuition and reduced rates to win patronage away from an institution of the same church, and with success in many instances. Is this a just and an honorable method to break down one church school to sustain another? It is a known fact that this Texas institution is already overcrowded, and boasts that it can afford to take pupils free of tuition from this State, and in one instance offers to take two from the same family for the expense of one. This is a discrimination in favor of Louisiana.

Is there no protection from such dishonest methods? Is it right to cut each other's throats to secure patronage? Will not the Methodists of this State resist such unworthy appeals for their patronage, and rally to their own institution, where they can secure the best terms and the best advantages? Will you allow yourself to be bought off from your own college, and permit it to suffer for the want of your patronage?

I make a strong and earnest appeal to every Methodist of this State to support Mansfield and Centenary, for they can do more for your children than other institutions outside of the State. Many send abroad and often regret their mistake, but I never heard anyone regretting that they sent to Mansfield. This is the college for you, and will be a blessing to your daughter as long as she lives. Fortunate will be the girl who comes to Mansfield.

"The Do-Without Week."

We note with gladness the broad and general interest manifest in our church on the subject of foreign missions. The all-inclusive command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," is taking deep hold upon the heart and conscience of our people. They are inquiring, thinking, writing, laboring, and, we trust, praying for missions as never before.

In common with the general movement the Board of Missions has set apart a week for self-denial and prayer for this great work. We desire this timely action of the Board to come upon the thought and heart of the church, and hope our people will give it careful reading. H. C. MORRISON, Sec.

THE ACTION OF THE BOARD.

Recognizing the fact that the occasional observance of a season of self-denial and prayer is promotive of the spiritual life and power of the church, we, the officers and members of the Board of Missions, prompted by episcopal suggestion, do hereby call upon and request the members of our church throughout its bounds, to set apart and observe the week in February, 1895 (embracing the fourth and tenth days of the month, inclusive), as a "Do-without Week." And that religious services be held daily through the week by the pastors in their respective churches, according to a programme to be hereafter prepared by a committee appointed by this Board, through its chairman or otherwise.

We call upon our people to refrain from all needless expenditure during that time, and reserve and use the money which would otherwise be expended in this way as a daily offering at the services named. And also that a special contribution be made by the congregations and Sunday-schools on the Sabbath and closing day of the services, to the cause of missions.

All funds thus secured by the observance of the 'Do-without Week" to be forwarded to the treasurer of this Board and placed in the treasury. Furthermore, that it be made the duty of the Committee on Programme to place this matter properly before the church through the church papers.

E. W. COLE, Pres.
H. C. MORRISON, Sec.

Whither Are We Drifting?

Your visits are always hailed with pleasure, and I thought I would write you a few lines in regard to our recent camp meeting. Well, our camp meeting has come and gone, and nothing worth relating has transpired. It was certainly the most unsatisfactory meeting, and productive of less spiritual benefit, than any I ever attended in my life. If anyone was benefited, I did not hear of it. In the first place, it was proposed to omit the morning prayer meeting at the stand, for fear the preachers would be disturbed and broken of their morning rest. Did anyone ever hear of such a thing before? Alas! alas! And it was a Methodist preacher that stood in the pulpit and made the announcement. One in high authority! He said the preachers were weary and needed the morning hours for rest, and they did not want any songs or prayers at that hour. Was ever such a thing heard of before at a Methodist camp meeting? Why, the morning prayer meeting was always a benediction to my soul. I prize the privilege of prayer too much to see it omitted in divine service; and wasn't this meeting intended as a spiritual feast—a feast of tabernacles?

Then the experience meetings were omitted. They always took place at the eight o'clock services heretofore, and were a decided means of grace to a great many. Then our disciplinary rule is to have singing and prayer at the close of the sermon. This was omitted frequently. Is it any wonder that the meeting was barren of good results?

"Restraining prayer, we cease to fight;
Prayer makes the Christian's armor bright;
And who that knows the worth of prayer,
But wishes to be often there?"

Personally, I am opposed to the plan of sending off for some stranger to conduct our camp meetings. Not that I am opposed to evangelists, but I think we have talent and brains enough in our Conference, and even in our own district, to carry on all our meetings successfully without being dependent on perfect strangers. As to the profanity, slang and irreverence, I never was so mortified in my life at anything coming from one who claims to be a minister of the gospel. He claims to be a sinner saved by grace. Doubtless, he has a great deal for which to be thankful; but I think if he would confine his efforts to the temperance platform, he would do a great deal more good. As it is, his example in profanity and irreverence is doing much damage, especially to young people. But as to that, I heard older people adopting his expressions, and laughing heartily at them. At this rate it will not be long before "Ichabod" will have to be written over the pulpit at our camp meeting.

As a great social meeting, a kind of picnic on a big scale, it was a success; but, spiritually, it was a signal failure. If I live to attend another camp meeting, I hope it will be baptized by prayer and our standard hymns.

"Prayer is appointed to convey
The blessings God designs to give.
Long as they live should Christians pray;
They learn to pray when first they live."

And, furthermore, our English language is rich enough in words to convey any idea we wish to express in decent language. Respectfully,

R. M. B.

In the Living Present.

Dr. Koch, of Berlin, has discovered an "anti-toxine"—a preventative and cure of diphtheria. When taken within thirty-six hours after the appearance of the disease a speedy cure is ensured. Its use places nurses and room-mates beyond danger. Diphtheria creates sad havoc in the land. Very few households have been able to keep the fell destroyer from crossing their threshold. We hope that the remedy will soon be generally known. The consumption remedy, by the same inventor, created a great excitement a few years ago. The trouble with that remedy is, that it requires the greatest skill in preparing and administering it. The remedy is scientifically correct, but lack of skill prevents practical utility.

Preachers who pathetically and repeatedly told their auditors that Cæsar's wife had the fever, can now teach the same moral, but vary their phraseology, by declaring that Alexander II., Czar of Russia, is afflicted with kidney disease. Physicians assert that he can live but a few years more. A deep shadow rests on that family. The second son has reached the last stage of consumption. He now dwells in the Crimea, whose climate is very beneficial in cases of pulmonary diseases. Disease and death, servants of God, are, like their Master, no respecter of person.

Not only Jews of the masculine gender, such as Rothschild, Bleichroeder, Seligman, etc., attained to great prominence. Some of the fair sex of their race acquired unenviable notoriety. Hebrew women, as a rule, excel in all that makes woman a queen. But Sara Bernhardt, the actress, and Nellie Nensirether, the adventuress seductress of William K. Vanderbilt, of New York, are Jewesses.

Abbe Brunean, several years the popular priest at Entremmes, France, heeded not Paul's injunction about preaching to others and becoming ourselves castaways. He murdered a fellow-priest. Found guilty, he was guillotined on Aug. 30. He was penitent when executed. During his trial it was demonstrated that he had been a voluptuary. "Let him that standeth take heed, lest he fall."

Quite a large number of young women have recently become nuns in our Crescent City. Our dailies speak pathetically about the "brides of Jesus." The ceremony of initiation is called beautiful, etc. Yes, "brides of Jesus" sounds pretty; but knowing human nature as we do, many of them will believe, after the romance of their trip has passed away, that at the entrance of the nunnery the inscription has been placed: "All hope abandon ye who enter here." ICH DIEN.

A recent article in the Japan Mail asserts that there could be no greater mistake than the assertion sometimes made that Christianity has gained acceptance only among the ignorant and lowly. In the country at large nearly forty per cent. of the Christians belong to the "shizoku," or intellectual class of Japan. In the city of Tokyo nearly seventy-five per cent. of the members are "shizoku."

DON'T WAIT.

BY M. L. DONNELLY.

If you're anything good to say of a man,
  Don't wait till he's laid to rest,
For the eulogy spoken when hearts are broken
  Is an empty thing at best.
Ah, the blighted flower now drooping lonely
  Would perfume the mountain-side,
If the sun's glad ray had shone to day,
  And the pretty buds espied.

If you've any alms to give to the poor,
  Don't wait till you hear the cry
Of wan distress in this wilderness,
  Lest the one forsook may die.
Oh, hearken to poverty's sad lament!
  Be swift her woots to allay,
Don't suffer God's poor from your favored door,
  As you hope for mercy one day.

If your heart be sickened with life's affliction,
  Don't wait to receive sweet balm
From the frail, weak man who never can
  The storms of passion calm.
Seek refuge in Him who will ne'er despise
  The penitent, earnest prayer;
Hail blest relief from tears and grief,
  And the mind's unceasing care!

Don't wait for another to bear the burden
  Of sorrow's irksome load;
Let your hand extend to a stricken friend,
  As he totters adown life's road.
And, if you've anything good to say of a man,
  Don't wait till he's laid to rest;
For the eulogy spoken when hearts are broken
  Is an empty thing at best.

South India—Madura.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

Exactly one hundred miles north of Tinnevelli is Madura, with a population of 87 000. It is upon the Vaigai river; it is now the capital of the district of the same name, and it was formerly the capital of the old Pandyan kingdom.

The chief objects of interest in Madura are the Palace of Tirumala Nayak and the Great Temple. Tirumala Nayak was a great ruler of Madura from 1623 to 1659. His palace has been restored, and is utilized for public offices. It forms one of the finest public buildings of India. The entrance is on the east side, by a granite portico, built in honor of Lord Napier and Fetrick, who ordered the restoration. At each corner of the east face is a low tower. The Napier Gateway gives access to a quadrangle 252x151 feet. On the east, north and south sides of this is a corrider, with its roof supported by arches that rest on great, granite pillars five feet in diameter, cased in yellow cement. On the west side the corrider is double, and 67 feet broad. Above the corriders, and especially on the west side, are the different apartments—a lofty hall, a grand dome and smaller domes, the throne room, galleries where the ladies sat in Tirumala's time and watched the royal receptions, Tirumala's bed-room, where were four holes in the middle of the roof.

"There is a legend that Tirumala's cot was suspended from hooks fixed in the four holes, and that the large hole between the two south holes was made by a thief who descended from it by the chain supporting that corner of the cot, and stole the crown jewels. Tirumala is said to have offered an hereditary estate to the thief if he would restore the jewels, adding that no questions would be asked. On recovering the jewels he kept his word, but ordered the man to be decapitated."

From the roof a fine view of the city may be had. At the foot of the stairway is a door leading into a room, which is considered the most elegant part of the palace. One of the smaller and best-preserved domes has been left unrestored, with its original paintings. In one place are two monoliths of black basalt eighteen feet high.

The Great Temple forms a parallelogram, 847x729 feet, surrounded by nine gopuras, one of them being 152 feet high. A gopura is a name given to the great architectural mass above the gateway of a temple in South India. Looking from a distance or from outside the enclosure the gopuras are the most prominent parts, being higher than the central buildings. To describe this temple, with all its different wonderful apartments, full of superb carvings, would take too long. One part of it is dedicated to Shiva, and the other portion to his fish-eyed consort, Minakshi. This temple also has its hall of 1,000 pillars. "It is not their number, however, but their marvelous elaboration, which makes it the wonder of the place." Its sculptures surpass those of any other hall of its class. Tirumala began, but did not finish, a great gallery or resting-place for the deity of the temple, who was said to pay him a visit of ten days annually. Tais, if finished, would have been finer than his palace. Though unfinished, it cost five million dollars. "On the left of its doorway is a singular group representing one of the Nayaks shooting a wild boar and sows, according to the legend which says that Shiva commiserated the litter of little pigs, took them up in his arms, and, assuming the shape of the sow, suckled them. A portly figure, either that of Shiva or the Nayak, is seen holding up the dozen little pigs." This is only one of hundreds of carvings in stone and marble throughout the temple. For full descriptions I refer you to History of India and Eastern Architecture, by James Fergusson. The sacred cars seen in connection with the temple at Tinnevelli are huger than those here, but there are four golden litters said to be worth from $3,000 to $5,000 each, besides costly jewels kept here, as at most of the great temples.

In the temple enclosure is a sacred tank, and a tank in India is not simply a large cistern, but rather a great pool or artificial lake, the stagnant waters of which are considered by the natives as a panacea for all ills, but by those who know more of God's laws of health, to be one cause of the numerous deformities that prevail among the people, so noticeable to a new-comer, who has them, everywhere and in varied form, thrust before his eyes by those seeking alms.

Near this tank is a little chamber where, in 1706, the subjects put their queen and starved her to death, with rich food kept near enough by for her to see and smell, but not touch it.

The huge temple elephant was down sick, and had been so for months. (He has since died.)

My day at Madura was some festival occasion, and at night they fired big guns and had a very curious and noisy torchlight procession.

Two miles from the center of the city is another tank, fenced in with stone, with a temple forming an island in the center. This tank is so large that the road around it forms the fashionable drive of Madura. Not far from this tank is a banyan tree, with numerous large trunks, the parent one scarcely distinguishable from the later ones—a rival of the great banyan at Calcutta, and that other one in India under which a British duke is said to have shaded his army of 10,000.

"Don't Oppose Holiness."

We are indebted for an able and wonderful article under this heading to our eminent and pious brother, Dr. J. B. Walker; but it is very likely to hurt wherever it touches, especially since all discussions on this important topic has for some months been prudently kept from the columns of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. With all respect and love for the beloved Doctor, I think it a very imprudent venture of his to arouse a subject in the columns of our Conference paper, upon which there is such opposite and antagonistic views entertained by able and eminently pious men from both sides. Whatever was the intention of Dr. Walker in writing this article, it will seem to many a mischievous thrust at an old sore that is yet far from being healed. It was, indeed, very prudent in the management of the ADVOCATE to suppress all discussion on this subject from its columns since the success of the paper was menaced thereby; writers from both sides having an ungovernable disposition to bicker and hurl missiles at each other, and neither seemed to respect the views of the other. Dr. Walker's move is an aggressive one, and is to be deplored by both parties; for he has no more right to attack the doctrine of entire sanctification in the columns of our paper than an advocate of the doctrine has to teach it as opposing all other views. He having made the advance, may expect to be met on middle ground.

Personally, as a Methodist, I embrace the doctrine of entire sanctification, unfortunately, if not in a certain sense, vulgarly termed the second blessing. I do not profess to enjoy this high state of perfection, still I adopt the doctrine as cardinal in my theology and teach it as I understand it. I find it inculcated, even inextricably platted in the very foundation of Methodism. Wesley treats on it very logically and elaborately and specially in several sermons, and refers directly or indirectly to it frequently throughout his doctrinal standards, to say nothing of his letters. Watson teaches it, Clark teaches it, Fletcher teaches it, Vinet (Pastoral Theology, course of first year) teaches it, the Bible teaches it; then who will rise to-day in our church and denounce it as undoctrinal and unscriptural? Nor do these authorities disagree in any point on this subject, though the Doctor plainly says they do. The Doctor claims that he has prayerfully studied the Bible with all the available helps for half a century, and has failed to discover the necessity for a second cleansing; yet Mr. Wesley was, perhaps, as close a student for as long a period, and he both taught the necessity for it and the filling of this necessity in entire sanctification; so you see there are scholarly and pious men on both sides of this question. Yet I suppose Mr. Wesley, like the rest experiencing and teaching this doctrine, must be and is set down as a fanatic, mad man, or some other such curiosity or intellectual monstrosity.

One of the most infallible proofs of the deep spirituality of this experience is the strength of its opposition. It has ever been that truth must force its way against the stontest adversity, and Christianity must ever stem an almost irresistible tide of mockery and scorn—carnality and spirituality are at war. Christianity will advance, but the devil disputes its ground. The learned Doctor, seeming to feel within himself that he is trespassing on forbidden territory, courteously apologizes that the advocates of this doctrine are not satisfied to enjoy this blessing themselves, but are over-zealous to force it on others; hence his timely treatise. Now, if they are trying to force it on our beloved brother or any of his friends, or anybody else, it is certainly not through the columns of the ADVOCATE, and it is consequently a needless self-indulgence in him to justify himself with such an excuse. We would prefer to resort elsewhere than in the ADVOCATE for controversial discussion of this topic, since it breeds the bitterest contention. If, on the other hand, they burn to proclaim the glad tidings to their fellow-men, it is but the spirit of the gospel that moves them; it is their inalienable privilege—aye, their bounden duty—to teach it to all men; for "woe is me if I preach not the gospel."

I have not a desire to encroach more extensively on your valuable space in the ADVOCATE by replying to every charge made against some of our brethren and their views. I can not here go into detail in defense of the doctrine or those teaching it; my object has been to discourage such a policy of rebuke. It is to be hoped this discussion will not continue. Let them teach sanctification if the Spirit moves them, and let them be fanatics if they will; let them multiply if the Lord wills, and who will dare throw a stumbling-block in their way. I pray God to create more such fanatics in the church. May he make us all this fanatical, even Dr. Walker, and then there will be great rejoicing in Israel. Let the Holy Ghost descend and the fire fall, and let us with one accord and in the same spirit sing:

"Oh for a thousand tongues to sing
My great Redeemer's praise."

J. W. LEE.

Only This.

It is not necessary to reply to all the words used by my brother, "Gilderoy," in his article in the ADVOCATE of to-day, Aug. 23. He appropriately headed his communication, "A Gun That Kicks." I will just let him pick himself out of the mud. A few points only need notice:

1. It is true a majority of the General Conference did pass that "miserable performance of the Committee on Episcopacy"—Report No. 5—on the night of May 18; but what comfort can be had out of that, it is difficult for more than the twenty-four protestants to see, especially when we consider how abruptly debate was shut off.

2. The Committee on Episcopacy utterly failed and virtually refused to pass upon the law points involved in the complaints against Bishop Hargrove's administration, although they had exclusive jurisdiction of those questions. A discussion, which was ruthlessly and apparently designedly thwarted, would have made manifest the failure of the committee to discharge the duty laid upon it.

3. Three hundred and nineteen members of the General Conference did not vote to adopt that Report No. 5. All who voted in the negative did not sign the protest, because they were not asked to do so. It is not correct to say that the vote was 319 to 24. Bro. "Gilderoy's" pen slipped.

4. Dr. Kelley was never tried by the Tennessee Conference, nor by a lawfully constituted committee of trial; nor was there ever any proper arrest of his character, or notice of complaint. The whole thing was the action of the Bishop and a few members of the Conference. The law of the church was disregarded throughout those proceedings. The Tennessee Conference, by its delegates to the General Conference, refused to defend the appeal, and virtually repudiated the action of the committee of trial, which had been appointed over the written protest of 116 members of the Tennessee Conference.

5. As for myself, I voted to reverse the action of that packed committee, instead of voting to remand the case, because I did not believe the evidence in the case sustained the charge (which charge, by the way, very curiously was never put upon the Minutes of the Tennessee Conference), or proved any violation of the law of the church, and it was needless to remand the case. An unlawfully inflicted penalty had been endured.

However "aggressive" I may appear, and however severe my language may have been in my former communication, or in this one, I disclaim any "vicious" or malicious motive, feeling, or intention. At the same time I repeat my words of warning.

The church—the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—may go on in spite of disruptions, etc. So has the Church of Rome; but Rome does not improve.

T. L. MELLEN.

Wesson, Miss., Aug. 23.

Begin with small things. You can not enter the presence of another human being without finding there more to do than you or I, or any soul, will ever learn to do perfectly before we die. Let us be content to do little, if God sets us at little tasks. It is but pride and self-will which says, "Give me something huge to fight, and I should enjoy that; but why make me sweep the dust?"—Charles Kingsley.

Pessimism, So Called.

Is it the part of wisdom or prudence to shut our eyes to positive facts simply because it is unpleasant to contemplate them, or unfashionable to admit their existence even? What is to be gained by such a course but "strong delusion," that may cause us to "believe a lie, . . . and all be damned who believe not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness"? It is said he is doubly armed who is forewarned, because, if he may not wholly avert an impending calamity, he may prepare to safely meet it.

The prophetic declaration is emphatically made by inspiration that the world will grow worse and worse, and that the Lord will destroy it. Now, what will the optimists do with these two solemn and stubborn facts? If the world will grow worse, why not now? If not now, when will it grow worse? Who can tell whether now or later on? But that it will be so, sooner or later, there can be no question. Then, as eternal vigilance is the price of salvation as well as of liberty, let us be ever on the alert. The siren's enchanting song, "There is time enough yet," has lured numberless victims to loiter in forbidden places until it was everlastingly too late to be saved. The fact that the earth has not yet been burned up is evidence that it is not yet quite as bad as it will become, sooner or later; and the fact that it shall be burned up is evidence that it will become worse and worse until it be destroyed. But it is becoming fashionable now to call those pessimists who quote these Scriptures! But Christ was called a glutton and a wine bibber, and even accused of having a devil and casting out devils by Beelzebub! St. Paul has forewarned us that "evil men and seducers will wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived." And he further declares that "the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." But the inspired and faithful apostle didn't stop at that; he went further, and said, "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." Don't the apostle mean to say that the time will come—to-morrow, maybe, or next day—when there will be so many optimists the people full of lusts will just "heap" the "deceivers and deceived" up around them, and listen to their siren songs of "Peace, peace," when there is no peace, and that sudden destruction shall come upon them as travail upon a woman with child? If so, had we all not better admit these inspired truths—that the world will grow worse and worse, and that the Lord will destroy it—and get ready, without delay, to stand from under the awful judgments that shall come upon the wicked?

These thoughts have been prompted, and these well-meant remarks have been made, on account of what occurred at the University of Nebraska last week, and elsewhere after.

"Meats and Herbs."

The above is the title to a chapter of Bishop Haygood's book, "Jack-knife and Brambles." The aim of the chapter is the defense of Christian liberty in minor matters of conduct, such as "roaching the hair," "wearing suspenders," shaving one's face, drinking coffee, etc.; not to allow anyone that has an abnormal conscience about the correctness of such actions to interfere with one's personal liberty in the premises. One action enumerated in the bill of rights given, as illustrations, is the smoking of cigars. Harm to our boys will result by the Bishop's claiming the "tobacco habit" to be as inoffensive to others and as harmless to one's self as "wearing suspenders" or "roaching the hair."

There was a time when Paul said, "Take a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thine often infirmities." Had Paul lived in the nineteenth century, and realized the stupendous evil of the drink curse as we see and feel it, we feel sure he would have given a different prescription. The slogan cry of the saloon to-day is, "Personal liberty" in the matter of drink. I favor all "personal rights" that work no harm to one's body or soul, and no harm to one's neighbor.

Surely Bishop Haygood will not insist that the "tobacco habit" is innocent of evil. It is not a matter of some crank's opinion, or conscience, to oppose the use of tobacco in the forms now extant. Like opium and arsenic, it may have its place as a medicine, and be proper to use it as such.

The republics of France and the United States, on the ground of the injurious effects upon health and life, forbid the use of tobacco to students attending the government schools. Several of our States have felt compelled to pass restrictive laws in its use. The Methodist Episcopal Church, in its investigation of the tobacco question, has concluded it not as innocent as wearing "galluses," or "turning down plates at the table." No applicant can enter the itinerancy of that church until he vows to abstain from the use of tobacco.

Cognizant of the hard struggle mothers are having to save their boys from the "tobacco habit," it is to be regretted that Bishop Haygood did not, for their sakes as well as Christ's sake, practice self-denial, and abstain from the appearance of evil by eliminating "smoking cigars" from his illustrations of harmless, indifferent acts. There was a time when it was considered a harmless indulgence to use alcoholic and malt liquors. Ministers and officers in the church manufactured, bought, sold and used them as a beverage; but to do so now would, in many religious bodies, be equivalent to expulsion from the church. God's Word says to the Christian: "Know ye not that ye are not your own?" "Ye have been bought with a price;" "Know ye not that your bodies are the temple of the Holy Ghost?" "Glorify God in your bodies and spirits, which are his." With the above declarations thundering in our ears, then look at the way men, women and children are using tobacco, to the destruction of mind and body. I fail to see it to be an impertinent act to challenge the entire consecration of soul, body and spirit to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ of any avowed disciple, that, with the light and record of the evil consequences of the tobacco habit of this day, still defiantly continues the selfish practice, and, when remonstrated with, pleads the personal liberty act.

Notes and Resolutions from Shreveport District Conference.

A sad feature in the reports was a rather low spiritual state of the church. Thirty-five prayer meetings and fifteen class meetings, with only two hundred and nine, out of a membership of four thousand and more, leading the public meetings.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE EPWORTH LEAGUES.

Resolved, That we, as preachers, will inform ourselves as to the workings of the League, and impart the knowledge to the people.

Resolved, That we establish an Epworth League wherever possible.

Resolved, That we make every effort to circulate the Epworth Era, our Epworth League paper, within the bounds of this district.

RESOLUTIONS ON SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

Whereas, There is a growing tendency to desecrate the Sabbath by social visiting, railway traveling, picnic excursions, and kindred amusements; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, as a church, will, by precept and example, use our utmost influence against the open and profligate desecration of the Christian Sabbath.

Resolved, That the resolution of the General Conference touching the Sunday mails be read to all our congregations by the preachers.

Resolved, That with gratitude we acknowledge the firm and noble stand taken by the majority of our legislators of 1892-1894 against the repeal of the Sunday law.

[Ringing resolutions on temperance were passed, which we are obliged to omit for want of space.—EDITOR.]

RESOLUTIONS ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

Resolved, That we be more zealous in circulating our worthy NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; that we give its management a ringing endorsement, and that we will press its interests home on our people.

Resolved, That we lend ourselves to the seed-sowing service of scattering broadcast our books and periodicals.

Resolved, That we discourage the use of leaflets, quarterlies and lesson helps during the Sunday-school hours at the expense of searching the Scriptures, and neglecting the blessed heritage of being filled, thrilled, and kept by the comforting words of the Book of books.

EXTRACTS FROM REPORT ON MISSIONS.

The Shreveport district has increased very much on all lines. Instead of sixteen or seventeen charges, which were here twelve years ago, there are now about twenty, and a call for three or four more. We regret that our liberality is not commensurate with the demand. It is the opinion of your committee that two or three charges more should be organized in this district.

[We omit the names of the charges.—EDITOR.]

Resolved, That we memorialize the Bishop and his cabinet, recommending the forming of four missions within this district.

Resolved, That we recommend to the Bishop and his cabinet the necessity of a new district in middle West Louisiana, in order to meet the demands of our people throughout this section of country.

Conference Claimants.

MR. EDITOR: I see the Australian Methodist Church pays her superannuated preachers from five hundred to one thousand dollars a year, according to the time they have preached, while our great boasted church pays from twenty-five to two hundred. Why is this so? Is it not because the men that make our church laws are preachers that get large salaries and laymen that are rich, and they look upon an old, poor, worn-out superannuated preacher as of no account? If not so, what is it? I looked to our last General Conference with some hope that they would condescend to do something; but I suppose it was too small a matter for them. Is it not so? If not, why is there no necessity for it? Selfishness is the ruling passion of human life, and in everything Self says, "Let me have it." It is part of the old serpent. You may think you have killed him, but he will come to crawl off, and say, "Let me have it." Those men that make our laws are good religious men, and some of them may be sanctified men; yet Self says, "Let me have it."

I remember once quite a young preacher was elected to the General Conference, while a very distinguished and popular preacher, being absent, was left out. Quite an indignation was gotten up by the people; said it was prejudice and jealousy. A few of us asked the young preacher to get up in Conference and tender his place to the big preacher; that it would raise him up in the Conference. We voted for the young preacher, but, "No, no," Self said; "let me have it."

Mr. Editor, I did see old Self throttled once in my life, not in a Methodist Conference, but in a Presbyterian Presbytery. Old Dr. Stratton was put in nomination for the General Assembly. The old man rose up in graceful dignity, and said: "My brethren, it is an honored thing to go to the General Assembly, and I love to go; but you have sent me many times, while some of my brethren here are just as worthy and qualified as myself, and have never gone. Now, you withdraw my name, and send some brother that has never gone," which they did.

Now, Mr. Editor, there is no collection in the church so cheerfully responded to as the Conference collection. Then why so little collected? Since I have been a superannuated preacher I have watched that thing, because Self says, "Let me have it," and I find one trouble among the people; indeed, I am troubled about it myself, whether it is a charity, or for service rendered. I wish that thing was settled. When I entered the ministry my salary was one hundred dollars, if I could get it; but to go on when I got old and worn out the church was bound for my support. Well, it has paid me from seven to ten dollars a month—then root, pig, or die—out of which I must furnish house, provisions, clothing, taxes, medicines, doctor bills, insurance, traveling expenses, to contribute to every charity, church expenses, my wife's quarterage to the church she belongs to. But if it is a charity, I want to know it. If so, I don't want it. I don't want to be a church pauper—no, no; but if it is for long service done, then I want it. The Methodist in Australia pays for service rendered, and not as a charity. As such, they pay according to the time served; but our church does not.

Now, is it a fact that every superannuated preacher in the Mississippi Conference is considered a church pauper? I scorn with all my contempt such an idea; yet our Conference Board will give a preacher as much for one year's service as for fifty, if his necessities require it. Well, if it is a charity, it is right; but Self says, "Let me have it." Ah, me, how selfish we are and don't know it!

I knew a preacher once that on his last round he would do as many as doing now on the last round—take up collection for all collections ordered by the Conference; then sit down and divide out to each according to his taste, go to Conference, read out his report away down low, and say, "Well, I done the best I could;" but he became superannuated. Oh, what a change came over his dreams! No man was more clamorous for his annuity. It may be that man may be me, for what you know. I am glad of one thing, there is a waking up on this subject, though it may be not very pleasant to some. Well, please excuse me if I have said anything harsh in this paper, I did not intend it.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

Oatmeal Cakes (Good for Afternoon Tea).

Two cupfuls of oatmeal, two cupfuls of flour, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of shortening, suet or butter, one-half cupful of warm water, one teaspoonful of salt, and one-half teaspoonful of soda. First mix well together the oatmeal, flour and sugar, and salt. Melt the shortening, and dissolve the soda in the warm water, and pour into the flour mixture as quickly as possible. Turn it on to the moulding-board, and roll smoothly until about one-quarter of an inch in thickness; cut up into small cakes of any size preferred. Then roll each cake very thin, and bake in rather a slow heat until well browned. Let them stand on the baking-pan only a moment after taking from the oven. Handle with care, as they break very easily while hot. They will keep well in a tightly-covered tin can or earthen jar. If a coffee cup is used for the measure, and suet for the shortening, this rule will make two pounds, and will cost about twelve cents, and will last—how long?

A good Scotch woman is famed for these cakes, not only in the town where she lives, but in many other towns where her visitors have carried her recipe and sounded her praises as well as that of her cakes.—Good Housekeeping.

SALADS AND SALAD DRESSING.—Recipes for salad are so many and so minute that nothing but a good cook book would seem to be necessary to insure a good salad. Experience proves that this is not the case, and that the best of all ways to learn to make salads is to watch the work of one who has mastered the art. A perfect salad dressing is one which suits the meal of which it forms a part. A beginner may safely follow these general rules: For plain French dressing, put into a bowl one saltspoonful of salt and one-quarter of a saltspoonful of white pepper. Mix with one tablespoonful of oil, and when well mixed add two more tablespoonfuls of oil and one of vinegar. Mix well with a fork and pour over the lettuce or other vegetable. A tablespoonful of chervil or tarragon may often be added with good effect. In making a mayonnaise dressing success depends upon getting a right start. If the ingredients betake themselves in different directions no amount of coaxing or driving will bring them together again. A cold, deep dish or bowl, a cold egg, oil that is cool, are all necessary. Put the yolk of the egg in the cool bowl and stir with a fork. If the yolk goes to pieces before it is stirred, reject it, and take one which will keep its shape, showing that it is fresh. Add a few drops of oil at a time, stirring constantly. When it becomes thicker than thick cream add a few drops of vinegar. When the vinegar is blended add more oil until it is very thick, then add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, half a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of red pepper.—Good Housekeeping.

TOMATO OMELET.—Beat well three eggs, a pinch of salt and a teaspoon of flour or a teaspoon of cornstarch. Add two-thirds of a cup of strained canned tomatoes. Stir well and pour into a well-buttered spider. Cover with a tin cover and set a hot griddle on this. Place where it will brown, but not burn. When the mixture has thickened, slip a pancake-turner under it, fold over, slip on a hot platter and serve at once.—Exchange.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. S. Hodges, Cary circuit, Mississippi Conference: "Closed a gracious revival at Sunflower Chapel on Aug. 9. Was assisted by Bro. H. M. Ellis. His preaching was with power. Results: 8 accessions, church revived, and quite a number of conversions. We will build a new church there soon. To God be the praise."

Rev. J. S. Hodges, Cary circuit, Mississippi Conference: "We have just closed our second meeting on this work at Sharbrough's Chapel. It lasted six days. Bro. H. M. Ellis was with us, but preached only four sermons on account of sickness. Results: 8 accessions, about 15 conversions, church revived, and old difficulties settled. Bro. Joe Jones will be with us at Cary in October. Pray for us here in the Delta. Have driven blind tigers from Cary."

Rev. T. B. Cottrell, L. P., Lake City, Miss., Aug. 27: "At this writing we are in the midst of a gracious revival. Much good is being done, and we believe the Spirit of God is with us. Sinners are being converted to God, backsliders reclaimed, and the church built up. Our beloved presiding elder, Dr. E. H. Mounger, was with us two days last week. On his return, Bro. R. J. Jones, of Yazoo City, came to our help. Those holy men of God preached to us with power and demonstration of the Spirit of God, and to the good of immortal souls. Our beloved pastor, Bro. T. J. Norsworthy, is doing all the preaching now, and keeping up the same interest. He is a power in the pulpit, and preaches to the satisfaction of us all. We endeavor to continue the meeting through this week. Pray for us, that we may receive a pentecostal blessing."

Rev. L. J. Jones, P. C., Pleasant Grove circuit, Aug. 21: "On Saturday before the second Sunday in July we began a meeting at Sartin. The meeting lasted five days. I was assisted by Bro. H. P. Lewis, of Summit. There were several hundred people on the grounds. The church was made to rejoice in the love of God. Only one accession to the church, as nearly all in that community belong to the church. Our meeting at Tilton began last Saturday, lasting five days. We had Bro. Ferrell Felder and Bro. Beeson to assist us. We received 8 members, baptized 18 children. Many of our members praised God for that religion that will enable us to hold family prayers, tell our experience and plead with sinners to repent. It is thought that there were 800 people present on Sunday, and a great many more in the week than the house would hold. The members here say that the assessment of the church will be paid in full."

Rev. Thos. H. Dorsey, P. C., Fulton circuit, Mississippi Conference, Aug. 17: "We have just closed two good revivals—one at Fulton, the other at Evergreen. Quite a number of conversions and backsliders renewed in the faith, and the church is left in a good spiritual condition. We are indebted to Bros. L. T. Sargent, J. A. McDougal, W. A. Graves for assistance. Bros. Sargent and McDougal did fine work at Fulton, preaching with the demonstration of the Spirit's power. Bro. Graves preached for us at Evergreen, bringing our people powerfully under the influence of the Holy Spirit by the powerful truths which he so clearly presented. He is young, but a good gospel preacher. He thoroughly won the hearts of the congregation. The time is not far distant when any charge in the Conference would be glad to have him as its pastor. Everything is moving nicely. We are arranging to build a new church, which we hope to accomplish at a very early date. Bless the Lord for his goodness!"

Rev. M. L. White, Mt. Carmel, Miss., Aug. 19: "Meeting began at Mt. Zion Saturday before first Sunday in August. At first service revival began, and continued through. The best meeting I have seen at Mt. Zion. Two accessions to church—one a young lady, a graduate from Whitworth College. Bro. C. H. Ellis did the preaching. He is a good worker; good, deep work done here by him. From Mt. Zion we went to Santee Church, the mother of Methodism. Here commenced meeting Saturday before second Sunday. What a revival! Several conversions, 7 joined the church, persons prayed and testified who never had before. Mt. Carmel circuit is in better shape than ever before. Rev. C. H. Ellis conducted this meeting also, with the assistance of Bro. Partridge three days. To God be all the praise! God has honored old Santee by calling one of her young men to preach the gospel—W. A. Miller—who was licensed by last Quarterly Conference. He wants to attend next session of Millsaps College. I do trust that a way will be opened for this young preacher, that some one who is able will offer to help him. I believe some way will be made."

HYGIENE.

Among the Invalids.

It is very desirable that anyone who has the care of a family, and so, sooner or later, of the sick, should be ready for all emergencies of disease and accident. And as a great part of the care of the sick lies in their fit nourishment, it is equally desirable to know just what dishes are the best and most sustaining for the ailing and the convalescent. For it goes without saying that certain ailment which is good for one thing is bad for another; thus beef tea (which has gone through various phases of approbation and contempt, and is now again in partial favor, as it is said to be an excellent stimulant if not an entirely satisfactory food, and to have good reparative properties in certain cases) should not be given in either rheumatic fever or typhoid, as it is both heating and aperient, whey in such instances replacing its use. As a usual thing, where mutton broth is allowed, veal and chicken broth can also be given—more for the sake of variety, however, than for any other reason, as a patient is very apt to feel disgusted if fed too long on any one thing. Calves'-feet jelly, which was once a great thing to rely on, and then fell into desuetude, has been restored to favor in some degree, on the authority of the usage of St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London.

Milk, however, is the diet on which most physicians fall back in emergencies, as being the natural food of mankind, and of all mammalia, preferable to the various gruels, that have a tendency to acidity. Where milk is not easily digested, lime-water should be mingled with it, a tablespoonful to a gohlet; being tasteless, it does not change the flavor of the drink; but occasionally salt or bicarbonate of soda may be used instead, the latter being best where there is constipation. Where milk will not digest at all, cream, diluted with as much hot water, will sometimes answer as well. Milk in a tablespoonful dose every half hour, one-third of it lime-water, can be given when no other food can be retained, and will sustain the patient till more can be taken. In great irritability of the stomach koumiss is prescribed, as it checks nausea in its various stages. When isinglass is boiled in milk, making blanc-mange, the result is a very delicate and easily digested food; sometimes merely scalding a stick of cinnamon in milk gives a very pleasant pungency, by way of change, where there is weakness of the bowels especially; and hot milk, not boiled, is thought usually to preserve the energy better than cold milk does. When a patient is recovering from illness, digestion in a measure re-established, but still wanting, the yolk of an egg two or three times a day is nourishing and good taking in milk. This is better whole than beaten, as less air is taken with it then, and after a little practice it is no more difficult to swallow than an oyster is. After night-sweats a drink of cold tea in the morning acts as a mild tonic.—Harper's Bazar.

Some Reasons for Daily Exercise.

1. Any man who does not take time for exercise will probably have to make time to be ill.

2. Body and mind are both gifts; and for the proper use of them our Maker will hold us responsible.

3. Exercise gradually increases the physical powers, and gives more strength to resist sickness.

4. Exercise will do for your body what intellectual training will do for your mind—educate and strengthen it.

5. Plato called a man lame because he exercised the mind while the body was allowed to suffer.

6. A sound body lies at the foundation of all that goes to make life a success. Exercise will help to give it.

7. Exercise will help a young man to lead a chaste life.

8. Varied, light, and brisk exercises, next to sleep, will rest the tired brain better than anything else.

9. Metal will rust if not used, and the body will become diseased if not exercised.

10. A man "too busy" to take care of his health is like a workman too busy to sharpen his tools.—Reflector.

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

"Don't Shoot The Organist,"

"He's doing the best he can on that old wheezer. Our new Epworth Organ will be here next Sunday, and we promise you better music."

While the above is only a little joke, it suggests that many of the organs in our churches are worn out and should be "located." The publishers have arranged with the manufacturers to furnish our readers with

Epworth Organs and Pianos AT FACTORY PRICES.

We assure you that these instruments are high grade and strictly reliable. They rank right up with the best made. Thousands of our preachers and people testify to the quality of the Epworth. If you need an Organ or Piano for church or home send for catalogue giving name and address of your preacher, and we will mail you information that will save you a handsome amount. We ask no money until instruments are tested and found as represented.

Go Thou and Do Likewise.

A Sunday or two ago Dr. C. B. Riddick, pastor of First Church, this city, held a Church Conference. There were four or five hundred people present. Among other items of business transacted was the presentation of the claims of this paper, the official organ of the Memphis Conference. This was in the regular order, for it is part of the business of the Church Conference to inquire if our church papers are circulated and read. The members of the First Church were reminded of their duty to subscribe for their own church papers and periodicals and read them. For a pastor to do this is no desecration of the Lord's day. The object is not to advertise and sell so much work done by a printing press, but to introduce into the hands of the people religious literature.

The object of a religious journal is not merely to give the news of the moral side of the world and its churches, but to promote the kingdom of God. It seeks to accomplish by the fireside what the preacher does in the pulpit and pastorate—the salvation of the soul.

We commend Dr. Riddick's course in this matter to all our pastors. Don't be afraid of wasting time by presenting the claims of your paper to the church, and don't be mealy-mouthed about it.—Memphis Advocate.

A layman in one of the charges of our Conference spent about half a day in securing renewals to the Tennessee Methodist in his charge, and, as a result of his labors, forwarded us that afternoon his check for $36. He did not retain any commission. There is not a layman in the Conference with more absorbing business demands, or more successful than this man. If one layman or the preacher in each charge would do as well, several thousand dollars would be sent to this office within a few weeks, which would greatly relieve the pressure these hard times.—Tennessee Methodist.

[The above clippings from two of our church papers of recent date are worthy of the attention of pastors and leading laymen everywhere. They show what can be done where there is a will to do.—EDITOR.]

More perfect information in regard to the Debs' strike at Chicago simply exhibits the folly of the movement. It is reported, apparently on good authority, that twenty-five carriage painters in a Chicago factory struck through sympathy. Their places were almost immediately filled by twenty-five skilled workmen, and these were strikers from the Pullman works. Was there over any undertaking more inconsistent and more at odds with itself?

Monteagle.

Finding it necessary to take an absolute rest, we hied away a few weeks since to Monteagle. We were chaperoned by an elect lady whom we have known rather intimately for some years. Our route was by the Q. and C. Having six hours in Chattanooga, we, of course, spent part of the time upon Lookout Mountain, visiting "The Inn," "Sunset Rock," "The Garden of the Gods," with its strange furnishings—"Noah's Ark," "Damon and Phythias," "Mahomet's Tomb," "The Judgment Seat," and other places of interest. Although we had visited Lookout before, we enjoyed the trip hugely. We have seen few finer views than are to be had from the top of Lookout. We reached Monteagle about twenty-seven hours after leaving New Orleans. This was our third trip to Monteagle. We were on the programme the first year of the Assembly, and enjoyed a similar honor four years since. The place has undergone a marvelous transformation since we saw it first. Then there were only two houses on the grounds. The people dwelt in tents, soldier fashion. Now there are more than a hundred residences, some of them quite handsome. The grounds have also been very much improved. The attendance is said to have been larger this year than ever before, and the crowd would have been much larger still if first-class hotel accommodations could have been had on the Assembly grounds. This want will be met before the next Assembly, a sufficient sum of money having been raised in a few minutes at a public meeting. The programme this year, so far as we heard it, was good. We heard several excellent lectures from Dr. John R. Sampey, of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, on such subjects as these: "David as a Religious Poet," "The Proverbs of Solomon." We also heard three fine lectures from Dr. J. E. Gilbert, of Washington City, on "The Bible the Word of God," "The Bible in English," "The Books of Moses." Several lectures on art were given by Prof. W. M. R. French, director of the Art Institute, Chicago. Percy Meredith Reese, of Baltimore, a professional lecturer, gave several lectures which were illustrated by stereopticon views. We heard only one of these, viz., "Rome, the Mistress of the World." It was magnificent—not only entertaining, but instructive. One very interesting part of every day's programme at Monteagle is the twilight prayer service. This is remarkable in the first place for the attendance, the house being filled to overflowing at every service. This is in part due, perhaps, to the fact that the people who go to Monteagle are people who attend prayer meeting at home. But this is not the whole secret of the matter. There is something in the manner of conducting it which keeps up interest in it. In the first place, this prayer service lasts just a half hour—no more, no less. It commences exactly on time, and closes exactly on time. The songs are short; usually not more than two or three verses are sung. The prayers are also very short, rarely exceeding two minutes in length. (This is merely a guess, as we did not apply our chronometer to anybody's prayer.) The talks are short. The leader makes a very brief talk, and when the meeting is thrown open for talks, the people follow the example of the leader. No long-winded harangues are ever heard there. Special attention is paid to the children. Something is said for their benefit in almost every service. Then they are frequently called upon to repeat verses of Scripture, which they do with evident relish. Of the several schools at Monteagle we know nothing personally. Having gone there for rest, we did not try to take in everything. We are informed, however, by those who have facilities for knowing whereof they affirm, that the several schools are well equipped. To give an idea of the variety of work that is carried on at Monteagle, we present a list of the schools: Physical Culture, French and German, English Literature, Art, Sculpture, Music, Voice Culture, Latin, Greek, Science, Penmanship, Stenography and Typewriting. In addition to these, a Peabody Normal Institute was carried on for about three weeks by a faculty of nine thoroughly competent teachers. It may be interesting to Mississippians to know that Mississippi is more largely represented at Monteagle than any other State, except Tennessee. Louisiana is also more largely represented than we had supposed. Every Southern State sends representatives. Monteagle stock is rising. This year the Assembly more than paid expenses. This will be gratifying to friends of the Chautauqua movement everywhere. The Monteagle Assembly was projected in order to provide a Summer resort for families that do not like the dissipations of an ordinary watering-place. The problem has been solved. It has been demonstrated that a Summer resort which taboos cards, dancing and the like, and which makes provision for innocent recreation and intellectual improvement, can be sustained. Monteagle is no longer an experiment, but a decided success. One beautiful feature of the place is the perfect harmony that exists between the different denominations. Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians forget their differences and dwell together in brotherly love. We met many acquaintances from different sections. Rev. J. P. Drake and Rev. J. W. McLaurin, of the Mississippi Conference, were enjoying themselves hugely at the time of our departure; Dr. C. G. Andrews had left before our arrival. We were sorry to have missed his excellent sermon. Rev. Henry Carre, of New Orleans, arrived just before we left.

Nothing But Wind.

The much-talked-of pronunciamento of the Pope's American representative anent the liquor traffic turns out to be nothing but wind after all, as the following from the New York Advocate shows:

It is becoming apparent, as might have been expected, that the Roman Catholic kingdom of God as respects the saloons is not to be in power, but in word. Mgr. Joseph Schroeder, Professor of dogmatic theology in the Catholic University of Washington, has consented to discuss the subject in the New York Times. He says that the intent and purport of Satolli's letters have been exaggerated as well as distorted; that the delegate's two letters related entirely to the diocese of Columbus; that his approval of the steps taken by that Bishop does not compel all other Bishops to promulgate similar regulations. He affirms that "the Roman Catholic Church has never in any wise condemned the reasonable and moderate use of spirituous beverages." He affirms that the apostolic delegate has never declared it to be a scandal in itself for a Catholic to conduct a saloon, nor has he ever approved of such or any similar proposition; and concludes by saying that "the main thought of the apostolic delegate, and of Archbishop Corrigan in reply to the obtrusive Wine and Spirit Gazette, was to sustain the jurisdictional powers of a Bishop to issue independent regulations in furtherance of the spiritual welfare of his people." The apostolic delegate never intended to promulgate a fundamental declaration as to the liquor question, so-called, with respect to the advantage or disadvantage, the propriety or impropriety, of the manufacture, sale, or use of spirituous liquors, or with respect to temperance, total abstinence, or prohibition.

The Conference Fund.

We regret exceedingly to learn that the Conference Fund for the Mississippi Conference is in arrears. This ought not to be. The Mississippi Conference took a step in the right direction when it inaugurated the plan of making quarterly payments to the claimants on this fund. A superannuated preacher should not be made to wait until the end of the year for the pittance allowed him for his support. He needs money all through the year, just as other people do. The Mississippi Conference made a good beginning in this matter; but this year the funds have not come in promptly. This is due, no doubt, to the general financial stringency. We believe, however, that in spite of hard times money can be raised in many of our charges for this cause. There is no cause that appeals and lies nearer the hearts of our people. During our career as a pastor we always found it easier to raise money for the Conference Fund than for anything else. Let our preachers present this claim as early as possible, and forward the moneys raised to the treasurer. We happen to know that some of our old battle-scarred veterans are greatly in need of money.

Arcadia District.

From a private letter from Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, of the Louisiana Conference, we make the following extract, which will be gratifying to lovers of our Zion everywhere:

The revival fire is still burning on the Arcadia district. Since my last report McClendon, on the Vernon circuit, has had glorious meetings; nearly fifty conversions and accessions. Hamil, on the Valley circuit, has had gracious meetings; a score or more conversions and accessions. Vienna, under Williams and son, has been led on to a gracious victory for Christ. Other meetings now in progress which will doubtless swell the song of triumph. We bless God and take courage.

The fruit product of California this year is unprecedented. Though the canneries are in full blast, only a small part of the crop can be thus secured. Immense quantities are being shipped for the East and for Europe. New York is the great Eastern depot. Ten, twenty, forty carloads in a day pour into that city. The Eastern trade began in 1867, when a few packages were sent by express, and at a loss. But the trade has grown with each year, when in a single day and by a single train 480 tons come to the markets of New York. Other cities, of course, share with New York, and shipments are made direct to London.

From now until Oct. 1 we will present a copy of Dr. Sawyer's book, "The World in the Church," to every new subscriber and also to every old subscriber who will renew for one year in advance, i. e., up to October, 1895. This work has been highly commended by our church papers and many of the leading men of Southern Methodism, including most, if not all, our Bishops. Here is an opportunity to get the book as a present for doing something which you ought to do anyway—subscribe for the ADVOCATE. This offer is made only to those who send cash with the order at the rate of $2 per annum.

We clip the following from the Nashville Advocate:

The farewell meeting in Batesville, Ark., on the eve of the departure of Miss Essie Case for mission work in Mexico, was an occasion of great interest. Miss Essie was reared in Batesville, and in the church which gave her a parting blessing. The assistant editor, who pens these lines, knew her when she was a guileless little girl, a lover of flowers, giving promise of sweetest womanhood. The promise has been redeemed, and the church has in her a consecrated, holy woman. Our church never sent to the foreign field a purer, lovelier character. May she have many stars in her crown of rejoicing!

Free Board at Centenary College.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes.

W. C. BLACK,
112 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College, Mayne College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $1 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We have known some preachers to spend thirty minutes commenting on Scripture before they designated their text, then preach an hour, and just at the time to dismiss the people turn in and talk a half hour longer. Such men should be spoken to. They damage the very cause they would serve. As a rule, all that is said in a public address after forty minutes have been consumed tends only to rub out all that has been put into the mind of the hearer up to that time. Ring on, Bro. He was an honor graduate of Princeton College. He married Miss Margaret Tutwiler, eldest child of Dr. Henry Tutwiler, of Green Springs, and was for some years co-principal of the celebrated school at that place. He entered the Confederate Army as captain, was badly wounded and taken prisoner, and made a romantic and hazardous escape from a moving train into Canada. He ran the blockade and went at once to Richmond and reported for duty, and served till the last day as lieutenant-colonel, with the rank of major at the close of the war. His scientific attainments were remarkable. The death of no citizen of Talladega could have been a greater blow to the community."—Alabama Advocate.

Are You Happy?

The man or woman who is profitably employed is generally happy. If you are not happy, it may be because you have not found your proper work. We earnestly urge all such persons to write to B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., and they can show you a work in which you can be happily and profitably employed.

From Rev. Irvin Miller.

Thanks to a kind Providence, I am almost restored to my usual health, after having been down to the gates of death almost, my life being despaired of both by my physicians and friends. By the advice of my physicians, I left home May 31, to visit and spend the Summer in Kentucky, my native State, and recruit my health, being under the treatment and supervision here of Dr. Evans, an old practitioner (who is a cousin of mine). My physician dismissed me several weeks ago, and I have been visiting around among my relatives and friends in the counties of Marion, Boyle, Washington, and Nelson, my health improving nicely all the time. I now weigh 175 pounds, which is a gain of 30 pounds since my arrival here. I think I will be restored to my usual health and strength, and will be able to labor in the cause of my Divine Master again in the humble sphere in which I move. I feel that my affliction and recovery have strengthened my faith and increased my desire to do good to my fellow-beings.

I am now visiting my relatives in and around Bardstown, where Bishop Galloway held a District Conference last Spring. Preacher and people were carried away with him, both in his preaching and presiding, as well as his social intercourse, and this was not confined to Methodists, but ministers and members of other denominations are loud in his praise. I must confess this makes me feel a little proud of our Mississippi Bishop. His visit here was a blessing to Protestantism as well as Methodism in this old town, where Catholicism is so strong. This portion of the State is suffering from a severe drouth, which, it is estimated, has already cut off the corn crop one half; the blue grass, and other pasturage, is drying up, and stock water getting scarce. I hear as much complaint of "hard times" here as in Mississippi.

Yours in Christ, IRVIN MILLER.

Contributions for Kobe Industrial School for Girls.

MR. EDITOR: Please report to all interested the following sums received by Mrs. M. I. Lambuth for the Kobe Industrial and Training School—viz.: From Mrs. Dr. E. E. Hoss, $3; Miss SueBancroft and Mrs. Clara C. Fant, Holly Springs, Miss., $10.

Will you add these sums to the amounts I sent you and as yet unreported in ADVOCATE—viz.: Miss Angie Patton, $1; Mr. S. S. Cope, $10.

If you will put this in a column with the amounts heretofore printed by you, the total ought to encourage other liberal givers. Yours in hope,
J. P. DRAKE.

MR EDITOR: The enclosed was written hastily, and may not be in exact shape to go into the ADVOCATE Our wish is to report distinctly in your paper, at least once each specific sum as received, and to keep the column open all the time as a reminder to the people to continue to give. By some mistake, and I suppose in your absence, the whole thing has dropped out the last few weeks. Would you not revive it, giving the total of amounts received up to last time it appeared and adding below the amounts as reported in this enclosure. Sister Lambuth is anxious to have this done, and it will be the best way of auditing accounts with our constituents. We will be so much obliged if you will attend to this for us.

I've continued to enjoy myself here, but miss your good company. I expect to return home Monday. If you say so, and I get time, will write for ADVOCATE some of my impressions of the trip and stay here, having reference to what you may give us next week. Yours cordially,
J. P. DRAKE.

Wanted.

BY A YOUNG PREACHER.

I want to attend Millsaps College three or four years, and in order to do so I must have the assurance of six or eight boarders at ten dollars per month. With these, by the strictest economy, I can make my way through.

I have small family, and can easily make ample arrangements to care for the stipulated number of boarders. I could enter the "traveling connection" now, so far as the requirements of an English education are concerned, but, knowing the present and future demands of the church for thoroughly cultured ministers, I am resolved, if possible, to finish a college course before entering the "ranks."

Should my case address itself to the Christian sentiment of any parents or guardians, they will please communicate with me. Brethren of the "cloth," do what you can for me, and if I live, 'twill not be lost.

To the Presiding Elders of Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South—

Dear Fathers and Brethren: I hereby tender you my sincere thanks for the favor you have bestowed upon me in selecting me as the beneficiary of the Peter James scholarship for the session of Millsaps College for 1894-5; and I assure you I will endeavor to prove myself worthy the confidence you have in my qualification for the same. Deafness Can Not Be Cured by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

PAINT cracks.—It often costs more to prepare a house for repainting that has been painted in the first place with cheap ready-mixed paints, than it would to have painted it twice with strictly pure white lead, ground in pure linseed oil, forms a permanent base for repainting and never has to be burned or scraped off on account of scaling or cracking. It is always smooth and clean. To be sure of getting strictly pure white lead, purchase any of the following brands:

Strictly Pure White Lead

Rev. G. W. Bachman, Durant, Miss., Sept. 1: "The great tent meeting conducted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh will close here to-morrow night after eleven days' continuance. The interest is intense and widespread. To date about ninety persons have registered for membership in the different churches, and dancing and card-playing have received death-blows. Never has there been such a religious awakening and uplifting in this town. Rev. A. W. Langley has been long and seriously sick with fever; but we hope the crisis is past, and that his valuable life will be spared to the church yet many years. Rev. B. F. Phillips is convalescing."

A TRUST SONG.

Better a smile than a sigh, dear,
Better a kiss than a frown;
Better a look toward the sky, dear,
Than always be looking down.

Better in time of trouble
A song of hope and cheer,
Than a heart that broods n'er sorrow,
And makes that sorrow dear.

The joys we find in to-day, dear,
Perhaps seem poor and small;
But better a little sun, dear,
Than to have no sun at all.

Then make the most of the present,
And its little joys, I say;
For what is here we have, dear,
But to-morrow is far away.

So look is my face and smile, dear,
And sing a cheerful song;
It never is worth our while, dear,
To help life's worries along.

We have love, and we have each other,
And God, who is kind and true,
And we'll hope for the best, and trust the rest
To him life's journey through.

A Young Man Should Remember

1. That, whatever else he may strive to be, he must, first of all, be absolutely honest. From honorable principle he can never swerve. A temporary success is often possible on what are not exactly dishonest, but "shady" lines; but such success is only temporary, with a certainty of permanent loss. The surest business successes—yes, the only successes worth the making—are built upon honest foundations. There can be no "blinking" at the truth or at honesty, no half-way compromise. There is but one way to be successful, and that is to be absolutely honest; and there is but one way to be honest. Honesty is not only the foundation, but the copestone as well, of business success.

2. He must be alert; alive to every opportunity. He can not afford to lose a single point, for a single point might prove the very link that would make complete the whole change of business success.

3. He must ever be willing to learn, never overlooking the fact that others have long ago forgotten what he has still to learn. Firmness of decision is an admirable trait in business. The young man whose opinions can be tossed from one side to the other is poor material. But youth is full of errors, and caution is a strong trait.

4. If he be wise, he will entirely avoid the use of liquors. If the question of harm done by intoxicating liquor is an open one, the question of actual good derived from it is not.

5. Let him remember that a young man's strongest recommendation is his respectability. Some young men, apparently successful, may be flashy in dress, loud in manner, and disrespectful of women and sacred things. But the young man who is respectable always wears best. The way a young man carries himself in private life ofttimes means much to him in his business career. No matter where he is, or in whose company, respectability and all that it implies will always command respect. And if any man wishes a set of rules even more concise, here it is:

Get into a business you like.
Devote yourself to it.
Be honest in everything.
Employ caution; think out a thing well before you enter upon it.
Sleep eight hours every night.
Do everything that means keeping in good health.
School yourself not to worry; worry kills, work doesn't.
Avoid liquors of all kinds.
And lastly, but not least, marry a true woman and have your own home.—Cosmopolitan.

Jesus in the Family.

When the child does wrong, kindly yet certainly tell him of it. His conscience will respond to your gentle, anxious words. Tell him that Jesus is grieved at the wrong, and waits to forgive. Put your hand on the little fluttering, angry heart, and say that it is wrong, and needs the Holy Spirit of God to calm it and fill it with love. Try to make Jesus one of your family. Try to speak of him so familiarly, yet always reverently in tone and expression, that the children will look upon him as one of you. He sits at the meals with you; always recognize the Heavenly Guest as being present. He mingles with you in the children's hour; if the play pass the bounds of good nature, be sure to ask if the Lord will not be grieved. Let evening prayer shut the door on frolic and fun, on romp, on shout, on mother's last note at the piano. Make the Guest of Cana's wedding a guest in the home of wedded happiness.

Then the family prayer itself should be vital. You may often with propriety call the children by name. The children will always start to listen when, in family prayer, we call anyone of them by name before God. They all listen when we tell the great Master what Mary and John have need of; what sort of a girl and boy we want them to be. But there is no end to vital prayers. The last word is as fresh as the first, if you talk to God of what you really want.

After all, it is the side-lights which parental behavior throws on religion that tell. Hear a parent say, "I suppose I must go to prayer meeting," instead of a joyful expression of pleasure that the hour is at hand. Hear a parent dissect the sermon with caustic criticism at the Sunday dinner, or speak disparagingly of ministers or fellow-Christians. To jest on sacred themes, to complain of one's lot, to suffer unheroically, to doubt God's providence in the hearing of his children, are the things which nullify the gospel. To be mean and penurious with money; to put off the tradesman's bill unpaid; to complain of the expensiveness of the church; to be unkind to the servants in the house—the children who see such things can swallow large doses of catechism and not show the effects of the medicine.—Christian Household Magazine.

Humor in the Family.

Good humor is rightly reckoned a most valuable aid to happy home life. An equally good and useful faculty is a sense of humor or the capacity to have a little fun along with the humdrum cares and work of life. We all know how it brightens up things generally to have a lively, witty companion, who sees the ridiculous points of things, and who can turn an annoyance into an occasion for laughter. It does a great deal better to laugh over some domestic mishaps than to cry or scold over them. Many homes and lives are dull because there are allowed to become too deeply impressed with a sense of the cares and responsibilities of life to recognize its bright and especially its mirthful side. Into such a household, good but dull, the advent of a witty, humorous friend is like sunshine on a cloudy day. While it is always oppressive to hear persons constantly striving to say witty or funny things, it is comfortable seeing what a brightener a little fun is, to make an effort to have some at home. It is well to turn off an impatient question sometimes, and regard it from a humorous point of view instead of becoming irritable about it. "Wife, what is the reason I can never find a clean shirt?" exclaimed a good, but rather impatient husband, after rummaging all through the wrong drawer. His wife looked at him steadily for a moment, half inclined to be provoked, then with a comical look, she said, "I never could guess conundrums; I give it up." Then he laughed, and she went and got his shirt, and he felt ashamed of himself and kissed her, and then she felt happy; and so what might have been an occasion for hard words and unkind feelings became just the contrary, all through the little vein of humor that cropped out to the surface. Some children have a peculiar faculty for giving a humorous turn to things when they are reproved. It does just as well sometimes to laugh things off as to scold them off. Laughter is better than tears. Let us have a little more of it at home.—Presbyterian Banner.

ADAM NEVER WAS A BOY.

Of all the men the world has seen
Since Time his rounds began,
There's one I pity every day—
Earth's first and foremost man;
And then I think what sin he missed
By failing to enjoy
The wild delights of youthtime, for
He never was a boy.

He never stubbed his naked toe
Against a root or stone;
He never with a pinhook fished
Along the brook alone;
He never sought the humblebee
Among the daisies coy,
Nor left its business end, because
He never was a boy.

He never hooky played, nor tied
The ever ready pail
Down in the alley all alone
To trusting Fido's tail;
And when he home from swimming came,
His happiness to cloy,
No slipper interfered, because
He never was a boy.

He never ont a kite string, no!
Nor hid an Easter egg;
He never ruined his pantaloons
A-playing mumble peg;
He never from the attic stole
A coon hunt to enjoy,
To find the "old man" watching, for
He never was a boy.

I pity him. Why should I not?
I even drop a tear;
He did not know how much he missed;
He never will, I fear.
And when the scenes of "other days"
My growing mind employ,
I think of him—earth's only man,
Who never was a boy.

Which Will You Choose, Boys?

I read of a boy who had a remarkable dream. He thought that the richest man in town came to him, and said: "I am tired of my house and grounds; come and take care of them, and I will give them to you." Then came an honored judge, and said: "I want you to take my place; I am weary of being in court day after day; I will give you my seat on the bench if you will do my work." Then the doctor proposed that he take his extensive practice and let him rest, and so on. At last upshambled old Tommy, and said, "I'm wanted to fill a drunkard's grave; I have come to see if you will take my place in these saloons and on these streets?"

This is a dream that is not all a dream. For every boy in this land to-day who lives to grow up, some position is waiting as surely as if the rich man, judge, doctor, or drunkard stood ready to hand over his place at once. Which will you choose, boys? There are pulpits to be filled by God-fearing ministers, and thousands of other honorable places; but there are also prison cells and drunkards' graves. Which will you choose?—Canada Presbyterian.

Facts for Boys.

The use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage not only ruins a man mentally, and uses up his money, but makes him much more liable to disease when there is an epidemic. It is said that "the great fever which swept through London a hundred years ago was fatal only to drunkards, and that during the yellow fever, which was in New Orleans about twenty-five years ago, five thousand drinking men had it before it touched those who used nothing that will intoxicate. The same story may be told about cholera. Ten thousand deaths from cholera in the British Isles, and not a half-dozen total abstainers in the number."

Another fact is, that a small amount of whisky given to a person who never drinks may save his life in time of sudden illness, when upon an habitual drunkard with the same illness it would have no effect. The only safe way is to resolve never to drink wine, beer, whisky, or any such thing, and keep the vow. It is evil, only evil, and that continually, when used as a beverage, "and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."—New York Advocate.

A Boy's Logic.

A boy astonished his Christian mother by asking her for a dollar to buy a share in a raffle for a silver watch that was to be raffled off in a beer saloon. His mother was horrified and rebuked him.

"But," said he, "mother, did you not bake a cake with a ring in it, to be raffled off in a Sunday-school fair?"

"Oh, my son," said she, "that was for the church."

"But if it was wrong," said the boy, "would doing it for the church make it right? Would it be right for me to steal money to put in the collection? And if it is right for the church, is it not right for me to get this watch if I can?"

The good woman was speechless, and no one can refute the boy's argument.—The New York Witness.

Idle Amusement.

The increase of games for the amusement of the family circle is not a good omen. They may be comparatively harmless and conducted in a manner that does not directly affect the character and morals of the players, but they become absorbing. As soon as the family circle is gathered, chess, chequers, parchesi, etc., is suggested and a group gather around the game. Books are forgotten, the piano is not opened, the work-box is left untouched, and precious hours are almost criminally wasted in idle amusement. Why not have family reading circles instead of family games? In the end they are more pleasing and infinitely more profitable.

Self-denial, that rare virtue that good men preach and good women practice.—O. W. Holmes.

IT GIVES WARNING that there's trouble ahead—if you're getting thin. It shows that your blood is impoverished, and your organs deranged, so that whatever you eat fails to properly nourish you. And just as long as you remain in this condition, Consumption, Pneumonia, and other Scrofulous and dangerous diseases are likely to fasten upon you.

You should build yourself up with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Purify and enrich the blood, rouse every organ into natural action, and build up healthy, wholesome, necessary flesh.

Ocean Port, N. J.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—We have used your "G.M.D." in our family and find nothing else to equal it. One of our children had the pneumonia, and one lung become consolidated, but by the use of the "Discovery" she has entirely recovered, and is now in good health.

It isn't "The Same As,"

and it isn't "as good as," no matter what any grocer may tell you about any imitation of Pearline He makes more money on it, of course—but do you want to ruin your clothes for his profit? Some of the imitations of Pearline are sold at a lower price, naturally. They ought to be cheaper, for they're not as good. Some of them are dangerous, and would be dear at any price. None of them is equal to Pearline, the original washing compound, which saves more work in washing and cleaning than anything else that doesn't do harm. Pearline is never peddled, and it offers no prize packages. Every package is a prize in itself. 574 JAMES PYLE, New York.

OBITUARIES.

HAMMITT—Robert Elisha Hammitt, son of Enoch and Jane Hammitt, was born in St. Marys county, Md., Jan. 1, 1812, and died at his residence, in Natchitoches parish, near Campti, La., July 19 1891. He came to Louisiana when twenty-two years of age, and after several removals finally settled permanently in Natchitoches parish. Fifty-two years ago, under the ministry of Rev. Newton C. Hammitt, he was happily converted and joined the M. E. Church South. Few laymen have been more highly esteemed and honored. He held official place in the church all his religious life, and proved true to every trust. He was honored with official position in his parish government for a large part of his life, and surrendered his trust a short time before his death without spot on his official character, and esteemed by all who knew him.

Robert E. Hammitt's name is a synonym for probity, his Christian life and character a model for the church, and his noble Christian charities the evidence of his love to God and his fellow-men. His house was the preachers' home and a refuge for the weary traveler. His hospitality was unbounded. He was greatly beloved.

He was twice married, and leaves a wife, five boys and four daughters. All of these are grown and married, and traveling "in the way their father trod" to a home beyond the skies. He is honored with forty-eight living grandchildren and one great-grandchild, all of whom have received a Christian training through the influence of his life and counsel.

Though dead, he yet lives to bless the church and community in his noble life and example. We laid him to rest within a few feet of the church he built, loved and honored. May his numerous descendants and friends so live as to meet him in heaven! R. S. Isbell.

Texas Advocate please copy.

SMITH—Mrs. Kate Smith, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Barrow, was born Feb. 20, 1867, and died July 3, 1894. Her disease was congestion. All that medical skill could do was done for her relief, but to no purpose, for our heavenly Father had a place for her on high.

She was so gentle and so affectionate that she had the good-will and love of all who knew her. She was a Christian. She joined the Salem Baptist Church on Aug. 9, 1891, when she was fifteen years old, and lived a member of that church until three years ago, when she joined the Methodist Church, as that was her husband's church. She was married to Mr. Wilson Smith, Dec. 24, 1890. Her little Bible was handed me a few days ago, and all through its pages showed that she loved it and read it, for verses of deep meaning were marked with her pencil. So close was her attention to the preaching of the gospel, that the margin of the leaves told when, where and by whom were the texts preached. Several papers came weekly to their home; but her Christian papers—the New Orleans Advocate and The Record—were hers to read first.

Bitter are the pangs of her husband's grief. Death has robbed her sweet little children of their mother's gentle, loving, but firm guidance. Father, mother and four fond brothers miss her coming and going. Dearly bereaved friends, look to Jesus for sustaining grace. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth."

We laid her to rest in Bluff Springs Cemetery, while we linger a little while longer to await our call to meet her beyond the skies.

A Friend.

MARTIN—Jennie Lee Richardson was born in Brandon, Rankin county, Miss., Jan. 11, 1858, and died at the same place, June 18, 1894, aged thirty-six years five months and two days. She was married to James Ed. Martin, Nov. 27, 1883, and was the mother of seven children, six of whom preceded her to the "better land." She leaves a husband, one sweet little boy and two affectionate sisters.

In early life she was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. Geo. F. Thompson. She was sick two months, and was never heard to complain or murmur. In her last hours she called her husband and relatives around her, and admonished them to meet her in heaven. She was a diligent worker in her Master's kingdom. She loved the service of God's house; her seat was never vacant unless providentially kept away. The church has lost one of its best members whose place can hardly be filled, the community one of its best citizens, and her family the best of counselors and friends. But why should we mourn her loss? In the future we shall meet to part no more.

A large concourse of friends and relatives followed her remains to the village cemetery, where she sleeps until the resurrection morn. We deeply sympathize with the bereaved ones, and pray that their great affliction may be sanctified to their eternal welfare, and that finally they may join their loved ones in that land where "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying." Husband and sisters, you are sad to-day, but think how happy she is. She is in heaven, and radiantly beautiful, where she will never suffer any more.

Eunice and Carrie Washburn,
Brandon, Miss.

CRIDDLE—At the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Fox, in Clinton, Miss., on June 24, 1894, Mrs. Emma J. Criddle fell on sleep. Since April 26 her sufferings had been acute and constant. All this she bore with such meekness and patience, it was a lesson to all about her.

She was the daughter of Jas. J. and Harriot Dunton Shirley; was born Dec. 26, 1850, in Clinton, Miss. Here she was reared, and was graduated from Central Female Institute—now Hillman College—July 1, 1869; was married Jan. 26, 1871, to Mr. J. A. Criddle.

It was the verdict of all who knew her: "A good girl, a good woman, a good wife, and such a dear, good mother." Early in life she was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, and the peace and grace of religion sweetened her character, sustained her through the trials of life, and were a rod and staff to comfort her at the last sad parting from her family. "Pray with me," she said to a loved one, and then came a great peace and tranquility till she passed away into eternal glory. Dear, patient, loved one, while our hearts break and tears flow at our great loss, yet for your sake we would not call you back.

To the stricken husband, two noble daughters, an aged mother, whose stay and comfort she was, we say: "Carry the image of her life, her gentle goodness, in the holy of holies of your hearts, and think of her now as in the realms of happiness, where you shall soon go to join her."

HOLBERT—Maude V. Hilly, eldest daughter of F. A. and Puella Hilly, was born in Claiborne parish, La., Sept. 19, 1868. At the age of nine years the writer witnessed her conversion—a clear, bright, joyous conversion—clearing away all sin and doubt and fear. From that day on her Christian character was kept untarnished; and though not always actively engaged in church work, her impress was everywhere seen for Christ. On May 12, 1885, she was married to Joel W. Holbert, a young lawyer of Homer, La., with whom she established a Christian household, in which she was rearing two beautiful children "in the way they should go." After a most painful illness of several weeks, on Aug. 4, 1894, she left her earthly sorrows for heavenly joys.

Her religion was not for exhibition. It was a rule of life, and brought forth its fruits at the critical moment. When she had reached the "ford of the river," and saw the crossing was near, she gave her young sister and children to the care of Mrs. Taylor—another sister—and whispered, as she entered the dark shadows of Jordan, "Though I walk through the valley and shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me"—and the waves lashed over her and choked her voice.

Many times I have heard Maude shout a chorus of praises with her saluted mother, but sighs succeeded these periods of praise. Now they sing together "with joy unspeakable and full of glory." Hymn No. 694. We'll meet them there. J. A. Parker.

GIBSON—Willie L. Gibson died Dec. 6, 1893, aged twenty years. Willie possessed one of nature's grandest gifts, a sunny disposition—one that never failed to find the silver lining to every cloud. He was ambitious, as was proven by his unceasing efforts to acquire an education. He left Silver Creek, Miss., his home, in September, to enter the Medical College at Louisville, Ky. He left with cherished plans and bright prospects for the future, and we believe that, in all truth and earnestness, he strove to keep the promise made his mother at parting, "I will try to be a man." Oh! how little we dreamed when we saw him leave, that golden September morning that in three short months the death angel would come for our loved one, and his body would be sent back to us a cold and lifeless corpse! How handsome and strong he looked just in the morning of life when all things seemed brightest and fairest! Indeed, it was hard to realize when we looked on that still form and pallid brow, beautiful even in death, that it was the same manly boy that left us such a short time before, and our hearts went out in loving sympathy to the grief-stricken family as we breathed our last farewell over the remains of dear Willie Gibson.

To the bereaved relatives and friends we would say: Weep not. "Just beyond the walls of jasper" Willie is waiting to welcome you home. A Friend.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. The great object for which the church exists is to save souls. This is old; but thousands of church members have lost sight of it.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. Chas. Hemmes,

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Another councilman was indicted by the Grand Jury, in this city, last week.

Following the settlement of the Tariff bill by Congress and the arbitration of local labor troubles, a substantial industrial revival has begun in North Alabama. Nearly all the mines are again in operation, and many are daily increasing their output.

The Leona river, swollen to a raging torrent, rushed down upon the town of Uvalde, Texas, on Aug. 31, submerging and wrecking many houses and drowning a number of people. A good many lives were lost. Owing to the flood, the Southern Pacific railroad suffered a loss of forty miles of its track, amounting to $1,250,000.

Minnesota has been terribly scourged by forest fires. Six towns were wiped out and hundreds of dead is the record made by the fires in that State in twenty-four hours. Hinckley suffered most, and it is thought the list of the dead in that town will exceed 500. Relief has been coming in to the stricken section as fast as it can be sent.

The city of Chicago is engaged in the construction of a drainage canal from Lake Michigan to the Illinois river, which latter stream empties into the Mississippi, not far above St. Louis. It is proposed to make this a navigable waterway between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi river, large enough to permit the passage of considerable vessels between the Northern lakes and the Gulf of Mexico.

Chattanooga has been fixed upon by the location committee of the International Union of the Epworth League as the place for the next international conference, June, 1895. Dr. S. A. Steel, secretary of the national body, has officially announced the decision, and negotiations are already making to secure tents for 10,000 visitors. This is the largest national religious body that has ever met in the South, and a large guarantee fund was raised and enthusiastic public meetings were held advocating Chattanooga's claims.

With but little care and no trouble the beard and mustache can be kept a uniform brown or black color by using Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers.

Secretary Carlisle appears disposed to take a very radical view of the provisions of the new Tariff law, as far as bounty payments are concerned. Not only does he hold that the licenses issued to producers to manufacture sugar during 1894 do not entitle the growers to bounty on sugar produced under such license, but he has further ruled that the law directly forbids the payment of bounty on sugars actually manufactured, inspected and weighed prior to the date on which the law took effect, on which the bounty had not actually been paid, although the claims had been approved.

Cured with One Bottle.

Mr. Jordon Baker, Tifton, Ga., had muscular rheumatism for ten years. After using a bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, he wrote to the manufacturers that he was satisfied he would be cured by the time the bottle would be used up. If you want satisfaction, insist on having Drummond's Lightning Remedy. Nothing can take its place. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and two large bottles of the remedy will be sent to your express address. Agents wanted.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHERNS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

ABIDING IN CHRIST.

(John xv, 4, 5, 10; I. John ii, 27.)

1. Our Master requires constancy in his followers. No vacillation.

(1) Built on a rock—not on the sand. Can smile at Satan's rage. Firmly established.

(2) The apostle suggests the necessity of the heart being established. The poet prays: "I want a principle within."

(3) Though we are a revival church, and insist on holding periodical revivals, we battle at the same time against periodical backsliding. Think of the "foolish virgins."

2. Our text indicates the source from which Christian constancy is derived. We abide in him.

(1) Christ is the true vine. Rooted in infinite love. Pregnant with life. His precious blood has not lost its power.

(2) We are the branches. No life of our own. "I live, yet not I." Spiritual life is a divine infusion. By faith are we saved through grace. Wesley well said,

"I the chief of sinners am,
But Jesus died for me."

(3) Separation from the vine will result in the death of the branches. Not being prayerfully connected with Christ, we are devoid of spirituality.

3. In the tenth verse, first text, Christ makes a practical application of the above figure of vine and branches: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love," etc.

(1) Abide in his love—have a constant consciousness of his favor. Exultingly declare: "He loved me, and gave himself for me."

(2) Not occasional elations, but obedience constitutes the miraculous leverage which raises us "to the rock that is higher than I." Complying with Christ's behests is tantamount to abiding in him. Keep his commandments—one and all, great and small. Keep his commandments constantly, conscientiously. Heed what Samuel said to wayward Saul: "To obey is better than sacrifice."

LOOK UPWARD.

BY MARY ELIZABETH CLOUD.

Do not fold the hands in sorrow,
Ever fearing that to-morrow
Will be darker than to-day.
Look to Jesus! He is near thee;
Not another so can cheer thee;
At his feet thy burden lay.

Do not worry! Nay, upwinging
With the lark, be ever singing;
For such song thy heart was made.
Sing not only in the sunlight;
There were two who once at midnight
In the dungeon sang and prayed.

In thy hand God's blest Word taking,
Seek some heart that's near to breaking;
Tell it what I tell to thee.
Through its tears 'twill greet thee, smiling,
Strengthened by thy sweet beguiling,
And thy heart will lighter be.

Weep not that thy lamp is wasted
Ere such joy thy heart hath tasted.
Up! up! 'tis not yet too late.
Just around thee souls are dying;
Save them, while the hours are flying,
Through the open western gate!

Work for God, and do it quickly!
Deeds of blessing scatter thickly
Over all the waiting land;
Work in gladness or in sorrow;
Ever work; some blest to-morrow
With the reapers thou shalt stand.

Nashville Notes.

BY W. M. LEFTWICH.

Paul was a little in doubt at one time, not knowing whether he was in the body or out of the body. It is not surprising, therefore, if we, about the "Hub," should be a little perplexed, not knowing whether we are in "orders," or only in "office." It is fortunate that the dust of doubt only covers those who are in "office," as well as in "orders," otherwise we would have confusion worse confounded in the wordy and windy discussion of the subject in the church papers. I suppose that the "rim" is in such rapid movement that you never stop long enough to make distinctions between tweedledum and tweedledee. You are fortunate, as distinctions, like comparisons, are sometime invidious. If you will pardon a Philistine expression, "Where are we at any way?"

Whatever may be the merits of the discussion, one thing may be safely assumed, that there are some who are in "orders" who would like to be in "office" also. If the discussion of the subject should induce preachers and people to read carefully Dr. Tigert's "Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism," they will be fully satisfied on the subject before they are through with it. They will not only see the development of constitutional law, but the where, the how and the when of the introduction of nearly every distinctive feature of Methodist polity. After reading this able work, I am perfectly willing to accept the statements and conclusions so ably put by the editor of the connectional organ, the Nashville Christian Advocate, and go on calling sinners to repentance and building up the church in the most holy faith of the gospel. This is the important thing now before us.

The pastors of our city churches are all at their posts and their work, none having gone off for a vacation, except Dr. Young, who is traveling in Europe for his health. His pulpit—Carroll Street—has been ably filled by his assistant, Bro. Brooks. The Doctor expects to reach home by September 15. During the Winter and Spring we had notable revivals in some of the leading churches, which added largely to our church membership. But our numbers are diminished during the Summer by removal. Students who complete their courses in our schools, colleges and universities return to their homes, or go into other sections of the country to teach or preach. We furnish many teachers to the schools of the country from Nashville. The removals from West End Church during the Summer would make quite a strong church if they were all together in one place. This causes our membership to fluctuate and renders regular church work at this season unsatisfactory. Besides, a great many of our best people go into the mountains for the Summer and suspend active work for several months. The members of West End Church who have summered at Monteagle alone this season would make a fine congregation, while the can't-get-aways can do but little more than "hold the fort." In our sixteen pastoral charges in and about Nashville, and the eight or ten chapels and preaching-places in the city mission besides, the Gospel Tabernacle and the Gospel Wagon, we are trying to preach the gospel to every creature, and thus meet our obligations to this people. Other denominations are doing their part well, and some of them are quite strong in this city. Besides, we have a multitude of benevolent and Christian organizations that use halls, tents, private dwellings and churches in which to carry on their work.

We are just now having a regular camp meeting, with cloth tents to live in, surrounding a large cloth tabernacle for public service in the heart of the city, on one of the most popular avennes, conducted by "The Seventh-day Adventists." They ring their rising bell at 5 A. M. Prayers at 5:30; breakfast at 7; prayers in tents at 8; business meeting at 9; religious service at 10:30; dinner at 1 P. M. Religious service at 2:30; business meeting at 5; religious service at 7:30; retiring bell at 9:15; silence bell at 9:30. This in a city of churches. But the novelty of it draws many people who are not drawn to the churches, while the earnestness, zeal and devotion of those conducting it catch some who go to churches, and a few who belong to the churches, but who are carried away by their strange doctrines and strange methods. They make a plausible argument in favor of the seventh day of the week for the Sabbath, instead of the first day, while there always has been, and always will be, people who are easily moved by the doctrine of the second coming of Christ. These people are here as missionaries to evangelize the city.

Our schools, colleges and universities will soon open, and again be crowded with young people from every section of the country seeking an education. According to the expectations of those who have these institutions in charge, the hard times will not affect the attendance, but they will all be full to the brim. Vanderbilt, Price's, Belmont, Ward's, Peabody, Boscobel, Clark's, East Side, and all the rest, will be crowded to their largest capacity. These schools bring to Nashville not less than one million dollars annually, and send away many times more than value received in developed intellect, character and qualification for a higher Christian citizenship. Money judiciously invested in education and character is never lost. The failure of crops, manufactures, banks and business can not reach that investment. It is absolutely safe.

As I said in another paper, the recent improvements in the Publishing House on the second floor, by which each connectional officer has his own separate room, will greatly economize the disappointment of visitors. The visitor can see each giraffe in his own stall without seeing the whole menagerie. It is still true that "distance lends enchantment" which a nearer approach sometimes dissolves. The visitor will not experience such a shock of disappointment when he only sees one at a time. Economy in disappointment is sometimes worth more than economy in money. The connectional officers are now preparing their reports and making ready for the Fall Conferences. They have all been doing faithful work this Summer, sticking close to the work assigned them; but many of them will soon be on the move, following up the Conference and seeking closer contract with the church. Dr. Kirkland, Sunday-school Editor, has not yet moved to Nashville, but is expected next week. He will occupy the "Bishop's House" on the Vanderbilt campus with his bachelor brother, who is chancellor of the University. That is an admirable arrangement for all parties. Dr. Cunnyngham has spent the Summer at Monteagle working on the Sunday-school literature as aforetime. It is expected that he will continue in the office in some capacity for which he is so well fitted by scholarship and long experience. I am credibly informed that the Epworth Era, the new organ of the Epworth League, edited by Dr. Steel, is making a good start. The subscription list is sufficient to justify the issuing of the Era weekly from the first of September. It is a sprightly paper, and gives promise of large usefulness and long life. So may it be!

Life is made up not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindnesses and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart, and secure comfort.—Sir H. Davy.

Conference Missionary Secretaries.

Chapter XI., Section 1, ¶ 358, and Art. XIX, of the revised Discipline reads as follows: "Any Annual Conference Board of Missions may, with the consent of the president of the Conference, employ a secretary to travel in its bounds, in the interests of its own missions, and the work of the General Board; provided, that two or more Conference Boards may unite in the employment of a secretary whenever they deem it advisable, and have one general secretary for the Conferences so uniting."

Without laying claim to an extensive reading of our church papers, I will state that, so far as I know, I was the first to suggest this plan in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE of last year; and that after the publication of my article on this subject, I did, at the request of Dr. W. R. Lambuth, submit this method of missionary work in the Conferences to him. The plan of operation, as enacted by the General Conference, is not as comprehensive as I suggested, nor as I believe it will be made by the next General Conference. I think the present plan defective at three vital points.

1. There is an almost fatal absence of any suggestion, authoritative or advisory, by which to effect an intelligent federation of Annual Conferences in this work. There are few, if any, Conferences in the connection that can afford the expense of a secretary, and there is no provision in law, except the may without the how, for an understanding between the Conferences. If contiguous Conferences were in session at the same time, they might agree upon the federation, and leave the appointment to the presiding Bishop; but as the law now is, the act of federation will be a difficult one, and the securing of the right man may be more so, as he may be so placed in his own Conference as to cause his change to another appointment next to impossible. It seems to me it would have been a wise thing for the General Conference to have given the Bishop authority to divide the church into missionary districts, and then let the Annual Conferences select and ask for the man to fill the office, subject to episcopal appointment.

2. The next objection is to the term of the appointment. Neither the Conferences nor the Bishops should treat this appointment as a pocket in which to place some man otherwise hard to dispose of. The very best man in the federated Conferences should be selected, and he should be made to feel that his appointment was for a sufficient length of time to enable him to develop and strengthen his work. His will be a hard and a most difficult work, and yet, if he is wise and forceful in the presentation and execution of it, I am sure the results will be most gratifying.

3. These district or federated Conference secretaries should have been made the clerical members of the General Board. If they did the work assigned to them, they would have to understand the conditions and the needs of our mission fields, and, coming fresh from the people, they could best represent all sides of the question of missions.

These were my original views on this subject, and I now have strong hopes that the near future shall experience their more perfect development and application. But the question before us is, How shall we develop and utilize what we have? I believe there is much in it to the church at home and in our mission fields. The lack of information among our people on this subject, and of a more vigorous effort to secure funds for the cause of missions, is not attributable to a want of interest on the part of our preachers. They understand and appreciate the fact that this is the great heart-throb of life. But they are so pressed with the varied duties of the preacher and pastor, and the other agencies placed upon them, they have no time for the development of plans for the accomplishment of the desired end. If there is a hard-worked and over-worked class of men among us, it is our faithful pastors. They need and must have help, and I believe this action of the late General Conference is in the right direction to aid them and to develop the church. But how shall we take hold of it? I suggest that the Mississippi, North Mississippi and the Louisiana Conferences form themselves into a missionary district, and that the secretaries of the different Boards correspond, and then lay their agreed plans before their respective Conferences at their next session. Will not others write on this subject?

The Waifs' Home.

This institution, located in the city of New Orleans, is of recent origin, but we learn is in a high state of prosperity, is accomplishing much good, and that its future is very bright. Rev. A. E. Clay and his good wife seem peculiarly and happily adapted to this work. The thoroughly philanthropic feature of the enterprise is highly commendable, and the existence of such systematic beneficence is indispensable in a large city at least. As true Christianity and intelligence advance, we may reasonably expect more, and yet more, of their fruits manifested in the alleviation of suffering humanity. I believe that in the near future the indigent, suffering and cruelly treated will be protected and provided for almost without exception. Not only so, but I believe we shall soon have an adequate law for the prevention of cruelty to animals. I believe there is much sin committed in cruelty to dumb brutes. It is no Christian to overwork, or otherwise cruelly treat them, notwithstanding I have known ministers who were guilty. But pardon this digression. True Christianity ameliorates, elevates and fills man's heart with love to God and man. Without the ministry of the Word and the influence of Christianity there would be no true charity, and the waifs would be passed by unnoticed and unprotected.

It was my privilege recently to hear a lecture by Bro. Clay, in this place, in the interest of the Waifs' Home, and I must say that I was surprised beyond measure at some of his utterances. I will, with your permission, publish one. In laboring to convince his mixed audience of the importance of his work, he said that the "twenty years that he spent in preaching was that much time lost." Now, he has said it, and what are we to understand by it? I can understand that he either meant that his commission was not from God, and was consequently unfruitful, or that the Lord called him to preach, but made a mistake, and that he had entered the path of duty through his own better judgment. I have not a word to say against Bro. Clay's work. It is a much-needed work; but it rests absolutely upon the solid foundation of Christianity. My feeling on the subject of preaching is as different as possible from Bro. Clay's. I was deeply impressed to preach when I was a boy, and deferred the matter nineteen years. Nineteen years have passed since I entered the ministry, and never while I live will I cease to regret that I lost nineteen years of precious time by not obeying the call in early life. Let the Waifs' Home exist by all means. It shall have my sympathy and aid; but pray do not touch its foundation lest it fall.

A PRECIOUS PROMISE.

"Say ye to the righteous, that it shall be well with him."—Isa. iii, 10.

(L. M. Tune Windham.)

Dedicated to Rev. J. A. B. Jones.

BY THE AUTHOR, REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT, D. D.

When sinks my soul with grief and fear,
A voice proclaims with gladd'ning swell,
Sweet words my spirit bounds to hear:
It shall be with the righteous well.

See! o'er the earth, in want and pain,
Burdened and wronged, God's children dwell;
Their loss shall bring eternal gain;
It shall be with the righteous well.

O blissful thought to those who weep,
When tolls the woe-tongued funeral bell;
Our God has said of those who sleep,
It shall be with the righteous well.

Mine eyes, behold with glad surprise,
Here's heavenly light where darkness fell;
My fainting soul, with strength arise;
It shall be with the righteous well.

Then be my lot or high or low,
My home a palace or a cell,
I must be joyous since I know
It shall be with the righteous well.

O precious words of priceless worth,
Of endless peace their accents tell;
When we have passed the strifes of earth,
It shall be with the righteous well.

A Great Meeting at Durant.

For a few days this week I attended the meeting at Durant, Miss. The people got ready for it. They came together, united, were of one heart and soul, and were of one accord in one place. This is the prime condition for a great work of grace. So it was in apostolic times, and so it is now.

The coming of the evangelist, Rev. W. M. McIntosh, was preceded by four days of earnest service and devout praying for the Holy Ghost. When he got on the ground he perceived that the people had been baptized by the Spirit preparatory to the work—a desideratum without which no successful revival work can be done. The meeting had been well ventilated, and high hopes and large expectations were excited. This put the people in an expectant attitude. The people had been led to "appreciate the evangelist very highly in love for his work's sake"—an advantage of great value to the preacher of the gospel, and an item not understood nor appreciated by the people as it should be.

All the moral and religious forces in Durant, and for twenty miles in all directions, had concentrated and combined on that meeting. It was a meeting for all the churches in Durant, and for all in the regions round-about. This is no small item. The reputation of the evangelist as a specialist gave him grace and favor in the eyes of all the people. Expectation stood on tiptoe, and looked for something to be done. All eyes and ears were open, and all hearts in a receptive attitude.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh is a devout Christian and an earnest, zealous, fiery preacher of the gospel. He is a man of faith and prayer. He fully believes that God is going to honor his Word as preached by him and by others. When he preaches he commands attention, and when he listens he stimulates the preacher. His style is mainly hortatory, discursive, insistent, urgent. He makes one feel like it is instant action or immediate damnation. So far as personal salvation from sin is concerned, he knows no to-morrow. It is now or never.

I have never known any man who so powerfully influenced men to immediate, prompt, and decisive action. He charges the will, however stubborn it may be, and carries it by storm. As he understands matters, the great trouble of men is in their hearts, and not in their heads, and so he charges the heart at once without wasting time flinging hand-grenades of reason at their heads. He is as effective and as efficient in putting the church to work as in leading men to Christ. It is action, action, action, all the time, everywhere, and by everybody.

In this meeting Bro. McIntosh had the help and hearty support of the Methodist and Baptist pastors of the town. The pastor of the Presbyterian Church was in Virginia.

Rev. J. A. Leech, Rev. L. D. Worsham and Rev. J. H. Mitchell preached the Word in demonstration of the Spirit, and it was attended by the power of God.

I have been in many meetings where the crowds were larger, the convictions as many, and, apparently, deeper, and the conversions brighter, if brightness be estimated by shouting, but, if estimated by prompt and clear testimony and zealous work for the salvation of others, as bright as any. Many old feuds of long standing were settled, and some smaller stews were amicably adjusted.

Taken all in all, it was a great work of grace, and will be long remembered. It will be an event and an era in the history of Durant. Many things will date from the great revival.

GILDEROY.

East Mississippi Female College.

"From going to and fro in the earth" in the interest of East Mississippi Female College, I come at last to the point where a ball must be called. Three months of travel, not of rest, must suffice for one year, and we must turn attention to immediate preparation to receive the daughters of those who may honor us by trusting them to our care. We are not unmindful of the many courtesies shown us, both in public and private, as we have represented the claims of the institution over which we have the charge. To my brethren of the ministry I am doubly grateful for their interest manifested in me and my work.

Oh, how I wish it were in my power to open our doors free of all charge to the daughters of the parsonages of the Mississippi Conference! To support a family on a $300 or $400 salary leaves nothing for the education of sons and daughters. Millsaps has largely settled the question as to boys; will not some one do as well for the girls?

While we have been on the wing our Committee on Improvements has not been idle. Bro. Peebles would not recognize our surroundings now. The objectionable buildings have been removed; our grounds graded preparatory to the recreation of our pupils. The carpenters, tinners, glaziers and painters have added greatly to our comfort and appearance. Nearly every mail brings us letters of inquiry and demands for catalogues.

Though at a distance, our teachers seem to have caught the enthusiasm, and all have written expressing their readiness for the work.

Within the roll of furniture and the sound of tack-hammer indicate the spirit which possesses our matron. With all needed supplies in place, we are ready for a successful and pleasant year's work at East Mississippi.

Our terms are as low, or lower, than any school of equal grade in the State. This advantage is given us because of the loyalty of the citizens of Meridian to the institution. With half a chance we believe that East Mississippi Female College can be made the equal of any in the land.

Young ladies coming to us over the Vicksburg and Meridian road will be met in Jackson, and come over on the 6 P. M. train, Tuesday, Sept. 11.

In the Living Present.

Robert Ingersoll has published a pamphlet whose title is "Suicide Not Sinful." No wonder. Unbelief leads irresistibly to that conclusion. If there is no conscious life beyond the grave, then the present life is not worth living. In Central Park, New York, a young Israelite committed suicide. In one of the pockets of the self-destroyer a copy of said pamphlet was found.

Gladstone—"the grand old man"—has given $6,000 to the Irish agitation fund. He may have given similar amounts before, but this time it became public. At the same time the Archbishop of Canada has asked the faithful in all Roman Catholic Churches to contribute liberally to the same fund. It would thus appear that the epithet "grand" attached to the old man's name is a species of quid pro quo. Gladstone's fondling of the Fenians reminds us of Jacob's double dealing. The hand was Esau's hand, but the voice was that of Jacob. Gladstone pretends to be a Protestant, but his actions strangely favor Rome.

Pullman, now part of Chicago, was considered a model town. Plan and construction excellent. Architectural beauty everywhere. No eye-sores. Everything perfect. But residence proved a failure nevertheless. The cause is apparent. The corporation owns the town. The workmen were not permitted to purchase and own homes. The moral is plain. Ownership of home secures good citizenship. Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home—if you own it in fee simple.

The Salvation Army has purchased in Mexico 200,000 acres of land for the purpose of colonizing them with 5,000 indigent families. But a similar enterprise in the same country—Bellamy—failed. It sounds so benevolent thus to provide for the poor. But are not the majority of the indigent shiftless and lazy? You set them up for themselves. But to stay up you have to keep them up.

In Antwerp the Peace Congress is in session. It designs to prevent further war. Arbitration is to settle all national and international trouble. "But," says Mephistopheles in Faust, "of ashy hue is all theory." When the passions clamor, reason raises its voice in vain.

When in England a few weeks ago, Emperor William II. of Germany paid a visit to Ex-Empress Eugenie, wife of Napoleon III. To save the feelings of the lady, he did not wear the uniform of the victors of Sedan, but that of an English colonel. It was feared that the French would look upon this visit as a menace to republicanism. But that fear was unfounded. The French press even praise the Emperor for comforting the desolate widow and bereaved mother. ICH DIEN.

"SOME DAY."

BY FANNIE CROSBY.

Some day my earthly house will fall,
I can not tell how soon 'twill be,
But this I know—my all in all
Has now in heaven a place for me,
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Some day the silver cord will break,
And I no more as now shall sing;
But, oh! the joy when I shall wake
Within the palace of the King,
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace!

Some day, when fades the golden sun
Beneath the hazy-tinted west,
My blessed Lord shall say, "Well done,"
And I shall enter into rest,
And I shall see him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Some day: till then I'll watch and wait,
My lamp all trimmed and burning bright,
That when the Savior opes the gate,
My soul to him may wing its flight,
And I may see him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

That Neglected District.

Bro. S. S. Keener, in animadverting upon a resolution passed at the Opelousas District Conference calling attention to the small appropriations from church extension for building churches in Southern Louisiana, merits correction (1) when he confounds the appropriations of a former period, when he was the influential presiding elder, with those of the present; (2) when he makes the liberal gift to one costly church within the bounds of the district to represent munificence to the whole field; (3) when he supposes the present status of the Opelousas district being rapidly filled with Northern immigration, and heavily subsidized with Northern Methodist Church extension money, with the sparer period of a decade ago, sans railroads, sans immigration, sans enterprise; (4) when he contrasts the Opelousas district with its growing cities, and wealth of population, and dearth of churches, whole parishes within its boundaries being as destitute of preaching-places as the movers of this resolution of an evil or rebellious motive with other districts where no such state of things exists; (5) when he supposes some invidious reflection against former presiding elders to have been intended, when he ought to know that by this time his name is rarely heard or thought of in this connection; (6) when he charges the present presiding elder of the district with railroading a resolution against himself as president of the Board of Church Extension; (7) and when he accuses Bros. Drake and Sanders of sinister motives of another kind—Bro. Drake's name to the resolution being, doubtless, due to the fact that he was secretary of the Conference, and Bro. Sanders to a request to sign by some one, he, perhaps, having given little thought to the subject.

If Bro. Keener will take the church extension map, which is sent out by our wide-awake and capable General Secretary, and run his eye over the list of red crosses which represent aid given by our General Board to church building within our boundaries, he will discover that the carnation lines are so rare in Southwest Louisiana as that the fact could not well escape painful attention to those more deeply interested in the subject than himself amid changed surroundings. To the District Conference the presiding elder explained that the policy of the Board compelled greater liberality to the churches contributing most to the fund, but to no effect, since the resolution was aimed not so much against the practice as against the policy of the Board, or its missionary plan of procedure.

Finally, Bro. Keener may have overlooked the fact in estimating the large gifts to New Iberia and Crowley when he was presiding elder of the district, that within the last five or six years representing our time of greatest need, if not our period of crisis, that the district has received only the smallest pittance from either Board. If the writer is satisfied of anything in connection with his recent ministerial life, it is that he has said or done nothing to sully his record as a warm advocate of church extension in Louisiana.

J. M. BEARD.

A Lost Opportunity.

Forty-five years ago a noble young man, who had felt the "woe is me if I preach not the gospel," was at a Northern college preparing to enter the ministry and was nearing the close of the last session. A spell of long fever prostrated him for a while, and when he recovered a longing desire to visit his relatives in a famed Southern city possessed his soul, and he gave up to it instead of joining the Conference and accepting an appointment, as his brother (who was a member) had advised him to do. He promised his brother that he would return and join the same Conference with him or remain in the South and join some of the Southern Conferences, as his mother and family were Southern Methodists. After attending the Conference that was in session at the city where his brother was stationed, he stayed to see his brother off to his new field of labor, and, when bidding him "good-bye," with several other preachers in company, Old Father H. said, "Why, Paul, are you not going with us?" "Not now," said P., "I am going down to ——— first, and am waiting for a boat." "Ah, Paul; you will find it a hard road to heaven via ———. You had better turn and go with your brother this year. That city you are going to is a byway towards hell."

But the young man did not see it in that light, thinking a visit to his friends would brace up his failing energy and give him new strength to carry out his cherished plans to be a messenger of peace to troubled souls, so he went to his destination. But when he was once away from the influences that had surrounded him in his college life he, unsuspectingly and gradually, was led away from the strict path of duty by worldly companions whom he met in the fashionable circle in which he was sometimes thrown; and, with a natural inclination to enjoy "the pleasure of the world for a season," he fell from grace and wandered far from the loving Shepherd who had said to him in the years agone, "Feed my sheep." Although he did not lose his love of the church of his father's and mother's family, or ever become alienated from God's people, yet he lost the spirit of religion for awhile and often walked with the ungodly, and "was like the chaff which the wind driveth away." But his early environments and his mother's prayers saved him from utter ruin, and in his matured manhood and later years he has been an humble follower of Jesus, but has never enjoyed the peace of mind he might have had if he had listened to the call of his Master in the time of his opportunity.

In a letter to a friend this writer saw he said: "It seems that old Father H. was a prophet inspired of God when he gave me that advice, for I have found it just as he said it would be, and that was the one time and opportunity of my life in which I might have been a power in the earth against sin and wickedness; but I let it slip from my grasp, and ever since then I have been drifting and eddying about the world and down the stream of life at the mercy of every stumbling-block in my way, miserably pursuing a business that I always hated and had no talent for, with a lion or a devil forever in my path to turn me out of the strait and narrow way, not even chained like Bunyan's. Yet I am learning to become as a little child, which is true wisdom, and hope to make my election sure, through the mercy of Our Father who pities us when we are weak; but oh, that lost opportunity!"

MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

Sanctification and Other Things.

Permit me, through the ADVOCATE, to express my grateful thanks to our good brother, "Glideroy," for the masterly manner in which he so completely squelches the Rev. T. L. Meilen in his reply to the intemperate arraignment of the General Conference for its action in passing the character and administration of Bishop Hargrove, contained in a recent issue of your excellent paper. Had I been in the Bishop's place, I would not only have suspended the political preacher, but would have degraded him from the ministry of the Methodist Church! Whenever a Methodist preacher gets to dabbling in modern politics, it is time for him to quit; and the rule applies with equal force to his clerical defenders.

I also feel truly grateful to Bro. Walker for his quiet, dignified, Christian and unanswerable exposition of the fallacy of the modern "sanctification" theory. There is not a line or word in the Bible which justifies the assumption that its Author recognizes any difference between regeneration and sanctification. The terms are synonomous, wherever used in God's Word. Sanctification, or the being set apart for the service of Jehovah, theologically considered, is the normal condition of every true child of God; and this state is as truly enjoyed by the converted or regenerated sinner as by the most eloquent and blatant expounders of the "second-blessing" theory, and, in thousands of cases, infinitely more so!

The trouble with a large percentage of these sanctified people is found in the fact that their heads have been converted, while their hearts remain untouched by the melting power of the Holy Spirit—a state of affairs which, unless corrected, will result disastrously in the "day of final accounts."

But there are a thousand arguments against the theory, and not one that commends itself to common sense in its favor. That there are many who are honest in their convictions in this regard, and that live in the enjoyment of God's love to a larger extent than the average Christian, is, doubtless, true; but, unfortunately, the larger element are not of this class.

Painful to say, the disease is growing, and unless we have a revival of the humble religion of the Bible and primitive Methodism, it will result in great harm to our beloved church.

Trichinopoly—South India.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strand,
Where Afric's sunny fountains
Pour down their golden sands,
From many an ancient river,
From many a palmy plain,
They call us to deliver
Their land from error's chain."

The author of the famous missionary hymn which begins thus was drowned and lies buried at Trichinopoly. Behind a rather large building, now used as a judge's court, runs a straight stream. Between the house and the stream is a large well. Though all are in disuse at present, I judged that the arrangement was such as to supply the well with water from the stream in the dry season. The device for drawing the water out of the well is that so common in India, of bullocks attached to one end of a rope, and, by walking down an incline, drawing up the great bucket, or huge leather sack, fastened at the other end. The water here is let from the bucket into an imbedded trough, which conducts it to the bath. The bath is made of granite and white cement, embedded in the open courtyard. The dimensions, according to guess, are 18 feet long, 10 feet wide, and 7 feet deep. It has some ornamentation. Five steps lead down to the floor, and on a slab above is the following inscription: "In memory of the devoted, accomplished, beloved and universally honored servant of God, Reginald Heber, D. D., second Bishop of Calcutta, and one of India's truest and most loving benefactors, this stone was erected in the year 1882, at the expense of the government, on the margin of the bath in which he was drowned while bathing on the third of April, 1826. His body was laid under the chancel in the Church of St. John, Trichinopoly, in the hope of the resurrection of the just to eternal life through Jesus Christ."

The Mohammedan dome shows itself more conspicuously in Trichinopoly than in the places further south, but Hindoo shrines prevail. One of these is built very curiously and finely on the sides and top of a high rock. The view is very fine, looking from the top over the city, with its old palace grounds, modern churches and public buildings, its hovels and shops, in which are manufactured silver trinkets and cigars, that are famous all over India. The place on the rock was pointed out whence once, in the press of the multitudes, scores were pushed off the beetling precipice and dashed to pieces on the rocks and rough ground far below.

But the most interesting temple is about two miles distant, on an island formed by the rivers that have their confluence near the city. The temple enclosure is so huge that inside there are, as in other temples, a great bazaar, the homes of hundreds of Brahmans and the haunts of numerous beggars. You can get a score of guides, if you wish them; and, without your asking, perhaps two or three will attach themselves to you self-appointed. Quickly the news goes that a foreigner is visiting, and from somewhere near the inner shrine some one rides an elephant out to greet you, and receives in his big snout a coin or two, which he raises up to his master. This, also, when you leave. There is no recourse but to give him something, because, though you walk your best, and though the elephant seems hardly to be moving his limbs, he is outwalking you, and it would be a bad case if he got angry and wrapped you up in his snout. There are some fine architecture and other interesting objects in this temple; but I was glad to get away from the act of begging men and elephants.

I drove about Trichinopoly in a carriage, taking the Wesleyan native pastor with me. That night I got food, took a bath, slept in a nice bed with a punka waving over me—all at the station. Many of the station-houses of India have such accommodations.

Aden, July 17, 1894.

Orville-Whillington Camp Meeting.

At the request of Bro. George D. Anders, pastor in charge of East Feliciana circuit, Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, under whose supervision the above camp meeting was held, I have undertaken the pleasing, though somewhat arduous, task of placing before the readers of the ADVOCATE an account of the meeting, better known, perhaps, as "Bluff Creek Camp Meeting." This, its fourth annual service, commenced on the sixteenth instant and closed on the twenty-sixth, with the most wonderful display of power and love that I have ever beheld. Commencing on the sixteenth, while I was absent, and not being able to give a personal account of what transpired up to Monday, the twentieth instant, I subjoin here an extract from the Greensburg Echo, whose editor was on the ground:

"Socially, the meeting up to Tuesday, the day we left, was a grand success. We can't remember when we ever saw so many people together in the country. On Sunday there was hardly less than 2,500 persons on the ground, and all seemed bent on having a good time. The music was very good. Miss Bessie Munday, of Clinton, La., presided at the organ, accompanied by Mr. B. F. Batte, of Jackson, Miss., and W. J. McLean, of Gloster, Miss., with their cornets, which, blended together with a choir of voices, specially selected, made the welkin ring. We can say that up to Tuesday there seemed to have been much good accomplished."

Prayer service was held every morning at half-past six, and then four regular services each day, which was the regular order of worship. There were fifty accessions to the church, and between fifty and sixty conversions; possibly more, as it was impossible to get correct figures. Now, when I say conversions, I want it to be distinctly understood that I do not mean the simple hand-shaking variety, but "Simon-pure" conversions. Old men and old women, young men and young women, shouted the praises of God. The public collections, I think, amounted to something over $125, and I want to say just here, to the credit of the association, that the expenses of all visiting ministers to and from the grounds were promptly met and paid by the association. This, to my mind, was a long step in the direction of right, and I trust the precedent thus established may be followed up by other associations. There have been many improvements made on the grounds since their last service, and more vigorous efforts will be put forward in the future than there have been in the past, as it is the intention of the association to make this camp ground, with all its environments, second to none in the land. They have no gate fee, but depend entirely on the public collections for money to meet the current expenses, and so far the blessed Lord has brought friends to their aid.

Surely a more hospitable, kind and loving people can not be found; and their efforts to advance the cause of the Master should be seconded by all.

I can not close this communication without once more calling attention to the wonderful displays of divine power manifest at each service. Day after day, and night after night, as the hours for service drew near, the immense congregations would gather themselves together under the spacious tabernacle to lend an eager, listening ear to the old, old story, as it was so earnestly told from time to time. And as the sweet and blessed truths were wafted out upon the air, falling here upon a stony heart, and there upon a hungry soul eager to catch the faintest ripple of its heavenly cadence, bright scintillations of God's divine power and love would flash over the countenances of the audience, and the earnest, heartfelt amens that came in response, like a mighty tidal wave, sealed conviction in the heart of everyone. Eternity alone will reveal to our anxious gaze the fruitage of this wonderful outpouring of God's Holy Spirit. Such bountiful effusions of God's refreshing love are truly to us what the green and fertile oases of the desert are to the weary, thirsty traveler. Thank God for his love and mercy; thank God for Christian association; thank God for a Powell, a Dominick, a Jones, an Anders; thank God for a Roberts, a Skipper, a Johnson, and thank God for all who are laboring zealously to push the battle to the very gates of the enemy of our souls.

Oh, what a precious privilege that we were permitted to visit this camp meeting! The impressions made on our minds, we trust, will in future cause us to bear much fruit for the Master, and be as lasting as eternity. Thank God for Bluff Creek Camp Meeting! W. JAS. MCLEAN.

Delhi District Sunday-School Conference.

The Sunday-school Conference of the Delhi district, of the Louisiana Conference, met at Oak Ridge, La., on July 3, at nine A. M. The presiding elder, Rev. H. O. White, conducted the opening religious exercises and presided throughout the meeting. Speakers had been appointed to read papers, or otherwise introduce the subjects to be discussed, and it was well that they had, as everyone knows the modesty of Methodist preachers, and these brethren were no exception to the general rule. Some of the extremely modest ones had to be "hit" before they could be gotten to their feet, and when they got under way, it looked like they would have to be "hit" to get them down again. The subject of the Sunday-school as a feeder to the church called out some good remarks from the brethren, while the Sunday-school as a place for indoctrinating our children, led by Rev. I. T. Reames, provoked one of the most animated and profitable discussions of the two days' meeting, the points specially under discussion being the placing of our catechisms in our schools, and the early indoctrinating of our children, as a safeguard against the incroachments of Roman Catholic doctrine. The subject of parental responsibility in Sunday-school work, introduced by Bro. Knickerbocker, was discussed to the profit of all present. One of the best speeches of the occasion was made along this line by Sister Carr, of Oak Ridge, who has for thirty years been a Sunday-school teacher. Sister Carr says, "If the parents would only see that the lessons were prepared, and would then come with them to Sunday-school, the whole question of keeping our children in the Sunday-school would be solved." Rev. J. F. Foster read a scholarly paper on "Christian Education," and covered the ground fully and ably that little was left to be said by anyone else. Bro. Reames made a good point when he said that "head culture without heart culture was a dangerous thing."

Our host, Rev. R. A. Davis, was busy about much serving, and was rarely heard from on the Conference floor; but when he did speak, we all learned something.

Rev. J. W. Davis was present, and, although he had not been appointed to lead a discussion, yet he made himself valuable to us all by his timely remarks on the various subjects.

There were several laymen present, who took part, to our profit, in the discussion. It is a good thing to some time see a subject through a consecrated layman's eyes. They often enable us to see our errors.

We were royally treated by the good people of Oak Ridge, who prepared two good basket dinners for us, which were served on the grounds. Our social intercourse with them was even more enjoyable than the good things upon which they feasted us. May they live long and prosper!

D. G. W. Ellis.

I do not suppose I can give Bro. E. any light on the "residue theory," as he is not open to conviction. He says, "I suspect our second-blessing brethren will not be able to help us out of our perplexity." But I can give my theory.

1. Justification pardons all past sin; sin is the transgression of law, and is pardoned by repentance towards God and faith in Christ. All sin is gone. I am justified, no longer under condemnation: free, bless God.

2. Inherited depravity is not sin (but is at the bottom of all sin); "it is the corruption of the nature of every man that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam, whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness, and of his own nature inclined to evil, and that continually." (Seventh Article.)

This is the "residue," so called. Is this destroyed, killed, or done away with in justification? If so, all right. Hallelujah! If not, "Oh, wretched man that I am!" I can't repent of it; not responsible for it; can I get rid of it? Yes. How? By faith. (Acts xxvi, 18.) Christ says (John xv, 3), "Now are ye clean;" xvii, 17, prays that they might be sanctified. This mortifies the members, puts off the old man, kills the corruption of the nature, and brings you to Heb. iv, 9: "There remaineth, therefore, a rest to the people of God." This is consecrated faith; the other is justifying faith. The first comes after, the second before, justification. Can a sinner consecrate himself to God?

The Work Cure.

In that moment when, as to most at some time or other, a kind of despairing feeling comes to you; when energy lags and the heart, bitten by the chill of some disappointment, sinks far below the zero point, then the safety for you, and the sure path into more genial, spiritual weather, is the duty next you. Do that anyway. Even with failing feeling and nerveless hands, compel yourself to do it. Do not put it off. Do not allow yourself bewailingly to wait for better mood. Do the duty next you; or anyway try at it. At least a fine sense of accomplishment will come stealing in, a very real consciousness of personal heroism. It is wonderful what strength the duty next one bravely done, or anyway bravely attempted, breeds in one.—Wayland Hoyt, D. D.

Searching.

It has been said that he is a stupid who loses patience with a stupid. And some of us who pride ourselves on our quickness might as well lay this to heart. Our superior excellence should test itself at this point. We are also to be charitable to those who are most uncharitable themselves. We owe love to all, even to those who love others the least. This commandment is exceeding broad, and puts an end to very much, if not to all, that counts itself perfection. If there were more self-examinations there would be less self-exaltation. A close, honest searching of our state hinders glib profession, but helps real progression. The less of the former and the more of the latter, the better.—Ex.

A Cloud-Burst on the Leona.

The Leona river heads up in some small canyons eight or ten miles north of Uvalde. It was dry from its head to some distance below Uvalde when the rain began at midnight last night. By 3:30 A. M. it was out of its banks; soon after 4 it began to encroach on the town, and by 5 o'clock it was up to the court-house and nearly a mile wide. Much of the town was flooded, and many of the small houses washed away. At daylight rescuing parties went in on horseback and rafts to relieve those who were on housetops, or had caught in the boughs of trees. Only six persons were drowned. Soon the water began to fall. By ten o'clock the river was again within its banks, and falling an inch a minute. The river was ten feet higher than it was at the great freshet in 1857. A cloud-burst is simply a very heavy rain. When there is a heavy rain for a few hours, and extending over several of the small canyons near the source of one of these so-called rivers, it's like pouring water into funnels or hoppers—it all runs down together and swells the stream to flood-tide in a very short time. A few years ago Alpine was flooded with water one to two feet deep all over the place in half an hour, and it all subsided in a few hours.

A Philanthropic Enterprise.

The New York Independent calls attention to a philanthropic measure inaugurated by a large-minded citizen of New York. If liberal people in our other great cities would follow his example, it would be the means of accomplishing much good. The Independent says: "It was left for a New York merchant to take up the question in a thoroughly business-like way, and offer a solution that not only met the need of relief, but met it in a way that preserved thoroughly the personal independence of the people who were helped. Mr. Nathan Straus, on making inquiry into the conditions of life among the poor, found that one of their greatest hardships was the high price paid for the ordinary necessaries of life. In the matter of fuel, having neither the means to purchase in bulk nor room to store it, they were forced to buy in small quantities, of local dealers, at double the rates paid by others. While well-to-do people paid $5 50 to $6 a ton for coal, they paid at the rate of $12 to $14. So also in provisions. Mr. Straus bought large quantities of coal, hired piers and established stations, where anyone could purchase it in small quantities at even less than wholesale rates, for he paid all expense of storage and superintendence. Later on bread and various provisions were furnished in the same way. In order to extend the benefit as far as possible, he instituted a system of tickets for use by the various charitable organizations, who were very glad to help the destitute by the gift of a bod of coal, a loaf of bread, or some vegetables, rather than by the gift of money, which might do more harm than good."

Too Late.

Many a good man goes through life plain, plodding, living obscurely, yet living a true Christian life, doing many a quiet kindness to his neighbors and friends, yet seldom hearing a word of commendation or praise. The vase filled with the incense of affection, and kept sealed. The flowers are not cut from the stems. One day you stand by his coffin, and there are enough kind things said to have brightened every hour of his life, if only they had been said at the right time. There are enough flowers piled upon his casket to have kept his chamber filled with fragrance all through his years, if only they had been sent day by day. How his heavy heart would have thanked God, if in the midst of his toils, burdens and struggles he could have heard a few of the words of affection and approval that are now wasted on senseless clay! How much happier he would have been in his weary days if he had known how many generous friends he had! But, poor man! he had to die before the appreciation could express itself. Then the gentle words spoken over his cold form he could not hear. The love blossomed out too late.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

"The next time you meet the treasurer of your church, ask him frankly whether the pastor's salary has been regularly paid, as agreed when he was called. If it has, inquire of the officers of the church whether the amount the pastor receives is adequate for his support. If it is not, then exercise yourself to learn why it should not be made adequate. If his salary is not promptly paid, go to the officers of the church and inquire the reason. Do not rest until the finances of the church are managed in a thorough, business-like manner, and the pastor is paid both adequately and promptly."—Lutheran Observer.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

The Cuisine.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SOFT GINGERBREAD.—One-half cup sour milk, one cup molasses, one egg, one teaspoon soda, two cups flour, one-half cup butter, one teaspoon ginger. Bake in moderate oven.

ICING.—Boil one cup granulated sugar and four tablespoonfuls water until it ropes. Pour the syrup over the well-beaten whites of three eggs, beat until nearly cold and spread half an inch thick over the cake.

A FRUIT DESSERT.—Take the pulp of oranges, and cut in bits the edible part of pineapple cut in dice, and a cocoanut grated. Arrange in layers alternately, using a glass dish. Sprinkle each layer with pulverized sugar. Let it stand an hour or two, and serve.

CLAM-BROTH.—Clam-broth, which is highly recommended, not only for invalids, but as a steady diet for those inclined to grow stout, is made by simmering chopped clams in their own broth with an equal quantity of water, the broth strained through fine muslin and seasoned with pepper. If for an invalid, hot milk may be added when the broth is strained. Serve with toasted crackers.—Exchange.

LEMON PIE.—Dissolve one tablespoonful of cornstarch in a little cold water, and pour on it a cup of boiling water. When it boils up pour it on one cup of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. When cool add the yolks of two eggs and the white of one well-beaten, and the grated peel and juice of one lemon. Put in a pie-plate lined with paste, and bake. When done spread over the top the white of an egg beaten up with sugar, and set it in the oven one or two minutes.

CHOCOLATE JUMBLES.—One cupful of butter beaten to a cream, beat in two cupfuls of sugar, add four well-beaten eggs, then three scant cupfuls of flour in which are two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking-powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt, if the butter is fresh. Add one or one-half cupful of grated chocolate to half the dough. In the other half add the juice and grated rind of an orange. Roll thin. Cut in fancy shapes, and bake in a quick oven. These are also excellent plain jumbles.—Good Housekeeping.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Nervous Agitation.

What do we mean by nervous agitation? We mean a more or less violent commotion or stirring up of the mind, or the emotional part of our being something beyond what is normal or healthful. The sea is agitated by a storm and it roars and thunders as the waves dash on the shore. A horse is agitated by fear and trembles from head to foot. The humble bee that builds its nest in the fallow field is wild with agitation when the farmer in Autumn breaks up its home and scatters its brood with his plough.

Some agitations do harm and others do good. A stagnant pool is benefited when its waters are stirred or agitated, so the air can penetrate them. Sinful natures are benefited when a wave of moral feeling stirs them to their very depths. Sluggish natures are benefited when they are agitated in such a way as to make them work healthfully. But for over-worked, nervous people, those who do not eat well or sleep well, nervous agitation is often a serious injury to health. Indeed, I am sure it is a very frequent cause of ill health.

We get a very good illustration of this sometimes in experiments on animals. As a rule, I do not believe in experiments of this kind, but when they are made we ought to get some good out of them. The following one illustrates what I mean. It was made by a dairyman to see what the effect of nervous agitation would have on the milk of a cow. He says:

"I had a beautiful little Jersey cow, a great favorite—a perfect little lover, for she would follow me all about the yard for a caress. I was milking her, and was just about half through, and took a sample of her milk and set it one side. I then did something I was always sorry for afterward. I took a pin and gave her a sudden rake with it across her flank. She sprang into her stall and almost bellowed with fright; then she moaned and looked at me, but I petted her, and she was certain it was not me. She knew I would not do such a thing, but she could not tell what it was. Finally I quieted her down and resumed milking her, and I then took another sample of milk. I had a chemical analysis made of both samples, found fifteen per cent. less butter fat in the second sample than in the first; that much fat had gone somewhere else on account of the fright given her."

Almost any woman can observe in her own life what effect nervous agitation has on the children's capacity to work or to enjoy. How many of us have not often lost whole days and weeks in this way. Is there any means by which we may prevent those nervous shocks that strain us so, that do us so much harm? There are probably remedies for nearly every evil in the world, if we only knew how to apply them. It is a part of the business of life to find and apply these remedies.

The remedy for nervous agitation and its evils is first in avoiding the causes that lead up to it, and, second, in self-control. If we are observing, we can see for ourselves what these causes are, and keep out of their way, and if we do not always succeed we can then be philosophical enough to control ourselves so as little harm will come as possible. It may take a long time to learn how to master one's feelings, but the mastery when once made is a conquest greater often than was ever made by any general at the head of a victorious army.—Journal of Hygiene.

Dieting for Children.

It is as cruel a thing to compel a child always to clear his plate as it is at other times to refuse him more when he wants it. If you think the child is simply greedy, give him dry bread; but give him something. On the other hand, how often a child sickening in some fever has, by refusing food, even when sorely pressed, taught the mother wisdom. Again, children often have a hatred of certain articles of food. Fat, underdone meat, eggs, pork, liver, and other things are often hated by children, but a certain amount of fat and butter is desirable. In such cases it is unwise to press them beyond a certain point. Food eaten with aversion or under threats is pretty sure to disagree. Children should not be allowed to go too long without food, especially in the middle of the day. If they can not come home to dinner, make sure they have a good substantial lunch, and see that it is eaten, and that money that may be given to get it is not spent in other ways. Another mistaken idea is that sugar is bad for children. It is, on the contrary, one of the most nourishing articles of diet, and taken pure with food is quite wholesome. Not so, however, in the form of sweets eaten at all hours of the day, and of more than doubtful composition. Children should eat slowly and use their teeth well. All raw food and starch foods should be very well masticated. Water-cress and lettuce are good for children.—Leisure Hour.

From the Work.

Rev. W. J. Porter, P. C., Indian Bayou charge, Louisiana Conference: "Had a good meeting at Bethel. Bro. Telhout, State Secretary of Sunday-schools, was with us for two days, and Bro. Pickens one day. But the success of the meeting was due largely to the efforts of a layman (Father Staples), who carried on the meetings four days after the pastor was called off by sickness in his family. The meeting lasted nine days, resulting in 14 conversions and 14 applicants for membership. Began a meeting at Indian Bayou, Aug. 10, with a Church Conference at 3 P. M., and preaching at night. After nineteen days we closed with the following results: Five members expelled, 69 applicants for membership, 15 received, 83 conversions, and 5 sanctified. Praise the Lord! The following brethren did the preaching: Bros. C. F. Staples, W. B. Pilley, M. C. Manley, and J. M. Beard, P. E."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., Aug. 25: "We have just closed our meeting at Wesley Chapel (Phœnix), Miss., and we had a very profitable meeting of six days. Our main effort was in the church, and we think there was much good accomplished in that direction. Many new resolutions were formed and vows made which we hope will result in much good. Bro. T. B. Holloman, of East Mississippi Female College, preached six very fine and edifying sermons, which were very highly appreciated by his many friends. Bro. F. M. Williams, of Satartia, preached two strong sermons, which we enjoyed. Bro. G. W. Alexander, local elder, preached once, which was enjoyed and followed by a fine altar service. The pastor did the rest of the preaching, and we had a good time. The choir deserves much credit for the delightful music during the entire meeting. We have many good people at Wesley Chapel. May God bless them all!"

Corinth District—Third Round Completed.

During the year I have traveled about thirty-six hundred miles to fill all my engagements. I find the work in a fairly prosperous condition. If the preachers will push matters, the collection will be good. In fact, we ought to raise every dollar of the connectional claims. Some of our people are far behind in liberality. Improvement has been made along many lines this year. A new church at Pine Springs, a parsonage enterprise projected, fine revivals at several appointments, indicate the zeal and efficiency of their young pastor. Fine revivals have been held on Brown's Creek, Ripley and Guntown circuits. Bro. M. H. Honnoll is closing up well on the New Albany circuit. At Ripley a handsome parsonage has been built, and Bell hopes to stay to enjoy it. At Boonville we need a new church; some of our people are of the same opinion. Ignorance is the greatest curse upon our country. Prejudice is the child of ignorance and the parent of much meanness. T. W. LEWIS.

Rev. J. W. Tinnin, P. C.: "We have held our protracted meetings, two in number. The Lord did more for us than we expected. Our first meeting began at Ebenezer, Saturday before the third Sunday in July; continued one week. Assisted by Rev. Milton Ferrell, L. P., and Dr. Bethea, L. P. Results: 13 conversions, 12 sanctifications, and 9 accessions to the church. The oldest members say that this was the best meeting ever held in that church. Our District Conference convened at Adams, July 26; closed the twenty-eighth, and we protracted the meeting thirteen days. Rev. J. V. Penn, of Pearlington, did the preaching. I have attended a great many glorious meetings, but never witnessed anything to compare with the Adams' revival. The Holy Ghost descended upon us during the first service, and remained during the entire meeting, and, glory to God! he is with us to-day! After hearing Bro. Penn's first sermon, the universal expression was, 'We have the right man.' I never saw better attention paid anyone. Everyone who attended the meeting was serious. I never witnessed such deep convictions. Several were in agony of spirit thirty-six hours, but finally swept gloriously into the blessing. Between 50 and 60 professed either conversion or reclamation; 130 were sanctified. During the two meetings 7 preachers professed the blessing of entire sanctification. Glory to God, salvation is rolling on!"

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of Fruits Meet for Repentance.

At a meeting held recently in Columbia, Ala., one hundred and seventeen persons joined the church. Among the number were four notorious gamblers who had long been a curse to the town. These men brought all their cards and other gambling apparatus and delivered them to the preacher, who piled them in a heap and touched a match to them amid the songs, prayers and tears of a vast audience. Who says that the gospel has lost its power to save?

At a revival meeting held recently near Merkel, Texas, a saloon keeper of the name of Brooks was converted. He immediately made a public bonfire of his entire stock of liquors, his saloon fixtures and his books and accounts. That is a religion worth having. A religion that does not make a man "quit his meanness" will not stand the test at the great day. An event similar to this occured in Natchez, Mississippi, some years since, and the ex saloon keeper was faithful unto death.

Aroused at Last.

The people of the Crescent City are doing all in their power to ferret out corruption in high places and bring offenders to justice. Nine councilmen are already indicted, and it is almost certain that several others soon will be. But, as the criminal jurisprudence of the State allows long delays, and as the people do not wish to be ruled by such a gang, they have initiated impeachment proceedings against a number of the city fathers, including the mayor. The charges against the mayor are malfeasance, non-feasance, corruption, favoritism, oppression in office and incompetency. It is more than likely that several of the boodlers will soon be removed from office.

Back to Africa.

As is known to many of our readers, Bishop Turner, of the African Methodist Church, has been for some years trying to induce the negroes of the South to emigrate. He has found his task a difficult one. As a rule, Cuffie is satisfied with Dixie as a local habitation. Still the pertinacious prelate seems to have had some success. It is stated in the papers that about five thousand negroes will take their departure for Liberia before the first of December. The President of Liberia offers each immigrant twenty five acres of land and the agricultural implements necessary to till it. We predict that many of these will be anxious to return before twelve months have passed.

Municipal Misrule.

An appalling spectacle presents itself in the great urban centers of our heaven-favored land. For months the periodical press has teemed with sickening details of official corruption in several of our great cities. The villainy unearthed in these cities would be a disgrace to a barbarous nation. Indeed, it may well be doubted whether heathendom can match us in this respect. And the worst feature of the situation is that the half has not been told. The cities in which these exposures have been made are in all probability pretty fair samples of American municipal government. New York, Brooklyn, Memphis and New Orleans are probably not much further gone in rottenness than some other cities of anything like equal dimensions. In the larger cities and in some, at least, of the smaller ones official municipal corruption seems to be the usual order. And even where there is no downright corruption there is an appalling amount of misrule growing out of incompetency.

It is time that our people were waking up from their lethargy as to this matter and casting about for a remedy; for a remedy we must have, or our civilization will go the way of the great civilizations of the past. Just here it should be borne in mind that pathology goes before therapeutics. Diagnosis precedes prescription. The first duty of good citizenship, therefore, is to ascertain if possible the causes of the present state of things. An exhaustive enumeration can not be attempted here. A few of these causes we will, however, consider.

One cause which is patent to every reflecting mind is the indifference of our best people towards municipal affairs. It is a simple fact that, as a rule, the moral and religious element of society manifests very little interest in municipal government. Not only is this true of those who take no interest in politics in general; it is also true of many who take deep interest in State and National politics. Many who manifest very great concern as to the results of State and National elections do not even cast a ballot in a municipal election. Many others exercise the right of suffrage, but do nothing more. They do no work; they exercise no influence that looks in the direction of a purification of municipal politics. This indifference on the part of the best element of society is the chief cause of the evil under consideration. When a municipal election is pending, the devil's crowd are always wide-awake, thoroughly organized and at work with the pertinacious industry of beavers. Who ever knew saloon keepers to be caught napping in a municipal election? Who ever knew them to fail to unite and organize? Who ever knew them to fail to use their utmost influence and put forth their very best efforts for the success of their ticket? And what is true of saloon keepers is true of professional gamblers, and of the criminal classes in general. It may be set down as a rule as unalterable as the laws of the Medes and Persians that all classes that are opposed to honest municipal government will present a united front on election day, and that they will make no mistake. Our Savior's words are no less true to-day than when he spoke them eighteen hundred years ago: "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." The vicious classes act upon the theory that success is dependent upon persistent, well-directed effort. The moral classes seem to think that success will come of itself without effort. Was there ever greater folly? In obedience to the injunction of an ancient sage we need to be taught by our foes. Let the moral forces of society forget their petty differences and become as thoroughly united as are the forces of evil; let them become as well organized, and be as careful to secure wise leadership; let them work with the same vigor and presistency, and the banner of right would soon wave proudly over many a city where now it trails in the dust. In most of our cities we do not believe it to be true that the forces of evil are numerically in the majority. They dominate the realm of politics solely because of the inertia and the folly of the moral element. It is time we were getting rid of the namby-pamby sentiment that a good man can have nothing to do with politics without being contaminated. How can a good man be corrupted by uniting with other good men to suppress villainy and to enthrone righteousness? Such a sentiment had its origin in the bosom of "the father of lies." Nothing would please the hosts of evil so well as for this sentiment to be acted upon by Christian people everywhere. Such a state of things would realize the Apocalyptic vision of "the devil turned loose."

Another prolific source of municipal corruption is a blind partisanism. We do not decry the existence of political parties. There are questions of governmental policy about which men differ; and so long as this is the case these differences will find concrete expression in political parties. The existence of these parties is not an evil, but a good. Any political party which holds the reigns of government and has no opposition is likely to become—yea, rather is sure to become—corrupt. It is not, therefore, of partisanism as such that we speak. What we condemn is a partisanism so blind that it can see no good outside of itself, so senseless that it extends its lines into regions where they do not belong, and so wicked that it adopts as its motto: "Our party, right or wrong." We do not believe that the lines of national political organization ought to be extended into municipal or other merely local elections. What has any question of tariff or coinage, or any other such question, to do with the question whether Smith or Jones shall be mayor or councilman in the village of Mugginsville, or the city of Sugartown? In a municipal election what good citizens need to know is not whether Jones favors this or that measure pending before Congress, for that is a matter with which Jones, in his capacity as a municipal officer, can have nothing to do. The question should be whether Jones is a suitable man for the position which he seeks—whether he is honest and competent. No man professing to be a Christian ought to vote for a candidate who is known to be dishonest or incompetent simply because he is the nominee of his party. Yet this is exactly the spectacle which greets our eyes to-day all over this land.

We once heard a church member say, "I would vote for a donkey or the devil either if he were nominated by my party." Such folly as this is to a large extent the cause of the official corruption which is making our nation a stench in the nostrils of civilization. The Christian's first allegiance is to Christ. His allegiance to any human organization, political or otherwise, should be ever regarded as secondary. He can not, therefore, use the prerogatives of citizenship for the enthronement of inquity. Shall I vote for a villain simply because through some trickery of his own or through negligence on the part of the better classes of society he has secured a party nomination? If I do so, then who is to blame if he filches money from the public purse, or is guilty of high-handed corruption of any sort? One of the great needs of our land to-day is a citizenship that fears God more than it fears man—that loves the right more than it loves party, pelf or power. One great lesson which the average Christian needs to learn is, that voting may be done as righteously as praying, and that a consecrated ballot is a powerful instrumentality for the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan's kingdom.

The New Orleans Secular Press.

The citizens of New Orleans and of the whole State of Louisiana are under lasting obligations to the press of this city for the noble stand they have taken in behalf of municipal reform. Everyone who knows anything of the situation here knows that the indictment and conviction of the infamous ring that dominates the city would have been utterly impossible without the aid of the secular papers. Such unanimity in behalf of reform is rarely seen. "Honor to whom honor is due."

Millsaps College.

The third session of Millsaps College will commence Wednesday, Sept. 26.

All new students should be present Tuesday, Sept. 25, that they may be examined and assigned to the proper classes. When students arrive in Jackson they must report to me as soon as possible, and secure board at some place approved by the college authorities.

W. B. MURRAH, Pres't.

From now until Oct. 1 we will present a copy of Dr. Sawyer's book, "The World in the Church," to every new subscriber and also to every old subscriber who will renew for one year in advance, i. e., up to October, 1895. This work has been highly commended by our church papers and many of the leading men of Southern Methodism, including most, if not all, our Bishops. Here is an opportunity to get the book as a present for doing something which you ought to do anyway—subscribe for the ADVOCATE. This offer is made only to those who send cash with the order at the rate of $2 per annum.

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

BOOKS.

THE HIGHER CRITICISM. By H. L. Hastings, Editor of The Christian. "The Anti-Infidel Library" (No. 37). Published by H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass., 10 cents.

The author shows the want of agreement in the conclusions reached by the so-called "Higher Critics." He presents graphically their failure to furnish the proof for their conclusions or the reasons for their opinions to persons of average intelligence though not versed in the "Higher Criticism," and the arrogance with which they assume to themselves superior knowledge; and then he demands that they first determine among themselves just how much of the Bible is to be rejected, and give to the world, not authority, but the evidence for its rejection.

In order to test their work, Mr. Hastings suggests that a dozen of the more eminent "Higher Critics" be shut up with Hebrew Bibles, Greek Testaments, paper, pens, ink, scissors, paste-pots and brushes, but deprived of the writings of German theologians and French infidels, and let each one stay there until he has settled the authority, authenticity, inspiration, and inerrancy of each part of the Scriptures for himself; and, when they have all finished their work, that the results be compared. The author intimates that the comparison would show a theological crazy-quilt beside which Joseph's coat of many colors would be as plain as a Quaker dress pattern.

There is said to be a peculiar interest throughout the South in the forthcoming biography of General Lee, by his nephew and cavalry commander, General Fitzhugh Lee, which is to be published by D. Appleton & Co. in the Great Commanders Series. The relations, military and personal, of the author to the subject give the book a character which no other biography has had.

PERIODICALS.

The current number of Harper's Young People contains, besides the fifth instalment of Ruth McEnery Stuart's charming "Story of Babette," instructive articles on "Bows and Bow-shooting" and "Weather Hints to Young Sailors," a thrilling tale of a general's "Narrow Escape in Havana Harbor," and many delightful short stories and poems.

The September Harper's contains "A New England Prophet," the story of an Adventist alarm, by Mary E. Wilkins; "The General's Bluff," founded on a frontier campaign of General Crook, by Owen Wister; "The Tug of War," a tale of English men and women in Greece; chapters of "The Golden House," Charles Dudley Warner's novel of New York society, and the first of a two-part story of Narragansett Pier, by Brander Matthews.

There is more than the usual amount of adventure to attract the youthful readers to St. Nicholas, for September. Miss Molly Elliot Seawell tells of the memorable storming of Tripoli. Edwin Fiske Kimball tells the thrilling story of "The Wreck of the 'Markham,'" and the rescue of the crew. "Two School-houses and a Shipwreck," by Isabel Marbury, is an account of the succoring of the crew of an American vessel by the Japanese. Thomas C. Birnie tells of the hunting of a herd of wolves who pulled down a deer. John Williamson Palmer writes of "A Little King with a Long Name," the boy-ruler of Nepaul, and his warlike subjects. Naturalist Hornaday describes the Walrus, C. T. Lummis has another of his Pueblo folk-lore stories.

The Review of Missions, for September, is out in good time with a rich table of contents. In addition to a large amount of editorial and selected matter it contains the following original articles:

Home and Foreign Missions. The contents are as follows: West China—A Great Mission Field, Rev. John F. Goucher, D. D.; Mrs. Chika Sakurai, Rev. Tokichi Masao; The New World of Central Africa, Rev. J. M. Wright, D. D.; Romish Superstition in Durango, Rev. Robert E. Elliott; Medical Mission Work in China, Rev. J. W. Davis, D. D.; Home Evangelization in Its Relation to Foreign Work, W. H. Howland; Japan Jottings, Rev. James H. Petiee; Letters from Corea, Rev. W. D. Reynolds and Dr. A. D. Drew.

The Preacher's Magazine, for September, commends itself for the variety and excellence of its contents. The first sermon, "Clouds That Hide Christ," by the Right Rev. A. W. Thorold, D. D., is good. Rev. Mark Guy Pearse has one entitled, "Where Thou Dwellest," which is full of apt teachings. A layman's sermon, by Mr. John C. Havemeyer, on the theme, "Seen and Unseen," is attractive and profitable. Rev. H. S. B. Yates writes upon "The Teacher at Work." "God's Favors," by Rev. F. N. Trotter, and "A Tentmaker's Metaphor," by the Rev. Charles Cross, are among the articles. The "Short Sermons for Busy Men," by Dr. Parker, of London, are continued. Published monthly at 15 cents a copy, or $1 50 a year. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 2 Cooper Union, N. Y.

A prominent feature of the September Century is a continuation of the unpublished correspondence of Edgar Allan Poe, edited by George E. Woodberry. The inglorious end of Poe's aspirations for a government appointment are related with much particularity. Mrs. M. O. W. Oliphant, whose biographical work is not less attractive than her novels, contributes a paper on "Addison, the Humorist." A striking portrait of Addison, and one of the Earl of Godolphin, accompany the paper. There is also the first of two papers of "Recollections of Aubrey De Vere," the present paper being devoted to his childhood and boyhood, and the second to his youth. This paper contains, among other material, some humorous stories of life in Ireland a generation ago, with anecdotes of Daniel O'Connell, of whom an engraving is given.

The Review of Reviews, for September, might well be called an international political number. Every line is up to date and directly pertinent to the great problems that concern the world at the present moment. The most elaborate article is entitled "Political Japan and Its Leaders," by Mr. C. Meriwether. The writer is a Johns Hopkins graduate who spent some years as a professor in a government institution in Japan, and who has written the present article with reference to all these conditions which have brought Japan to a domestic and foreign crisis, the result of which is the existing war with China. Mr. Meriwether gives us clear accounts of the most significant party and military leaders. Under the title of "The Work of the Fifty-third Congress," the Review furnishes a record of the legislation of the past year, and devotes several pages of fine print to the actual tariff schedules, placing the McKinley rates and the new rates side by side. Mr. W. B. Shaw, of the Review staff, has also compiled for this number a summary account of the important laws that have been enacted by the fifteen State Legislatures which have been in session within the past six or eight months. Dr. Albert Shaw, editor-in-chief of the Review, presents an article on the new Hawaiian Constitution, evidently prepared from a close study of the complete document. He points out many interesting features, and regards the work of the Hawaiian convention as evincing a high order of statesmanship.

NOTES.

Millsaps College, it is thought, will open with two hundred pupils.

***

A notice of Dr. J. W. Harmon's "Select Sermons" will appear in our next issue.

***

Whitworth College, we are glad to learn, has promise of a very fine opening.

***

We are pleased to learn that Grenada Female College had a fine opening. The prospect is that every room will be filled very soon.

***

At the beginning of this century there were only forty-seven translations of the Bible in existence, while to-day three are ninety entire and two hundred and thirty partial translations.

***

Port Gibson Female College opened Sept. 12. This institution challenges comparison with any in this section as to its curriculum, its text-books, its faculty and its rates. Send for catalogue.

***

Four woman physicians have been appointed by the Board of Health of New York as members of the corps of fifty doctors to visit the tenement-houses, and give free treatment to the poor who need medical aid.

***

A movement is on foot to establish a Presbyterian college in Texas. An effort will be made to raise an endowment of $2,000,000, of which the people of Texas will contribute $1,000,000, the remainder to be furnished by the Presbyterian Church at large.

***

The Peter James scholarship in Centenary College has been awarded by the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference to Perry Drake, son of Rev. J. P. Drake. The scholarship in Millsaps College goes to H. P. Lewis, Jr., son of Rev. H. P. Lewis.

***

Rugby School is the name of a new institution founded in this city for the purpose of fitting young men for college. The proprietors, Messrs. Ripp & Walls, have testimonials from high sources as to scholarship and fitness for their work. See advertisement in another column.

***

Says the Central Methodist:

The United States, Denmark, Switzerland, and Holland spend the most on public education per child, ranking in the order given. Austria, Italy, and Saxony spend the least. France spends the most on military per inhabitant, and Switzerland and the United States the least.

***

We have received a supplementary catalogue of Centenary College, giving the names of all its pupils since its founding in 1825. The number of pupils between the years '45 and '90 is 2,236. When it is remembered that the war with its four years of suspension is comprised in this period, this is an excellent showing.

***

The Christian Giver Co., of Atlanta, Ga., will publish soon a large octavo volume entitled, "Sketches and Portraits of Southern Methodist Preachers." The number of sketches and portraits will be quite large. The work will contain engravings of many of our leading colleges, churches, camp grounds, etc. There will also be a very brief history of the Southern Methodist Church, and a sketch of each Conference. A very large sale is already assured.

Miss Comstock, who is president of the Comstock Banking Company, of Green City, Mo., and cashier of the Comstock Castle Bank, of Green Castle, Mo., is probably one of the youngest bank officers in the country, says the New York Tribune. She entered the bank at Green City in March, 1892, as assistant cashier and bookkeeper, which position she filled in all its various duties. In September, 1893, the owners of that bank organized one in Green Castle, when they made Miss Comstock president of the old bank and cashier of the new one. As the president and directors of the latter bank live at some distance from it, Miss Comstock has the real work of the bank to do, and, despite the heavy responsibility, she is interested and successful in her work.

***

Warrants have been issued by United States Commissioner L. B. Moseley for the arrest of three of the officials of the State of Mississippi, viz.: Gov. J. M. Stone, Treasurer J. J. Evans, and Auditor W. W. Stone. The charge against them is that they caused to be issued State warrants which are similar to national bank currency. These State warrants were issued in accordance with an act of the last Legislature, and it was the imperative duty of these officials to execute the act. United State Senator McLaurin has tendered his services in behalf of the defendants free of charge. Judge J. A. P. Campbell, ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, pronounces the course of the United States government entirely indefensible, and predicts its utter discomfiture when the case comes to trial.

PERSONALS.

Rev. R. H. Wynn is assisting his father, Rev. J. F. Wynn, in a revival work at Pineville, La.

Rev. S. B. Jones, D. D., a delegate to the last General Conference from South Carolina, and one of the leading educators of that State, died at his home in Spartanburg on the eighth.

Rev. H. W. Van Hook, of the Mississippi Conference, is having a prosperous year. He expects to report at Conference two new churches. He has had forty or more accessions and many conversions.

Rev. S. B. Stevenson has been transferred from the Arkansas to the White River Conference, and is stationed at Batesville, instead of Rev. J. M. Harley, who has been elected to a professorship in Hendrix College.

Dr. Z. T. Bennett, editor of the Arkansa Methodist, has resigned, and Dr. J. E. Godbey has been elected in his stead. Dr. Bennett has done faithful service. We part with him with regret. Dr. Godbey is a man of fine literary attainments and wields a vigorous pen. We welcome him to the honorable fraternity.

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each, and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes.

W. C. BLACK,
112 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

Special Notice.

The public exercises of the session of 1894-5 will be held in the University Chapel at 8:45 A. M., September 13, 1894. Addresses will be made by Hon. R. A. Hill, Hon. G. D. Shands, Rev. P. G. Sears and others. All students are urged and their friends are invited to be present. It is expected that the I. C. R. R. will sell round-trip tickets to visitors from its stations on the twelfth, good for three days.

You are cordially invited.

Contributions for Kobe Training-School.

Yesterday morning, while I was preaching in Crawford Street Church, in Vicksburg, a young drummer, who is a member of no church, happened to drop in. He took the very last seat, being indifferent as to whether he heard the sermon or not. By and by he became interested in the discourse, heard it through with the eagerest attention, and felt for the first time in his life the force of the appeal, "Come over and help us." When the collectors distributed subscription cards for the Kobe Training-school, the young drummer took one of them and wrote as follows:

"Come to Plazza Hotel to-morrow; if not in, will instruct some one to pay you $15. H. B. FAUNT LEROY."

This morning I called at his hotel, and he gave me the fifteen dollars, assuring me at the same time that he did this with his whole heart. Other contributions were also quite liberal, one woman subscribing as much as ten dollars. In all, the contribution from the Crawford Street Church amounts to $80 90. Let other churches also do likewise! Yours truly, T. MASAO.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jno. B. Kent, P. C., Bayou Chicot charge, Louisiana Conference, Sept. 6: "Closed a ten days' meeting at Bayou Clear last night with 7 accessions and a good work done. Bro. Turner rendered valuable aid during the last three days."

Rev. J. C. Mimms, P. C., Arcola station, Sept. 3: "We are progressing finely. Have baptized 3 infants, received 15 members, and have raised funds and let the contract for the building of a nice church, to be completed by the first of November. Conference collections all in cash and subscriptions. We hope to round up everything in full by Conference."

Rev. J. R. Hays, Carthage, Miss.: "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, good-will toward men.' We have just closed our last protracted meeting on this work with wonderful results. The church awakened, strong men made to quake and tremble, 50 family altars, 107 accessions to our church, with more to follow. Forty professed perfect love in God. Three additional prayer meetings and four class meetings. Glory to God for the power of the Holy Ghost! Rev. J. R. Whittington assisted in the meetings. Rev. J. S. Morrill, from Carterville, Ga., was with us in the spirit and power of the Holy Ghost at Carthage. Rev. H. B. Vandenburg, from Walnut Grove, was with us in two of our meetings; Bro. Terry, L. P., in one. To God we give all the glory."

FROM OPELOUSAS DISTRICT.

It may interest many friends to know that revival fires are still burning brightly on the Opelousas district. The two last Quarterly Conferences were held at Prairie Greig, on the Abbeville work, and at Indian Bayou. At Prairie Greig we had a fine meeting, and left the workmen putting the roof on what will doubtless prove the most beautiful country church in the State. It is modeled after that at Abbeville, though somewhat larger; and at Abbeville the popular pastor, Bro. Kelly, has the money in hand to erect a parsonage, which is to be begun at once and completed this Fall. At Indian Bayou the faithful pastor, Bro. Porter, had a revival in full swing when we arrived, Aug. 24, and by the time of our departure, Aug. 29, or five days later, there had been 32 conversions, 5 sanctifications and about 70 accessions. At earlier stages of the meeting Bro. Porter had been assisted by Bros. Manley, Staples and Pilley. It is the second successful revival that has been held on this work, and part of a tidal wave that has swept through the adjacent country, as Crowley, Abbeville, Plaquemine Brulee, Church Point, etc. Journeying to the next appointment on the schedule, we have been here at Opelousas for the past few days attending a meeting conducted by J. S. Morrill, the evangelist, who, like young Apollos, is both eloquent and mighty in the Scriptures; with the result so far of a number of conversions and sanctifications. Among the latter are Bro. E. T. Denson, the pastor, one of our strongest men, his wife and grown daughter, and about twelve or fifteen prominent members of his church. It is a meeting of great power and growing interest. These last-mentioned and more to follow will never oppose holiness again. When the enmity is slain the enemy lays down his arms. To the many who urge us to take up our pen in opposition to the opposers of holiness, we reply to what purpose, but the loss of time, patience and ammunition. When as saintly a man as Dr. Walker can not resist the temptation to assail what now seems to be regarded as the common enemy, and when as wise a head can find no joints between the harness larger than an objection, it is certainly time that simplekins and small fry should make an honest effort to resist impulse in that direction. As little as men may deem it, it is a great virtue, if not the highest wisdom, not to oppose holiness.

REMEMBER there are hundreds of brands of White Lead (so called) on the market that are not White Lead, composed largely of Barytes and other materials. But the number of brands of genuine is limited. The following brands are standard "Old Dutch" process, and just as good as they were when you or your father were boys:

"Southern," "Red Seal," "Collier."

If you want colored paint, tint any of the above strictly pure leads with National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a pound of color to 25 pounds of lead. The best merchants sell them, the best painters use them.

Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and the full month's treatment of two large bottles will be sent to your express address. Agents wanted.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE TONGUE.

(James iii.)

Perfection our aim. Onward, upward. "Nearer, my God, to thee." Perfect is, who offends not in word.

Under "tongue" here understand man's controlling principle, expressed in words. That principle may be good or evil, of God, or of the devil.

The "tongue," as here defined, is compared to

1. Bridle and bit. With it we manage even unruly nags.

(1) Man who follows the lead of emotion or passion will go astray.

(2) Reason only, illuminated by the light from on high, should be our dictator and guide.

2. A rudder. Rudderless ships go to wreck. Impaired rudders expose to great danger.

(1) The rudder requires careful manipulation. Watch and pray.

(2) The rudder is under direction of the compass. On life's ocean only the Word of God will enable us to reach port.

3. A fire. An element of benefaction or of ruin.

(1) The combustion of a match may set a city on fire. A comparatively small sin, "polite quibbling," a white lie, etc., may result disastrously.

(2) Of benefit are the fires beneath the boilers of a steam engine. Sadly destructive were the forest fires in Minnesota last week. Are we a blessing or a curse to our fellow-men?

4. A wild beast. Thought of Hagenbeck's menagery.

(1) Man is naturally inclined to evil. Conceived and born in sin. Conversion tames. The hearts temples of the Holy Ghost.

(2) The tamed wild beast may relapse into primitive fierceness. Falling from grace disastrous.

HOME CIRCLE.

MOTHER'S HYMNS.

Hushed are those lips; their earthly song is ended;
The singer sleeps at last;
While I sit gazing at her armchair vacant,
And think of days long past.

The room still echoes with the old-time music,
As singing soft and low
Those grand, sweet hymns, the Christian's consolation,
She rocks her to and fro.

Some that can stir the heart like shouts of triumph,
Or loud-toned trumpet-call,
Bidding the people prostrate fall before him,
"And crown him Lord of all."

And tender notes, filled with melodious rapture,
That leaned upon his word,
Rose in those strains of solemn, deep affection:
"I love thy kingdom, Lord."

Safe hidden in the wondrous "Rock of Ages,"
She bade farewell to fear,
Sure that her Lord would always gently lead her,
She read her "title clear."

Joyful she saw "from Greenland's icy mountains,"
The gospel flag unfurled;
And knew by faith "the morning light was breaking"
Over a sinful world.

"There is a fountain—" How the tones triumphant
Rose in victorious strains!
"Filled with that precious blood for all the ransomed, Drawn from Immanuel's veins."

Dear saint, in heavenly mansions long since folded,
Safe in God's fostering love,
She joins with rapture in the blissful chorus
Of those bright choirs above.

There, where no tears are known, no pain or sorrow,
Safe beyond Jordan's roll,
She lives forever with her blessed Jesus,
The lover of her soul.

The Gains of Drudgery.

One of the chief lessons which youth has to learn in its apprenticeship to life is the nobleness and gains of drudgery. The least bit of work well done is more to be desired than the most luxurious idleness. The people least to be envied in the world are those who do not know the joy of earning their bread, and are provided for "without the sweet sense of providing." There is, as Carlyle so often assured us, a perennial nobleness in honest toil. The bread for which we have worked is the only bread that is sweet to us, and by it the soul is fed not less than the body. If we can not altogether agree in the aphorism of a great French writer, who is himself an example of amazing industry, that "the man who works is always good," we can at least agree that he has become possessed of the elements of self-reverence and self-control, and aids in its development. For the idle youth is always the vicious youth. To have no work to do, or to take no interest in our work, is to lay ourselves open to the assault of every vice, the seduction of every sin. Those of us who have never known the day when we had no work to do, do not know how much we are indebted to the law of drudgery for such virtue of life and rectitude of thought as we possess. There is a worse hardship than drudgery: the hardship of indolence. The youth who is intent on making the best use of life will recognize that principle, and will learn to be grateful to that invisible Taskmaster who has made his life consistently laborious, and permitted him no bread nor leisure which he has not earned.

But over and above all these considerations that pertain to ourselves and our own interests, there is the obligation which lies upon us in the thought of our relation to the race. Others have built the houses in which we live, the churches in which we worship, the roads by which we travel. By the toil of patriots and sacrifice of martyrs there has been built up, inch by inch, through a thousand years of struggle, the great edifice of liberty and order which is our inheritance to-day. By the patient drudgery of scholars have come the fruits of learning; by the unrecognized heroism and unrewarded labors of many a man, writing in his lonely garret the book that brought him bare bread, the great literature which to-day is our boast and joy, our pride and consolation. We are the heirs of an immeasurable past, the residuary legatees of all the ages. It has been the business of each generation to add its stone to the growing cairn, its contribution to the general wealth of life, and pass upon its way unmurmuring to the final shadows. Our parents drudged for us, and if we are what we are, it is because hands that are long since dust once toiled for us, and generations of vanished lives were sacrificed in our service. He who ignores these obligations is a traitor to the race. As the past toiled for us, so now it is our turn to toil for the future. The gains of a past drudgery we inherit, and it is for us to add to the growing store. And this we may do in the certain conviction that no work well done can be worthless, that the humblest life lived in diligence and patience may be truly noble; for we live under a reign of law, which attaches "to every wrong and error a measured, inevitable penalty, to every rightness and prudence an assured reward—penalty of which the remission can not be purchased; and reward, of which the promise can not be broken."—Rev. W. J. Dawson, in The Young Man.

A Saloon Strike.

There would be some sense in that. A boycott on the saloon wouldn't upset the interests of the working man. The Herald of Gospel Liberty does some figuring: "There is much sympathy for the laborers; their wages are shamefully low just now, with a prospect of a further decline. This sympathy is just, and should be enhanced, and would be, too, if the laborer could be induced to go out on a strike that should reach across the country. They would not in their strike need to lay down their tools of labor and thus for the time stop their wages and close their larder doors. They would only need to drop their beer mugs and go out of the saloons. The saloons are the curses of the poor men. These, far more than a reduction in wages, make the strikes to seem necessary. Supposing a firm employing five hundred men should decree a cut of two dollars a week in wages, the whole land would be in sympathy with a protesting strike. But the saloons of any city will, on the average, take two dollars a week from the laborers. Why not strike against the saloon as well as the manufacturers? More than that. If the workmen were sober, they would have more money to spend at the clothiers, grocers, book stores, butchers, etc., and times would so improve that manufacturers, instead of cutting, could advance the wages of the workmen. Of the $900,000,000 annual drink bill of the nation, it is estimated that the laboring men pay $750,000,000. A strike against the saloons would save all this, or in sixteen years a total sum of $12,000,000,000. This sum would buy all the railroads of the land, or, if the labor men chose, they could with their savings from the saloons duplicate the roads and buy up all the banks in addition."

Home Happiness.

Probably nineteen-twentieths of the happiness you will ever have, you will get at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over, and he feels that he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace with his family is something real. It does not make much difference whether you own your house, or have one little room in that house, you can make that little room a home to you. You can people it with such moods, you can turn to it with such sweet fancies, that it will be fairly luminous with their presence, and will be to you the very perfection of a home. Against this home none of you should ever transgress. You should always treat each other with courtesy. It is often not so difficult to love a person as to be courteous to him. Courtesy is of greater value and a more royal grace than some people seem to think. If you will but be courteous to each other, you will soon learn to love each other more wisely, profoundly, not to say lastingly, than you ever did before.

ROSY-CHEEK AND CURLY-HEAD.

BY EDGAR WADE ABBOT.

When I go home this welcome waits
Each evening when the day is fled;
The pattering of little feet,
Then clinging arms and kisses sweet
From Rosy-cheek and Curly-head.

They come with shouts of rioting;
They're laughing so they scarce can speak!
A pair of highwaymen are they;
And I an easy-yielding prey
To Curly-head and Rosy cheek.

But curly heads will sometimes ache,
And fill our souls with sudden dread;
And roses fade while hearts stand still.
O, may there come no touch of ill
To Rosy-cheek and Curly-head!

God bless all little cheeks of rose!
Where'er they bloom, they sunlight shed.
Bless little heads of rippling hair!
O, take into thy tender care
Each Rosy-cheek and Curly-head!

—Christian Union.

The Courtesies of Life.

Civility is a very desirable trait of character, and sensible people should make a point of keeping it on hand; civility is one of the Christian graces; it is obligatory upon a lady or gentleman, and it is excellent stock in trade for those who wish to get on in the world. We mean civility, not servility. To cringe and fawn and flatter is despicable. Ostentatious politeness, with a profusion of bows and fine speeches, may be burdensome; but a kind word of greeting, a polite attention, a little act of courtesy, is quite another thing.

There are people who have a great deal of that pride which gives one the assurance of being "just as good as anybody else, if not a little better," fancy that to care nothing for what others feel, to take the best, and be foremost by dint of pushing, and never on any account to allow another precedence, is to assert themselves properly. This is a great mistake; such conduct, instead of being an evidence of true independence of character, is a mark of ignorance and vulgarity.

In England and in some parts of continental Europe, vulgar people are rude to those beneath them and servile to those above them. In this free country, where there is no titular rank, the ignorant and ill-mannered are sometimes rude to richer or more fashionable people in order to show their independence.

This is less ignoble than the European fashion, but is more detrimental to those who are guilty of it. In business it is very poor policy indeed. Many American tradesmen and mechanics, many milliners and dressmakers have failed because of the rudeness which they supposed would maintain their dignity, and which customers, who themselves would never be uncivil, were unable to endure. Polite attention to a customer's wishes, the little "thank you" on receipt of an order, marked courtesy to everyone—in short, the constant observance of the Golden Rule, has made the fortune of many a man and many a woman. One millionaire in the dry goods business ascribes his prosperity, in a large degree, to the fact that he never permitted an impertinently "independent" clerk to remain behind his counter.

It is an old adage that "manners make the man." They certainly have a good deal to do with the making of a successful man.—New York Ledger.

To Boys Commencing Business.

Be on hand promptly in the morning at your place of business, and perform cheerfully every duty. Be respectful to your employers and all in authority over you and be polite to every one. Politeness costs nothing and it will help you wonderfully in getting along in the world. Above all, be honest and truthful. The boy who starts in life with a sound mind in a sound body, who falls into no bad habits, who is honest, truthful and industrious, who remembers with grateful love his father and mother, and does not grow away from his church and Sunday-school, has qualities of mind and heart that will insure him success to a remarkable degree, even though endowed with only ordinary capacity; for honor, truth and industry are more than genius. Don't be foppish in your dress and don't buy anything before you have money to pay for it. Shun billiard saloons and be careful how you spend your evenings. Cultivate a taste for reading, and read only good books. With a love for reading you will find in books friends ever true and full of cheer in time of gloom and sweet companionship for lonely hours. And in closing, boys, I would say again, that with truth, honesty and industry and a living faith in God you will succeed.—Youth's Temperance Banner.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. G. Backus, Caseyville circuit: "We have had three meetings on this circuit, and the Lord has graciously revived the church. Some 30 conversions, a few reclamations, and 10 received the blessing of entire sanctification. I don't know when I have witnessed such displays of divine power as was felt at Sweetwater. Ten accessions, and many brought into a richer experience of divine grace. We expect to have a full report at Conference. Halleluiah."

Rev. D. Scarborough, Meridian, Miss., Sept. 4: "Two weeks ago we closed our second protracted meeting for this year here in South Side. Bro. R. A. Breland preached for us seven days with great power, and accomplished much good. He left on Saturday, and the writer held the fort till Monday, when Bro. A. T. Bell came to our assistance. God was with both of these brethren, and they labored faithfully and earnestly. I want to say right here, Mr. Editor, that I can not understand why so many of our preachers want evangelists to help them in their meetings when we have as many good preachers as there are in our Conferences. Give me some of our faithful pastors, who are full of the Holy Ghost, to help me in my meetings, and the evangelists may go, so far as I am concerned. Evangelists are called of God, and do good, but it seems that some of the brethren think they are the only ones who can do much good in a revival. God bless our pastors, who are to-day the 'pillars of the church!' But to my task. Great and lasting good was accomplished during our meeting. The membership of the church was revived, and 15 or 20 were converted. There were 20 accessions to the church, 9 of whom were received by certificate. This makes 80 members we have received up to date. The Lord has done great things for us here in South Side. We have been enabled to complete and paint our church, which is one of the most beautiful in Meridian. We are working hard, and are trying to do all we can for the Lord. We praise him for what he has done for us."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., Aug. 17: "We have just closed a good meeting at Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss. The meeting began on Wednesday before the second Sunday in August, and closed on Wednesday after. Good, solid work was done that will abide. The church was in a bad condition spiritually, and we think it was lifted to a higher plane. We made a special effort to build up our membership. There was a time in my early ministry when my special effort was to add members. I was glad to get anybody in almost any condition; but I have passed that time, and want quality now, and not members so much. Our church and all churches are breaking down with drunkards, liars, defrauders, tattlers, and almost every class of sinners, and it is time to call a halt and put on the brakes. Not that I think we ought not to receive penitents into the church, for that is Bible doctrine; but we ought to be careful that they are penitents, and that they continue to evidence their desire of salvation, etc. And those that are already in the church ought to be informed that we have a Discipline, and that they will be expected to conform their lives to it and the Bible; and if they do not, they will be put out. Our church will never prosper until its ministers and members learn to keep their vows and enforce and obey discipline. Bro. I. L. Peebles, of Enterprise, did the preaching, and he did it well. He is fully consecrated to his work, and is wise in the Scriptures, and he certainly was at his best. He did not deliver a poor sermon; they were far above the average, and are bound to tell out on the spiritual interest of this community. He preaches to please his Lord, and not men; but while he did that, the people of this community were delighted with him, and many good wishes and prayers will follow him. Brethren wishing good, solid work done need not be afraid to risk him. We received 4 good members—3 new ones and 1 by letter—and had a general uplifting in the church. We have nice, good people here. May the good Lord bless them all!"

MADE LIFE A BURDEN.

MISS CRAWFORD.

MISS G. F. CRAWFORD, of Limestone, Me., writes: "For years I suffered monthly from periodic pains which at times were so acute as to render life a burden. I began using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I used seven bottles in as many months and derived so much benefit from it and the home-treatment recommended in his Treatise on Diseases of Women, that I wish every woman throughout our land, suffering in the same way, may be induced to give your medicines and treatment a fair trial." "Favorite Prescription" is a powerful, invigorating tonic and a soothing and strengthening nervine, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. For every "female complaint," it is the only remedy so sure that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't cure, you have your money back.

OBITUARIES.

BUTLER—Died in Rolling Fork, Sharkey county, Miss., May 22, 1894, Mrs. NANNIE BARRETT BUTLER, wife of Capt J. E. Butler, in the sixtieth year of her age. Mrs. Butler was born in Louisiana, and when quite a child moved with her parents to Claiborne county, Miss. Her parents dying when she was twelve years old, she was raised and educated by her aunt, Mrs. Richard Hardin, of Rocky Springs, Miss. At the age of eighteen she was married to Edwin O. Lum, of Rocky Springs, who lived to raise the two daughters with which this union was blessed. Mr. Lum and his youngest daughter died of yellow fever in 1878. Mrs. Butler lived a widow until 1890, when she married Capt. J. E. Butler, of Rolling Fork, Miss.

Mrs. Butler joined the Methodist Church when quite a child, and was always known for her consistent walk and conversation. During the few years she lived in Rolling Fork she won to herself the friendship of the entire community. She lived ever in readiness for her summons to her eternal home, and had no fear of death. She was a woman of prayer. Often her husband found her upon her knees in her room, and family prayers were never neglected in her home when they could be held.

She was a most devoted wife. Her community, her friends, her church will miss her; but her husband's heart will bleed most over her absence. Our sympathy and prayers go out for the bereaved hearts of husband, daughters and sisters, and we thank God that they are partakers of the Christian's hope. Some day may they clasp hands with the loved one gone before!

H. M. ELLIS.

GIBBS—The undersigned committee appointed to draft a suitable expression of the sentiments of the Jefferson Street Sabbath-school upon the death of little LUCY GIBBS, a member of the infant class, respectfully submits the following:

Once more our heavenly Father has sent his messenger to take from the infant class of our Sabbath-school one of the sweetest, dearest of the little flock. Three times, within the past few months, has that angel visitor come, and each time a lovely little girl has been taken from its number, and now he comes again, and after a few days' illness little Lucy Gibbs passes from our sight to a brighter world above.

Her earthly home is made sad. Father, mother, brothers and sisters grieve, because of a broken family circle, a little vacant chair and the absence of a loved form and face.

God, in his infinite wisdom, and we doubt not for some wise purpose, has seen fit thus early to remove her from the sorrowings and sufferings of this life to an eternity of happiness with the blest in heaven; and may the assurance of her safety from all evil and of an eternal reunion in that "better land," together with the precious love of our Savior shed abroad in their hearts, comfort them as no words of ours can!

SUSIE H. READ,

CLARKE—In the Sunday-school of to-day, August 19, (D. A. Cameron, acting as chairman), it was moved and seconded that a committee of two be appointed to draw up resolutions relative to the death of our beloved and esteemed superintendent, J. P. CLARKE.

The following committee was appointed: J. D. Cameron and D. L. Gay. After due deliberation the committee reported as follows:

Whereas, It has been the will of our all-wise Providence to take out of our Sunday-school our beloved superintendent, who has been a true and faithful superintendent in our midst for the past forty years; And, whereas, We bow with meek submission to the will and dispensation of an all-wise Father, who doeth all things well; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we feel with deep regret the heavy loss of our worthy superintendent to our Sunday-school, the church and the community in which he lived, for he was a true friend and noble character in Christian benevolence and purity.

Resolved, That the members of this school shall ever cherish his memory, and we extend our sympathy to his bereaved wife and friends.

Resolved, That a copy of the proceedings be forwarded to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Mississippi Messenger for publication, and also a copy be presented to the bereft wife.

Andrew Chapel Church, Carmichael, Miss.

CONERLY—EARL SIMMONS CONERLY, infant son of W. H. Conerly and wife, and grandson of Rev. W. W. Simmons, of the Mississippi Conference, and wife, was born Dec. 8, 1892, and died in Gloster, Miss., June 29, 1894.

The accumulated sadness and darkness of the hour when death swoops down and takes away a little prattler from the home can only be known to those who have passed through the trying ordeal. The gloom of that hour is, perhaps, unmatched by any other natural occurrence. To meet this trying crucial experience, the blessed Christ puts forth the best energies of his own infinitely compassionate nature in these majestic words: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

C. A. POWELL.

STAYTON—Died in Coushetta, Jan. 14, 1894, BELL STAYTON, youngest daughter of Rev. W. D. Stayton (deceased), of the Louisiana Conference.

"Dead." Sad word to write. Never again to hear her silvery voice singing, "There is a brighter world, I know;" never again to see the bright, sunny face which always brought sunshine with her coming. Bell was ready for the summons. Being asked if all was clear, all things ready for the judgment, her answer came, clear and sweet: "Ready." "Not a cloud." "My papa is waiting for me." To leave her mother was a regret. She was her comfort in her old age. Bereft of her darling child, life is indeed lonely; but beyond the river she will soon meet her loved one gone before.

Farewell, dear Bell. We hope to meet you again where no farewell tears are shed, for today you are happy, while we are in sorrow and tears.

A FRIEND.

HARPER—MRS. ELLEN HARPER (maiden name, Dear) was born in Simpson county, Miss., Jan. 5, 1830, and died at her home, in Sugertown, Caicasien parish, La., March 7, 1894, aged sixty-four years three months and two days. She was left for several years before her death to fight the battle of life alone, her husband having gone on before. She joined the Baptist Church in August, 1889, and lived a consistent Christian to her death, bearing her last sickness of four months with much patience.

She leaves three sons and three daughters to mourn her loss, besides a number of grandchildren. As daughter, wife and mother, devoted and faithful, and as a Christian, she fell at her post.

Missionary Bulletin.

Miss Nannie B. Gaines, of Lessburg, Fla., accompanied by Miss Alice D. Bryan, of Spring Hill, Tenn., sailed from Tacoma for Japan, Aug. 21. Miss Gaines, the first lady volunteer for our work in Japan, has had charge of a school for girls in Hiroshima, and is returning to her field of labor after a year of rest and study in the home land. Miss Bryan goes out at her own expense. These brave soldiers of the cross were not deterred by wars and rumors of wars. We bespeak for them a hearty welcome.

Mrs. A. P. Parker, in addition to her work among the women of Suchow, China, and the valuable assistance rendered Dr. Parker in Buffington College, has published a book on zoology. The Chinese Recorder says: "A careful perusal of the book shows that no pains have been spared by Mrs. Parker to render it highly useful both for school and general purposes. The illustrations form a most attractive feature. Every mission school will welcome it as supplying a long-felt want. It would be a very acceptable present to any Chinaman able to read. Mrs. Parker has in preparation a botany which will be equally acceptable and useful in educational work."

We rejoice to state that the erection of a much needed church in Osaka, Japan, for which we have planned and prayed, is now made sure through the generous donations of two elect ladies. Their modesty being in proportion to their liberality, they request that their names be withheld. Their gifts amounting to $800 will enable us to begin building without delay. Let those who propose contributing to this fund forward the amounts to Dr. David Morton, Louisville, Ky., that the church may be speedily completed.

Rev. O. E. Goddard, of Magnolia, Ark., has been accepted by the Board as a missionary to China, and appointed by Bishop Galloway. In the absence of funds, he and his wife may be detained until next year.

We congratulate the friends of the Cuban Mission upon the recent laying of the corner-stone of the Methodist Church for Cubans in Key West. May the church soon be erected and the members also as living stones be built up a spiritual house!

The Ameer of Afghanistan is a very progressive monarch. He has had an electric light plant erected in Cabul, also a saw and planing mill, a mint, a cartridge factory, an arsenal, gunpowder mills, a boot factory and a soap factory.

Cholera in the German Empire is making progress. It is true that the last official report shows only 53 new cases and 51 deaths, but the danger lies in the greater spread not only in the provinces of east and west Prussia, but to Silesia, Rosen and Hesse. Nassau is now affected, and at Breslau there are a large number of suspects.

Peculiar to Itself.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, in a strictly medicinal sense, in three important particulars, viz: first, in the combination of remedial agents used; second, in the proportion in which they are mixed; third, in the process by which the active curative properties of the preparation are secured. These three important points make Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar in its merit, as it accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Nearly a month has now passed since any important event connected with the war between China and Japan has been reported. The Japanese fleet has made demonstrations before several Chinese strongholds, but the Chinese fleet has apparently disappeared from the scene. It is understood that both powers are constantly re-enforcing their forces in Corea, but no decisive engagement has taken place since the fights of a month ago.

A person is prematurely old when baldness occurs before the forty-fifth year. Use Hall's Hair Renewer to keep the scalp healthy and prevent baldness.

Every drunkard used to boast that he could drink or let it alone.

Cured with One Bottle.

Mr. Jordon Baker, Tifton, Ga., had muscular rheumatism for ten years. After using a bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, he wrote to the manufacturers that he was satisfied he would be cured by the time the bottle would be used up. If you want satisfaction, insist on having Drummond's Lightning Remedy. Nothing can take its place. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and two large bottles of the remedy will be sent to your express address. Agents wanted.

Wanted.

BY A YOUNG PREACHER.

I want to attend Millsaps College three or four years, and in order to do so I must have the assurance of six or eight boarders at ten dollars per month. With these, by the strictest economy, I can make my way through.

I have small family, and can easily make ample arrangements to care for the stipulated number of boarders. I could enter the "traveling connection" now, so far as the requirements of an English education are concerned, but, knowing the present and future demands of the church for thoroughly cultured ministers, I am resolved, if possible, to finish a college course before entering the "ranks."

Should my case address itself to the Christian sentiment of any parents or guardians, they will please communicate with me. Brethren of the "cloth," do what you can for me, and if I live, 'twill not be lost.

Fraternally,

SUN OF MY SOUL.

BY JOHN KEBLE.

Sun of my soul, thou Savior dear,
It is not night if thou be near;
O may no earth-born cloud arise,
To hide thee from thy servant's eyes.

When the soft dews of kindly sleep
My weary eyelids gently steep,
Be my last thought, how sweet to rest
Forever on my Savior's breast.

Abide with me from morn till eve,
For without thee I can not live;
Abide with me when night is nigh,
For without thee I dare not die.

If some poor wandering child of thine
Has spurned to day the voice divine,
Now, Lord, the gracious word begin;
Let him no more lie down in sin.

Come near and bless us when we wake,
Ere through the world our way we take;
Till in the ocean of thy love
We lose ourselves in heaven above.

"Our Own Schools."

Other things being equal, we should give preference to our own schools. If we do not sustain our own schools, who will?—Editorial in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of Aug. 30.

Every thinking reader will readily see the wisdom and truth contained in the above suggestions.

In this day of State education and sharp competition, if there be for it what we claim for the church school, if there be any force in the strong paper from the pen of Dr. Murrah, which also appears in the same issue of the ADVOCATE, then let us think on these things.

The public school report—1892-93—of Hon. J. R. Preston, Superintendent of Education of Mississippi, contains the names of sixty-five high schools and colleges in the State. I can put no other construction upon these figures than that the people are not satisfied with the curriculum (or management) of the public schools. Our people seem to have become possessed with the idea of more thorough and more comprehensive instruction. There was a time in our Southland when the standard was that of bank accounts and stock in trade; but the line now is being drawn between the educated and the uneducated, the cultured and the uncultured. He or she is the most worthy who is the most deserving. Realizing this, every thoughtful parent is bending every effort to give to sons and daughters every possible advantage in the field of letters.

After all, the term education is a comparative one, and comprehends more or less, according to the age and surroundings. Of late the term has come to mean more than in the years agone. In the days of our fathers few went beyond the "old field school." The academic advantages were limited, and he who could find himself inside of college walls was fortunate above his fellows. Not so in this day of trained teachers and cheap education. It is being demonstrated to us every year, and at all of our colleges, that he who wants an education can secure it. With pluck and economy (such as is necessary to make a success in life even with a diploma) any young man can obtain a college course. The academic and college training in this day scarcely allow the claims of education. The academy only serves as a step to the college, and, with diploma in hand, the ambitious collegian pushes his way into the university, that he may finish his course.

Not only is this the spirit with our males, but the young women of our land have realized the same great force, and have demanded admission to our universities. Harvard and Vanderbilt stand alongside of Vassar and the Woman's College.

The advance in all scientific knowledge, and the close proximity into which steam has brought all parts of our globe, have made these advances necessary to business ends and polite circles. In developing this condition no agency has been so potent in our land as the church, since seventy-five per cent. of the colleges, we are told, are the property of the church.

Our own beloved Methodism has not been behind in the race, and our especial branch seems to have developed so much of energy that we must appoint a wise leader to direct, lest we dissipate our strength. Dr. Kirkland should have our prayers, that he may plan wisely and well.

Much has been said about cheap education. What we want is to cheapen, as much as possible, higher education. The universal outcry is for endowment, and while we all realize the great advantage endowment gives if Methodists were only loyal to Methodist institutions, we could, at every point, compete successfully with the State, do more for the religious development, and strengthen our Methodism immeasurably.

While I have no fight to make against the public schools of our land, but rather look upon them as a necessity for the masses, I believe it the duty of the church to shape, as far as possible, all education.

As Protestants, I believe we may learn a very wholesome lesson from the Catholic Church upon that one point. Only Catholics should educate Catholic children is their motto, and to secure that end we see the black veil of the nun, we hear the vows of poverty, and we learn the most impressive lesson of loyalty to church and principle.

It may yet be that Methodism, if she do her full work in this department, shall have to raise up those who are ready to spend and be spent in this cause. Those who shall count it a privilege to sacrifice all ideas of money making to keep up this arm of the church, as no other department of church work does more than promise a living to the laborer. I do not see why school property dedicated to Christian education should be used to enrich those who have it in hand.

So, Mr. Editor, I would emphasize, "If we do not sustain our own schools, who will?" And also if we do not make sacrifices for these schools, who will?

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

That Neglected District—Bro. Keener's Criticism.

While I have no doubt but the authors of the resolution adopted by the Opelousas District Conference are amply able to take care of themselves and of their resolution, as a supporter of the policy outlined by them, and a member of that very presumptuous body of ministers, I beg leave to call Bro. Keener's attention to some "facts" of which he does not seem to be advised.

First, it is a fact that neither Bro. Keener, nor other "wide-awake men," who have been employed within the bounds of the Opelousas district "during the last twelve years," have done very much in church building or otherwise extending our Zion. I hope Bro. Keener will tell us who but all those churches in Cameron parish "during the last twelve years!" There is only one in the whole parish, and that seems to be of much greater antiquity than "twelve years." Tell us also who built all those churches in Calcasieu parish, a parish having a tax value of about seven and a quarter millions of dollars? Outside of the city of Lake Charles there are only three churches, and two of them were built during the presidency on the district of Rev. J. A. Miller. Bro. Keener might also be able to tell who built all those churches in Vermilion, Iberia, Acadia, St. Martin, and St. Mary parishes. These are facts to which I desire to call Bro. Keener's attention, as pointers to the vast achievments of the "wide-awake men" who have labored here during "the last twelve years."

But none of these things are germane to the question involved in the resolution criticised by Bro. Keener. The question is, Has the Church Extension Society, in any sense, intentionally or unintentionally, neglected the territory embraced in the Opelousas district? Bro. Keener says, "With a vengeance!" and argues that during "the last twelve years" the district has received "thirty-three hundred dollars," and has paid "twelve hundred and fifty-seven dollars." He says the Opelousas district has received "two hundred dollars more than the New Orleans district" has received. But he does not say that one church, replacing a better house of worship than nine-tenths of those in the Opelousas district, and right in the heart of the city of New Orleans, received nearly half as much help from the Church Extension Society as the whole Opelousas district. Nor does he tell us that more than one-third of all the money coming into the Opelousas district was spent on one of the oldest congregations in the district.

But in order to see whether or not the District Conference was justified in passing that resolution, after assuring Bro. Keener that no "reflection" on any man, or set of men, was ever once thought of by the Conference, let us look at some "facts" which were before the Conference, or, at least, in the minds of some of the members when the resolution was adopted.

"Winfield Memorial Church," at Little Rock, Ark., in a Protestant city, after tearing down, or abandoning, a better house than we have in Lake Charles, received donations to the extent of $4,000. One church at Hot Springs, in the same Conference, received $4 000, and another church in the same town received $500. Here is $8 500 donated to two towns, where better churches already existed than most of ours in Southwest Louisiana.

Now, look at the Montana Conference. With less than one-third the number of members which we have in the Opelousas district, and only three more traveling preachers, in a thoroughly Protestant section of the country, the General Board appropriated to them $3,617. In the Los Angeles Conference, during these last "twelve years," the General Board gave $4 500 to two churches, while here, in seven large parishes, in a purely missionary country, we are asked to be satisfied with $2 000, and required to say, "it is enough!"

But this is not all. Bro. Keener scores a point on the fact that while the Opelousas district has received $3 300 from the two Church Extension Boards, the people of the district have paid only a little over twelve hundred dollars. This logic is bad, and the principle involved is worse—its cardinal virtue is expressed by: "Make the rich richer, and the poor poorer." This will not do for a guide. If a church, or a community, or a Conference, is to pay as much as it receives, it would be a pious act to disband our Boards, and "go out of business." If the Opelousas district does not pay as much per capita as other sections of the country, it is in order to say so, and try to get the people to do better. But it is not even good policy to say to a people, "You can get no more than you give."

No, we do not want everything, but we do want an equitable division.

J. A. PARKER.

Connectional Agents and Agencies

A bare taste of a connectional agency is enough to satisfy one that this is not the most pleasant kind of work. We establish things, set them up, start them off and then let them go—if they can. This is true of colleges, schools, publishing houses, missions, negro churches, the Bible cause and other great enterprises of the church. Agents representing these enterprises are not popular, are not much in demand, are not heartily welcomed in some places and in some charges. Their coming is dreaded, and a collection for any one of these enterprises is a positive offense to some clever people. It is quite chilling to make an appointment some weeks in advance, to be cordially welcomed in a card by mail, and, then, on arrival to have a leading member of the Official Board meet you and say, "Well, right here and now, I want to enter a solemn protest to your taking a collection in our church for the Bible cause, or for the —— college." If this protest had been entered when the appointment to preach was being provided for, and before the agent was on the ground, it would have been different. But to wait till he is on the ground and after expense has been incurred, and then refuse the small pittance asked for, even enough to meet the outlay already made, is too bad, too bad. If the agent had been informed beforehand that no collection would be allowed, he could, at least, have saved to the cause the expenses of his trip. He could have stayed at home, or gone somewhere else. When this happens to an agent for a great church enterprise, the first and most natural impulse is to shake off the dust from his feet and to depart out of that city or charge; and yet he feels like he ought not to do an ugly, or ungracious thing, because the people do them. It is not the agent's college, or Bible cause, that he comes to represent, but your own, God's and Christ's. These enterprises were set on foot by you, by your church, or by the general church of God. You have no right to turn the cold shoulder to them. They can not get along without your help, co-operation and hearty support. Welcome the agent, the agent of your school, hear his message and contribute what you can to the cause. If you have nothing to give, and no interest in the work, do not block the way of others who have an interest and want to help the work.

From personal observation, and also from information furnished by college agents, and agents for the American Bible Society, I am inclined to believe that most of this kind of trouble comes from our larger towns and cities, and our stronger and wealthier churches. In many instances, as a church grows in numbers and in financial strength, it grows in selfishness and loses in connectional spirit. It is all for home and nothing for the outside. This is, often, as true of individuals as of congregations. It ought not so to be, but so it is.

An agency for any one of those great enterprises is a great and glorious calling, but men of extraordinary piety, or else of uncommonly thick hides, ought to be chosen to fill these positions. A timid man, a coward, a time-server, or a nervous, thin-skinned man, is not fit for the place. An agent needs grace in his heart, and brass in his face, and a peck of brains in his head. Of all men in the world he needs most to be a man of courage and of common sense—a man of tact. The man who covets an agency, covets a hard corner and a lot of most ungracious work. He has to row against the current all the time—it is up stream all the way.

May God pity and bless all the agents of all our connectional enterprises.

GILDEROY.

In the Living Present.

The Count de Paris, wealthy, erudite, died in London, on Friday, Sept. 7. He was the grandson of Louis Philip, the last King of France. When in 1848 the revolution swept away the monarchy, the entire royal family moved to London. The departed was then ten years of age. After the death of Count de Chambourd, a few years ago, he was the sole pretender to the French throne. During our late revolution he served as aid de camp to Gen. McClellan. He wrote a history of that revolution, being unduly severe on the people in our Southland. He was a regular contributor to the English magazines. His style of writing was ornate, if not pedantic. The successor to the monarchical pretensions of the departed is his son, twenty-five years of age.

Is the accumulation of vast fortunes among a few a calamity? Their money is operative in the hands of debtors. Certainly their millions are not lying idle. Thousands are the custodians of the wealth of the millionaires. But people are not inclined to listen to reason in these matters. The dictum has gone forth that excessive opulence is baneful. Well, then, there is fair prospect that the two hundred thousand millions of the four Rothschild families in London, Paris, Frankfurt-on-the-Main and Vienna will soon change hands. Owing to intermarriage in their family, the progeny is characterized by intellectual imbecility. The sons of the present leaders will be unable to manage their vast estate.

In London, where thousands live in squalor and want, where daily the corpses of paupers are hurriedly put away in Potter's Field, there is a graveyard for dogs. It is located in Hyde Park. Eighty canines lie buried there. All have head-stones, some of them very valuable! Incredible, you say? Well, I have seen women (shall I say, ladies?) who would be ashamed to be seen on the street with a baby in their arms carry a dog in said arms, and that on our most popular promenades.

Since Zola's book on that subject, Lourdes has been on many tongues. The author has added to the income of the ecclesiastical strategists. This was not Zola's design, but it is true nevertheless. Thirty-five thousand people have visited the grotto during the last twelve months—far more than formerly. According to the popular legend, in 1858 the "Virgin Mary" appeared to a peasant girl, Bernadette Soubirous, informing her of the healing quality of the water of a near brook. It is a romantic spot in the Pyrenees, France. Soon it was reported that miraculous cures were effected by using said water. Two churches, several hotels, etc., have been built on the "sacred" spot. Daily thousands of pilgrims, headed by priests, arrive, drink, bathe and pray. All physical ailments subside! If that "Virgin Mary" was a land speculator, he has been eminently paid for his trouble.

Letter from Florida.

MR. EDITOR: I am the oldest member of the North Mississippi Conference; seventy-eight years old the thirteenth of next October; joined the Memphis Conference in the year '40, and am now a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, having, through the providence of God, been so wonderfully spared. Though living in South Florida, I concluded to visit the General Conference, and also the Old Dominion, where I traveled and preached fifty-four years ago; and also visited two of my sons living in and near Holly Springs, Miss., and one in Jackson, Miss. I only got to look on the Conference two days. They were a fine-looking body of men. They transacted business well, I thought, keeping fine order. I was pleased with what I saw, except one thing. It may be unpopular to mention that; but as I am not seeking popularity, I will speak out. That band of music, the organ, cornet and fiddles, and two banjos—these things Jesus and his disciples never used, but taught the people to "sing with the spirit and understanding, making melody in their hearts to the Lord." This is the way I was taught to sing and worship when I was converted 61 years ago. It is said by one who has introduced a fiddle in his church since Conference, that those who object are the more ignorant of the church. Well, I am willing to be called a fool for Christ's sake. But I set out to give you a sketch of my travels.

I returned to my old field of labor, where I preached fifty-three years ago, and in old Emery circuit, where in the year '42 there were 650 conversions, and the next year with that precious, good man, John Kesterson, on the same work, 350 souls were converted. The memory of those years is precious to my memory. I saw some of the converts, but most have passed away. My old friend, Rev. J. W. Poston, assisted me in getting around with the aid of my dear son, S. J. Carson. I only preached twenty-one times during the two months I was gone. This enabled me to see a number of my friends. I left Holly Springs, on July 6, for Jackson, Miss., to visit my son, T. B. Carson. It was a joyful meeting. Here I found Bro. Mounger, P. E., and Bro. West, of Capitol Street Church, and Bro. Watkins, of First Church. These brethren, Mounger, West and my son, did me the kindness to carry me around and show me the city. I must say, so far as I saw Jackson, I was very much pleased with the city, and if I could be induced to leave South Florida, it would be to go to Jackson. I visited the Asylum. Oh how it touched my heart to see those poor afflicted creatures. Dr. Mitchel and his assistants are managing everything very nicely. It is gratifying to know that the inmates are well cared for. I visited the Penitentiary. I found everything in good order, so far as I could see. I visited the State House; it looks ancient. Well, the Penitentiary, farm, in my judgment, is a tremendous step forward. Every State and county should have one. Millsaps College is a good building. I had the pleasure of shaking the hand of Dr. Murrah. The school for colored girls is convenient and nicely kept. The novelty works, the ice factory and creamery are all well managed. I preached once in Bro. West's church; the people seemed to appreciate my little talk. I also held prayer meeting for Bro. Watkins, and gave a little talk on the institution and design of prayer. I left Jackson, Thursday, July 12; got safe through the strikes. Preached in Bartow, Fla., Sunday night; reached home Monday, safe and sound. The Lord be praised. Traveled near 3000 miles, preached twenty-one times. Bless God for such health and strength at this advanced age. Yours,

S. B. CARSON.

Opening of East Mississippi Female College.

East Mississippi Female College had a delightful opening on yesterday. The audience was unusually large, and the exercises interesting. The more important features of the occasion were the presence and organization of a large number of the alumnæ of the institution, the address of Rev. B. F. Lewis on "The History and Future of the College," and the enrollment of twenty-five per cent. more pupils than at the beginning of the last session, with the prospect of twenty-five per cent. to be added to the present registry. The buildings are substantial, ample, and well adapted to the wants of a first-class college. The removal of the old wood buildings in the rear has given larger grounds to the campus, which adds much to the comfort and beauty of the situation. This meets a long-felt want, and will inspire enthusiasm in attractive embellishments. The college is located in the heart of the city, within three blocks of Central Church, on high and beautifully undulating grounds, with plenty of good, fresh water, brought from one of the purest streams in the State. This, with good ventilation, affording the free circulation of pure, fresh air, puts the healthfulness of the college beyond question.

We give our hearty endorsement of Bro. and Sister Holloman, with their well-chosen faculty. I see no occasion for sending girls by Meridian while we have such facilities for their literary, scientific and religious instruction. The government is parental, home-like, tender, yet firm. The boarding department is ample in its provisions, and free and easy in its family characteristics. Send on your daughters, and they will be well cared for.

Whitworth College.

College opened finely. New students are being enrolled daily. There is much enthusiasm among the Brookhaven people over the present prospects.

ATTENTION,

Every preacher is invited to be present at our teachers' recital on Friday, Sept. 21. The public generally is invited to come on that day and inspect our work.

A lady who has patronized Whitworth for twenty years, after she had seen her children settled, said to our matron, "I leave Whitworth better satisfied and more pleased than ever before."

PARENTS,

if you want to be pleased and satisfied, send your daughters to Whitworth at once. Two years' work has been added, and the literary department brought up to the same high standard maintained by the conservatory of music and art.

To the Women of Southern Methodism.

A call for city missionaries has come to the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. The need for their service in connection with the work of the pastor is great, and is so recognized by many of our city pastors. In many of our Southern and Western cities statistics give an alarming proportion of unsaved men, women, and children. Crowds of these deathless dead are found on street corners—they swarm in back alleys. The church bell means nothing to them. They have no Sabbath, no evening prayer, no blessed Bible, no God, no hope. And we let them die! It must not be. The command is to us, "Go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in." My sisters, "Christ hath no hands, no feet, save yours and mine." He is waiting, longing to go, through us. He can go no other way, and he died for those lost ones. Over in that humble home is a life all burdened with sin and woe. The Master would lift that load and soothe away the pain, but you have tied his hands by folding your own. His wounded feet would move swiftly to the rescue, but your indifference has clogged them with heavy weights. Yonder stands a white-haired woman heart-hungry for Christian sympathy and love. I saw her. Trouble, such as you never knew, has embittered her life and broken her hold on God. Go to her before she dies. Aye, hundreds need you, and you need them. Who will answer, "Here am I"? Let the whole society fast and pray, that the spirit of the living God may fill closet, home and heart, and scores of our Christian women offer themselves for the Master's service.

A LITTLE BIRD I AM.

Madame Guyon was born in France in 1648. he was several times imprisoned because of her religious views, and was twice shut up in the Bastile, the famous prison of France. Her trust in God is shown in the following lines, which are ascribed to her. Although she died so very long ago, her influence still lives

A little bird I am,
Shut from the fields of air,
And in my cage I sit and sing
To Him who placed me there:
Well pleased a prisoner to be,
Because, my God, it pleases thee.

Naught have I else to do,
I sing the whole day long,
And He whom most I love to please
Doth listen to my song;
He caught and bound my wandering wing,
But still He bends to hear me sing.

My cage confines me round,
Abroad I can not fly;
But, though my wing is closely bound,
My heart's at liberty:
My prison walls can not control
The flight, the freedom of the soul.

O, it is good to soar
These bolts and bars above,
To Him whose purpose I adore,
Whose providence I love,
And in His mighty will to find
The joy, the freedom of the mind.

The "Residue Theory."

REPLY TO BRO. D. G. W. ELLIS.

It is wonderful indeed how any Methodist preacher who is at all familiar with the plain, unmistakable teaching of our Methodist standards can write as Bro. D. G. W. Ellis does in the ADVOCATE, of Aug. 30, and Dr. Walker in a previous issue.

Both of these old brethren passed examination in the very standards we have to-day, together with the many others who are fighting this precious old Methodist doctrine; and the supposition is that they passed an approved examination—that is, that they so answered the questions of the committee as to lead them to believe they understood them, and, of course, that they believed just what they were being taught.

Now, just as plain as words can make it, Mr. Wesley, in his sermons on "Sin in Believers" and "Repentance of Believers," says that inbred sin remains in the heart after conversion, and that it is destroyed in the work of entire sanctification. Let it be understood that there are thousands of these books in the hands of our preachers, who are studying them as the accepted standards of our church, and during the present year the class of the first year in forty-three Conferences will answer questions concerning inbred sin and entire sanctification, and in those answers they will say just as Mr. Wesley does—that inbred sin remaining in the heart after conversion is destroyed by the Holy Ghost in the work of entire sanctification.

Will Bro. Ellis please take his article in one hand and the standards of his church in the other, and see if he can reconcile the two; and if not, will he please say who it is that is setting forth strange or new doctrine? Let us be consistent, brother. Who is authority here, Dr. Walker and Bro. Ellis, or the doctrinal statements handed down to us from the founders of our church?—statements which the Methodist Church to-day presents to the world as a part of her creed. If what these brethren say is true, then our church is guilty of the terrible sin of teaching our young preachers a false doctrine.

I would that our church people had our theological books, and would read these things for themselves. And they are becoming more and more awake to these great truths; and the time is not far distant when these brethren will appear in a bad light before an intelligent people, who know for themselves what our church teaches.

I am sorry to say that some of our people have been excluded from our church for professing an experience that was in exact accord with that of the founder of Methodism. That the readers of this article may know that our standards do teach the doctrine of inbred sin and sanctification as an instantaneous work wrought in the heart by the Holy Ghost, I call their attention to Wesley's sermons on "Sin in Believers," "Repentance of Believers," "Circumcision of the Heart," etc.; also to Watson's Institutes, Part 2, on page 614; McTyeire's History of Methodism, pages 327 to 330; also the Discipline containing the address of the Bishops to the General Conference of 1832, which teaches the "second blessing" as plain as words can make it. Then take our Standard Hymn Book and read Hymns 407 to 451, and you will see that the doctrine is taught as plainly as teaching can be in poetry.

Now, brethren, in all politeness, what do you propose to do? You see you are out of harmony with the church, for our books are literally honeycombed with the doctrine of entire sanctification. Hereafter in preaching on the subject, and writing, too, would it not be proper that you tell the people that you are not Methodist preachers; that you don't accept Methodist doctrine? Many of them have ascertained this fact already. You can, of course, believe as you please. The Constitution of the United States guarantees you that right; but the Methodist Church does not, while you minister at her altars. You may side with the Campbellites, but you ought not while you are a Methodist preacher.

Now, Bro. Ellis, be consistent, reread your itinerant school books, and see what your church demands of you, and set yourself right in the ADVOCATE.

"Letters on Baptism."

MR. EDITOR: I have just finished reading "Letters on Baptism," by Dr. Edmund B. Fairfield, and I wish, through your paper, to commend it to our preachers and people. It is in every way an admirable work—simple in style, Christian in spirit, and strong in argument. For more than twenty-five years the author was a Baptist and a strict immersionist. So high was his standing in that denomination that a Baptist publishing house, wishing to issue a large volume in defense of Baptist views upon the subject of baptism, engaged him to write it. Confident of his ability to make an unanswerable argument in favor of immersion as the only mode of baptism, he set himself to work and began a careful re-examination of the whole subject. Much to his surprise and chagrin, as he continued to turn on the calcium light of investigation, he found that the passages of Scripture on which he had so confidently relied were against him, and that the arguments which he had once considered so convincing were in reality worth but little. The outcome of the whole matter was that he changed his views and became a pedo-Baptist. An intimate friend, wishing to know his reasons for changing his opinion and church relations, opened up a correspondence with him upon the subject. Dr. Fairfield's letters in response to the inquiries of his friend, arranged in regular order, constitute the present volume. His manner of dealing with the claims of exclusive immersionists is able and scholarly, and to my mind his refutation of their theory is crushing and complete. But what I like best about the book is not its strong opposition to Baptist views (they have been successfully controverted many times before), but its full vindication of the position of the Methodist Church upon the subject of baptism as distinguished from that of the Presbyterian Church. We have long been charged with inconsistency in immersing applicants for church membership who desire to be baptized in that way. Some of our preachers even have gone so far as to express regret that our church permits immersion under any circumstances whatever. Dr. Fairfield says that it is perfectly legitimate, according to the teachings of the Bible, to permit it. He contends that the word "baptize," wherever found in the Scriptures, stands for the general idea of ceremonial cleansing, and that the rite of baptism may, without any material difference, be administered by sprinkling, by affusion, or by immersion. This, as I understand it, is exactly the position of the Methodist Church.

I wish for this little volume a wide circulation among our people, and I shall be pleased if what I have here said concerning it should result in placing it in one home into which it would not otherwise have gone.

Merchandise in the Sanctuary.

I remember a few years ago the superannuated brother, whose living was scant and opportunities few, that visited the protracted and camp meetings with his basket of Bibles and religious books, and sold them to the members of the congregation in church before and after worship. Then came the appointed colporter to our meetings and Conferences, and, when his trunks and boxes were unpacked, the rear of the church was strewn with books, Bibles, and Disciplines. Later a line of stationery was added to this outfit, and our brethren supplied themselves with pens, pencils, and paper of almost any variety and description in God's house, and recently to the merchandise carried on in the sacred sanctuary of our Lord chewing gum has been added.

Turning to John ii, 13-16, I read: "And Jesus went up to Jerusalem, and found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting: and when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables; and said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise."

When we remember that these oxen, sheep and doves were used in the temple worship for sacrifice, and their presence and offered sale at the temple was a great convenience to the worshiper, we easily see the ancient type of our present church merchant of theological wares.

We can never teach our children and others to "reverence the sanctuary" while we make it a "house of merchandise;" and when we reprove the young and thoughtless for unbecoming conduct in church, we should be sure they have not found their model of irreverence in us. Our preachers well know that this is the author of great confusion at Annual and District Conferences, to say nothing of the tendency to sink respect for the house of God to the mean level of that for any book store or news stand. For the sanctity of his Father's house Christ resorted to violence, and we can not expect him to bring the blessings of his abiding presence and love to temples the likeness of that to which he carried the scourge.

Correspondence.

From Summit, Miss.

We are moving on as well as some of us know how on the Summit work. I have the heaviest charge on my hands I ever had, I think. The good Lord has blessed me with good health this year, and I have some local preachers who have been of good service to me and the work. God bless our local brethren! They labor without "fee or reward;" only as God rewards them. Bro. M. G. Felder, especially, has been a great help to me. I do not think I ever served a better people, take them all in all, than I am serving now. There are some hitches, but the work, in the main, moves smoothly on. We have here, as elsewhere, some "chronic grumblers." Do the best you can, there are some you can't please.

Our meetings, while they have not been failures, have not produced the visible results we expected to see. There are some old difficulties among some of our people that ought to be settled. God help me to manage these brethren wisely.

Our Topisaw Camp Meeting passed off quietly. There were eleven itinerant and four local preachers with us first and last. There were about fifteen applications for membership, several conversions. The subject of "sanctification" and "thorough consecration" were urged upon the people by those who did the preaching. Bros. Burton, Miller, Lewis (W. B.), Moore, Jones (L. J.) and Norsworthy, did most of the preaching.

Our new church here in Summit is about completed, except painting. We built according to prospective No. 109 "frame" in Benjamin D. Price's church plans for 1893, page 38. It has a seating capacity of 230, besides the class room. The tower is 9x9 feet, 60 feet high. Our church is a thing of beauty, admired by nearly everyone, old and young, Jews and Gentiles, saints and sinners.

We began work on the building on May 10, and on Sunday, the twenty-sixth of August, we held our first service in it. A large congregation greeted the pastor, and at eleven o'clock the service began by reading Psalm cxxii. The 271st hymn was sung; prayer by the pastor. The text for the occasion is in Matt. xxii, 4. At the close of the sermon three persons were received, two by certificate and one by Discipline. We had a good service.

By the way, I wish everybody would procure a copy of "Letters on Baptism," by Fairfield, and read same carefully.

Note from Opelousas District.

Having just returned from the Prairie Hayes quarterly meeting, held at Prudhomme City, eighteen miles northwest of Opelousas, I hereby send you tidings of the remarkable revival held there. More than one hundred people professed conversion, a church was organized with about seventy members, a Sunday-school was also started, and at the close of the revival services on Wednesday last a sufficient amount of money was realized at a public collection to build a house of worship. The conversions included the "hardest cases" in all that section of country, and the accessions to the church many of the leading families in this fine and growing community. For nearly twenty years, until recently, Prudhomme has been without regular preaching, and some account of the transformation wrought by the Holy Spirit may be obtained from the circumstances that the young church is seriously contemplating a settled pastor. The church building at this place, which is to be erected at once, makes the third in order in St. Landry parish, for which during the past four weeks provision has been by public collections, on Quarterly Conference occasions. Bro. W. D. Pickens, called to preach and appointed to this charge during the year, is the popular preacher in charge, and in connection with Bro. Pilley had begun the meeting before our arrival, though the writer was on the scene in time to witness at least one hundred conversions in the almost unprecedentedly short space of four days. Bro. Deason's meeting at Opelousas has resulted so far in about sixty sanctifications and conversions, the former preponderating, and it is still in progress.

Leaf River Camp Meeting.

We had a glorious meeting at this camp on the Estabuchie circuit, beginning Thursday night, Aug. 30. At the request of the tenters, Mrs. Mary McGee Scott had been invited, but failed to come on account of sickness. Bro. Forsyth began the service; the presiding elder came the next day; we pressed into service Rev. G. H. Northen, a wide-awake temperance evangelist, and good service he gave. Bros. Emery and H. J. Harris came on Saturday, and C. H. Ellis on Monday. The above, with Bro. Gilmore, local preacher, constituted the preaching force.

The preaching was earnest, practical, incisive, and in demonstration of the Spirit, and the Lord owned and blessed it with gracious results. The membership of the church was greatly stirred and blessed; some who had never been converted and others who had lacked the assurance of acceptance receiving clearly the witness of the Spirit. Sinner were convicted and converted. Considerable interest was awakened on the subject of entire sanctification; and it was estimated that fifteen or twenty entered into the experience. A noble band of workers from Bethel Church and several from Laurel—new converts—did splendid service. Sister C. H. Ellis was a power for good.

Tuesday afternoon and night was the time for a regular cloud-burst. The harmony which marked the meeting was delightful, and presiding elder, pastor and helpers all got rich, personal blessings from the meeting. We look for grand times on this camp ground hereafter. To God be the glory!

Indian Mission.

Our work among the Choctaws is slowly, but gradually, growing. We have had many difficulties to contend with, but I think I can safely say now that our mission is a success, if carefully managed in the future.

I have just closed my school, which was a success, and proves beyond a doubt that one of the best things we can do for the Indians is to educate them.

Bro. C. McDonald, P. E., was with us on Aug. 31. He preached and held Quarterly Conference, administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, licensed one Indian to preach; besides, received three applications for church membership.

We continued the meeting through Saturday and Sunday, and received seven other members and baptized one infant, Dan Miller Wilson. I have baptized thirteen adults and six infants this year. This makes forty-five adults and ten infants in all since we began. If I only had the means with which to buy land and build houses, I am confident we would soon have a school and church at Tali-Chuck of which we would all be proud.

Brethren and friends, will you not help us? I have received several contributions from friends this year, and forwarded the names, but for some reason they have not yet appeared in the ADVOCATE; hope they will yet appear.

Lake Camp Meeting.

Our camp meeting was a grand success. Every tent was occupied at some time during the meeting, and the attendance was better than it has been for some years. While it was to be lamented that the Rev. E. G. Kilgore failed to come on account of having slow fever, and Rev. J. W. Chambers and others from various causes, nevertheless we had a good corps of preachers that did excellent work. We had with us at some time during the meeting the following brethren, and some of them all of the time: Revs. C. McDonald, P. E., W. M. Williams, R. H. Barr, B. S. Rayner, P. D. Hardin, J. M. Morse, L. P., L. P. Meador, John Burton, L. P., R. W. Burton, L. P., and Jas. Weems. These brethren were all faithful and true. Results: 18 accessions to the Methodist Church, and 10 gave their hands to join the Baptist Church, with 40 conversions, and glorious revival prevailed from day to day. Men, women, boys and girls talked of the love of Christ in their souls. Many family altars were erected to God. To God be all the glory.

Dry Rot.

Culture and intellectualism are good, but when they are substituted for vital religion are fatal to life. Spiritual life can not subsist on mere "culture," unless it also be culture of the heart. Unless there be that which stirs the soul with living convictions and fires it with a holy purpose, the form of religion is sure to give way to a paralyzing indifferentism. Nothing will so quickly doom a church as such indifference. "Because thou art lukewarm and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth." Hearts set on fire by the power of God; lives filled with a passion of Christ and for men, are what will make the working church. The Christian Register clearly sees this need and speaks pointedly: "The greatest foe to the church is dry rot. Indifference is more to be feared than opposition, skepticism, or fanatic zeal. These often act as spurs to stimulate to activity; but lack of interest brings paralysis and death. Nothing is to be dreaded as this enemy to all growth and prosperity. Our activity is always to be measured by the interest which we have in any given object. Where your heart is, there will go your treasure also. If our religious convictions are feeble, then we will do little. Hence, in all missionary activity, the first aim should be to awaken a religious interest in the individual. When the soul is all alive, then it will be on fire. There is no need to go far to multiply words. The case can be put into a nutshell. What we are really interested in the work for. If we do not work for the church and what it stands for, it is because we are indifferent. What we do for a cause, other things being equal, is the exact measure of our real devotion. Hence, would we stimulate a missionary spirit, we must first awaken in others more vital personal religious convictions."—Methodist Recorder.

Amusements.

Is it right for the Christian to participate in amusements? It depends upon what kinds are to be engaged in. If the question refer to card-playing, pool-playing and dancing, we must answer that it is not right. It will not do to say that these amusements are no worse than playing dominoes, chess, backgammon and other clean household games. All gamblers will tell you that there is no more harm or sin in playing cards than in playing dominoes; and it is noticeable that card-playing professors of religion use the same arguments in support of the practice that gamblers do. This looks suspicious. Every Christian should let alone those games and amusements which are the chief employments of the gambling fraternity. There are amusements in which the true Christian may safely engage, and it is as much his duty to temperately participate in some form of appropriate, healthful amusements as it is to read his Bible and pray. But he should indulge in no amusement which has a tainted history, nor in any with associates that are disrespectful and demoralizing. Moreover, no form of amusement should be pursued to the extent of diminishing one's power for the proper performance of his Christian and domestic duties. When the Christian neglects any duty as the result of engaging in any sort of amusement, he commits a wrong both to himself and others. In this matter there is need of much wisdom and grace.—Zion's Herald.

The True Scope of the Pulpit.

Unless we mistake, the times are ripe for a clearer and more cogent preaching of the gospel. The preacher who dwells upon spiritual claims and the truths which pertain to man's higher nature, is the truest to his mission. We do not say that ministers should eschew social, industrial or political topics; they render a great service, if they can treat these matters with adequate knowledge and insight. But on the other hand, they are making a capital mistake if they overlook the fact that the main purpose of the Christian church is to influence character, and that the most effective means of doing this is, not in preaching the truths which are to be found in textbooks on sociology, and in labor reports, but the proclamation and enforcement of the truths which are revealed in the New Testament.—The Watchman.

Brooding Over Injuries.

If a man commits an offense against us, misrepresents us, insults us, injures us in any way, what are we to do? Brood over it? That is what some Christian people nearly always do. It is wonderful what care they take to get all the pain and suffering out of the offense they can. They might have brushed it away at once, and have done with it; but no, the hasty, bitter word, the selfish act they lay upon their memory, and they will never forget it, whatever else they forget. * *

If a man injures you, do not brood over it. Nor must you talk about it to everybody you meet. What is your motive for speaking about the injury? Do you want to get your friends to take sides with you against the offender? You ought to want to make the offender himself take sides with you against the offense.—R. W. Dale.

"Fifty dollars cheaper!" Hold! stop, kind father, and consider; you have heard of people who are "color blind," but you may be "silver blind." It may be as much dearer as the soul is more valuable than any monetary consideration. Does religious influence count for nothing in a female college?—Exchange.

Not Saying a Word.

Two men in a railroad car near the city of Washington were recently discussing how newspapers should be run.

"I s'pose," said the first speaker slowly, "that you could give 'em all points?"

"I'm sure of it. Couldn't you?"

"No, I don't think I could."

"Do you mean to say that you couldn't tell the editor how to run his paper?" exclaimed the other in a tone that had done absolute dismay in it.

"I do indeed," replied the man, earnestly.

"Well—I must say, there are not many like you."

"I know it. I used to be like you are. But now I'm trying to run a newspaper myself, and I tell you, my friend, I'm not sayin' a word. Not a word."—N. Y. Advocate.

A Sarcastic Devil.

Thomas Carlyle has said: "Sarcasm is the natural language of the devil. This accounts for the fact that so many of the devil's agents employ sarcasm as a handy weapon with which to assail those who are trying to get out of the devil's clutches and into the bands of Christ. More penitents have been ridiculed out of their serious intentions to forsake the devil and his work than have been turned therefrom by any other means. "Your companions will laugh at you if you become pious," has been whispered into the ears of millions of seekers after Christ by the sarcastic devil. People will more easily and readily endure almost anything else than to be sarcastically laughed at. Sarcasm is a cheap weapon and easily handled; hence the devil readily gets all the agents he wants.

Your business as a church member is not to criticise the pastor, not to cripple his efforts for good by putting your sympathies somewhere else, not to talk about the coldness of the prayer meetings and the "youthful gush" of the young people's work, to complain about slowness of others to pay up, and the general lack of ability and intelligence in the rest of the congregation, but to go at once into secret prayer and get straightened out yourself, and then find your place in the church work and bring joy to the pastor's heart, aid to his endeavors, a glowing heart into the prayer meeting, a word of encouragement of the young people, an example of honor and promptness to others, and the gift of your talent and light of your wisdom to the struggling congregation. See!

Small Fields.

No wonder that the faithful ministers sometimes grow restless, thinking that there is no more room for them to work in their small and hard field, and desire a change for relief. But let such remember the tender words of Edward Garrett: "And when it is over, and our feet will run no more, and our hands are helpless, and we have scarcely strength to murmur a last prayer, then we shall see that instead of needing a larger field, we have left untilled many corners of our single acre, and that none of it is fit for our Master's eye were it not for the softening shadow of the cross."

Any man can criticise and find fault. There are spots on the sun. But the faithful preacher is to feed as well as lead the sheep. Beating them is not in the commission. Yet some preachers talk as though that document read: "Go ye into all the world and beat my gospel into every creature." Poor sheep! no wonder they are so lean. Many of them "look up and are not fed," but instead of feed they get feet, and in the place of fodder they get a flogging!—Texas Advocate.

What Jesus Wants.

The pastor who moves heaven and earth to get people into his church so that he can report the largest membership finds it hard to understand the spirit of the Master who could decline the offers of some people to follow him. What Jesus wants is not for the pastor to count his converts, but for the converts to count the cost.—Exchange.

A little girl had been rummaging in her mother's trunk. There she found a "church letter" which her mother had neglected to present to the church in whose neighborhood she had moved. The little explorer rushed into her mother's presence, shouting: "Oh, mama, I have found your religion in your trunk!" Moral: Hand in your church letter right away.

Pessimism.

Pessimism, either in politics, social life or religion, is not conducive to the best interests either of the State, of society, or of the Church. It prevents the best efforts being put forth and by leading men to believe that things are going to the bad, often induces the state of affairs which it predicts.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. M. E. Tumlin, Shannon, Miss., Sept. 10: "Have just closed an excellent meeting at Pleasant Grove, on Shannon circuit, North Mississippi Conference. Had several professions and 10 accessions. Have fine crops here, and the people are in better spirits than they have been for years."

Rev. N. M. Clark, Binnsville, Miss., Sept. 10: 'Our meeting at this place was good. Many of those in attendance were benefited. Backsliders were reclaimed, and 20 were converted. Six joined our church. Bro. James McCaskill, of Columbus, Miss., did the preaching. It was good. So clear and plain that the children could understand. He is a success. Sin in all its forms received proper attention. I would suggest if any of the brethren need help, send for Bro. McCaskill. You will not be disappointed."

Rev. J. W. Tucker, Sept. 7: "On Aug. 31 we closed a series of meetings at Ebenezer, Roxie charge, of seven days' duration, which resulted in 25 applications for church membership; seventeen promised to hold family prayer, and almost the entire membership reconsecrated themselves to God and promised not to take the sacrifice off the altar again while they live. We held two prayer meetings daily, and no one person condnoted it twice. Ebenezer is a praying church. Within the first six months of this year they paid half of all claims upon them."

Rev. W. G. Forsyth, Eastabuchie, Miss., Sept. 5: "The camp meeting at Leaf River was a grand, a glorious success. The interest began with the very first service, and steadily grew to the last. The last service witnessed a transcendant outburst of glory—some 20 or more bright conversions. The woods rang with our shouts of praise. The meeting resulted in between 75 and 100 conversions—nearly all in the church. Mrs. Snell did not come. The presiding elder, preacher in charge, Bros. Emory, Worthen, and on the last day H. C. Ellis did the work. We thank God for this gracious pouring out of his Spirit."

Rev. Wm. Schnble, Grosse Tete and False River charge, Louisiana Conference: "Two protracted meetings have recently been held on this circuit. Rev. T. K. Fannt LeRoy preached several earnest and convincing sermons at Cottonwood to large and attentive congregations. One direct result was that 6 persons were added unto the church—also 5 children baptized. At Rosedale large and attentive congregations greeted Rev. J. M. Henry all last week. No other man ever held a congregation so well at this place as Bro. Henry. His sermons were strong, clear, pointed. Yesterday 5 persons were received on profession of faith. The entire community has been quickened. The Lord was in this work. We praise him for these refreshing seasons, and thank the brethren for their help."

Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, Landerdale, Miss., Aug. 24: "My congregation has not 'voted' me any vacation, but my physician says I must take one two months long. I have just spent forty-two days in bed with slow fever and pneumonia, and am in good condition to take a vacation. While I was in bed Lauderdale enjoyed one of the most thorough revivals the town was every blessed with. I think there is only one home in our town in which a family altar has not been erected. A number of conversions, and several heads of families joined the church, besides a number of others. Bro. Bell, from Marion, started the meeting. I had it under a fair starting when Bro. James McCaskill, from Columbus, came and conducted the meeting until Bro. Bowen, from Macon, came. Bro. McCaskill continued several days after Bro. Bowen left. If any of the brethren want help, they can not get better help than Bro. McCaskill. He is full of the Holy Ghost, and he lets God work through him. At present he is only a layman, but will be licensed to preach soon. Though a Mississippi-raised boy, he has spent much time in working in the missions of New York City and Boston. He is trained. Our meeting was conducted by regular methods, and the regular work was accomplished. I had rather have Bowen in a meeting than anybody. We give God all praise for the success of our efforts."

ONE HUNDRED CONVERSIONS.

I give below a report of four great religious battles:

On the third Sunday in July, Bro. J. H. Barrentine brought on the fight at Salem, and I joined him in the evening. Tuesday, Bro T. G. Freeman joined in the fight, which resulted in the quickening of the church and the addition of fifteen new members.

From Salem I went to Antioch on the fourth Sunday. There we had a great victory—seventy-five converted and reclaimed. Twenty-six joined our church.

On Friday night before the second Sunday in August, Bro. Leech commenced the fight at South Union Camp Ground, followed up by Bro. J. H. Mitchell, our beloved presiding elder, with Bros. Angus Buck, W. W. Williams, L. D. Worsham, Buck, J. H. Barrentine, and the old warhorse, our beloved T. G. Freeman, and myself. The result was seventeen joined our church and quite a number were reclaimed.

On the second Sunday in August I went to Mt. Nebo. Here we had another grand victory. Eighteen were converted and joined the church at one time. Twenty-nine in all united with the church. Here Bro. Barrentine did us good work, preaching three good sermons.

So you see we have had at the four meetings about one hundred conversions and about the same number reclaimed. Eighty-seven joined our church, with two more meetings to hold.

Many thanks to the good brothers for their timely help. God be praised for all. R. P. GOAR.

Ackerman, Miss.

Rev. J. R. Whittington, P. C., Carthage, Miss., Aug. 25: "My last meeting on Carthage circuit will close tonight. Visible results: One hundred added to the church on profession of faith, 65 adults baptized, and 9 children; 35 family altars erected, 30 claimed entire sanctification, one class meeting inaugurated and doing fine work; all the collections ordered by the Conference in hand or subscription except a few dollars. The fact of the case is, we had a hallelujah time all over the work. Some of the hardest sinners in all this country, or any other, soundly converted and now praising the Lord. On account of an afflicted family, I was called home in June, and Bro. J. R. Hays, L. P., put in as supply, and he planned well, and was one of the main factors in promoting this great revival. He will knock at the Conference next session, and I am sure it would be wisdom on the Conference part to let him in. He is a good preacher and a Holy Ghost man. Bro. J. L. Morrill, of Cartersville, Ga., assisted me at Carthage, and a power he is. This town has never been stirred as now before; all are praising God. To my brethren: If your church is dead, and you can not do anything for it, write to him at Cartersville. He is one of the few evangelists who will go into the interior and labor for his Master. Many local brethren rendered valuable services. This is a great victory for Methodism in these regions, considering that there are so many isms—Hard-shells, come-outers, Congregational Methodists. And, behold! one Martin, of Gloster, of the Missionary Baptist, who was expelled from that church in Texas, as said a few years ago, was all over this country preaching Antinomianism in its worst form—a relic of the latter end of the Dark Ages. He preaches all you have to do is to believe on Christ; no prayer, no good work; need not keep the Ten Commandments, kill or steal or lie; you are saved for all eternity. He says he has not prayed for Martin in thirty years; and I believe him. In fact, I am persuaded he is a stranger to salvation. I consider the meetings of the five appointments here on this circuit one of the most sweeping revivals I have ever witnessed, for all of which the Lord be praised."

Rev. B. W. Lewis, Martinsville circuit: "Thursday, Aug. 30, closed a five days' meeting at Old Tabernacle Church. Thirty years ago, according to the statement of some of the old members, this church was one of the most flourishing in that country. It is a large and substantial building, and at the time mentioned had a large membership. The people loved and feared the Lord and were blessed. But as the years passed some of the older members died, some removed to east their lots in other lands and with other people. Those left were greatly weakened in number because of discord arising, causing some to leave and join other churches. The church has been awakening this year, and when the time for the protracted meeting was announced—the first held for several years—they all promised to pray for its success and do all they could to make it a good meeting. The result was a large attendance—said to be larger than for twenty years—much interest manifested, and an addition of 15 to the church, making 25 additions in all this year. It was a touching scene to see old men and women come and kneel at the bench for the prayers of the Christians. One day, while during the singing of these lines,

"'And when hoary hairs shall their temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne,'

an old man, with bowed form, wrinkled face and gray hairs, came up and asked for membership. Some old ladies, who had once belonged to this church, but had been borne off on the winds of doctrine, had grown cold, came back to their first love. At the close of the baptismal exercises on last Sunday the promises of a half-dozen of the male members were secured for leading in prayer meetings and Sunday-school, which they will organize next Sunday. May the grace of God remain in the hearts of these people, that they may do the work which lies before them; and may the Lord strengthen them, that they may be searching for something to do instead of passing around and avoiding it! Bro. Henry Lewis, of Vicksburg, was with us, and by his fervent spirit and earnest words eloquently pleaded for the salvation of souls. May God bless him in all his work! Pray for us, that the work begun will ripen for eternity; that those who have taken the vows of God upon themselves will hold out faithful, and that we may all meet in a better world above. Amen!"

REVIVAL AT CHUBUTA, MISS.

Mrs. Mary McGee Snell, of Columbus, Miss., commenced a series of meetings at 11 o'clock Saturday, Aug. 25, in Chubuta, Miss., and preached twenty sermons. The congregations and interest increased with every service. Her absolute control over the masses was almost without a precedent.

Strong men would come at her call and fall down at the altar as seekers of salvation, and as pliable as children. Men would come in the house without any thought of their soul's interest, but before leaving have stood up and made a public confession of their sins and would pray aloud. When she came there was considerable prejudice, as it was regarded an innovation; but there never has been such a revival in which the surrounding country and neighboring towns for miles, as well as the community, have been so wonderfully awakened. One remarkable feature is the personality of her work. In calling for penitents she did not hesitate to call them by name, and almost without an exception they came, and rarely left the altar until they had made a public profession of faith in Christ. Her whole theme is Christ, the friend of sinners. It is not her object to flood the church with the unconverted, but to urge a knowledge of acceptance with God upon all church members. It was not an uncommon thing for one service to continue for three or four hours. She never seemed to be in a hurry so long as there was a sinner seeking Christ. Surely she must be sustained by the divine hand, or her voice and physical strength would be inadequate for the work she does.

Her power for effecting reconciliations among the people, even of the most delicate character, is marvelous. There were fully one hundred conversions and reclamations as the result of the meeting, and these almost entirely among the grown people, and some of them old and hardened sinners. Some twenty-five were added to the Methodist Church, and no doubt quite a number will join the Baptist Church when the opportunity is given.

Men who were regarded as the most ungodly in our town are now holding family prayers. One old man who was known as one of the wickedest in all this country, was induced to attend service the last day, and was happily converted that night. No one can listen to this woman of God and not believe that she is called of God for the work she is doing. Bro. F. M. Keen, of Heidelberg, was with us, and did us faithful work as the leader of a choir which was organized among our people of both churches (Baptist and Methodist). This community was drawn to him more and more as he labored with us. The meeting closed on Friday night, last, about 12 o'clock. Saint and sinner came at the close to take the hands of these servants of God, and bade them adieu with a "God bless you."

Last Sunday we had 134 at Sunday-school. An experience meeting was held in the Baptist Church, which lasted one and a half hours. The men converts spoke freely of their deliverance from sin. Glory to God.

A Hint to the Wise.

Two or three hundred people taken into the church on one circuit and not a single religious paper put into any of the homes represented in this large ingathering! It is not difficult to foretell the harvest which this increase with yield. The preacher who builds well fortifies his people by placing the literature of the church in their hands, and then their religion does not vanish in a shout, like the fog before the rising sun. He who shuts his eyes to these facts is not a wise master-builder.—N. C. Advocate.

A Bishop's Opinion.

"A few preachers I have known," says Bishop Haygood, "thought it compromised their dignity to solicit subscriptions for our church papers. What did he join the itinerant ministry for? To circulate his church paper is a part of every pastor's duty. Also every member's."

The above clippings form a good text for a Methodist preacher to preach from—to HIMSELF. It is a simple fact, undenied and undeniable, that much of our revival effort amounts to very little in the end for the reason here stated. How can our people become intelligent, wide-awake, church-loving, earnest Christian workers unless they take a church paper?

A Preacher's Vacation.

Rev. T. K. Faunt Leroy, pastor of Felicity Street Church, spent his vacation in evangelistic work. He first went to Cottonwood and assisted the pastor, Rev. Wm. Schuhle, in a meeting with fine results. The church in this place owes its existence to Bro. Faunt Leroy, he having organized it during his first pastorate, about eighteen years ago. It was then a notoriously hard place. The seed he sowed have brought forth abundant fruit, in the moral transformation of the community. He had the pleasure of receiving into the church during this recent visit the last member of a large family which was brought under the influence of the church during his pastorate.

He spent another week in assisting the pastor, Bro. Crews, in a meeting at Sample Chapel, a church organized by Bro. Faunt Leroy last year in a community in which the gospel had never been preached. At the close of the meeting every man in the community was a member of the church except two. The transforming effects of the gospel in this community are said to be almost marvelous.

A meeting is in progress at Felicity Street Church. The prospect is good.

Mobocracy.

Civilization has no greater foe than mobocracy. When it comes to pass that private citizens, few or many, assume and exercise the right to constitute themselves into a court—judge, jury, witness, attorney and sheriff—and proceed without form of law to visit condign punishment upon anyone who has incurred their displeasure, then civilization has ceased to exist and barbarism in its worst form has taken its place. Strange to say, American civilization is now menaced at this very point. A few operatives in a manufacturing town in Illinois demand an increase of wages, which is refused by their employers. Thereupon thousands of persons conspire to take the law into their own hands, not simply to visit punishment upon the said employers, but also upon all others who have business relations with them, even though they are bound by contract. Trains are wrecked and burned; United States mails are stopped; and every kind of lawlessness is indulged in. The commerce of the nation is paralyzed, and property is destroyed to the value of millions of dollars' worth.

Before the echoes of this appalling catastrophe have died away, mobocracy again lifts its hideous head—this time in the State of Tennessee. Several negroes accused of arson—accused, but not convicted—are taken in hand by a mob and summarily executed; and that, too, when they were already in custody, with every needed guarantee of a fair and impartial trial.

Lynchings have occurred now and then in different sections of the country; but if there has ever been one so utterly without excuse as this, it has not come to our notice. It is gratifying to lovers of law and order everywhere that both the executive and judicial authorities of the State are doing all in their power to ferret out the perpetrators of this heinous crime and bring them to justice. It is time that the people north and south of Mason and Dixon's line should cease their mutual criminations and recriminations as to which section has the greatest amount of lawlessness. There is too much of it in all sections. A good motto to be practiced everywhere is, "Let every man sweep before his own door."

Preachers In Debt.

The question which every Southern Methodist preacher is obliged to answer satisfactorily as a prerequisite to admission into the itinerant ranks, "Are you in debt so as to embarrass you?" is one which should make a lasting impression on his mind. He should never forget that debt will embarrass a preacher—will discount him with the world, cripple his influence and impair his usefulness. At the same time the church is not blameless in this matter. Oftentimes no adequate provision is made for the preacher's support. On many charges very little money is paid until the end of the year. The preacher is therefore obliged to go in debt or else engage in some secular calling for support. Knowing the direful results of ministerial secularization, he opens an account with his merchant for the necessaries of life, and goes on with his ministerial work, believing that if he does his whole duty, the church will see that he does not suffer. When the end of the year comes, he finds himself left in the lurch. His salary was barely sufficient for his maintenance, and a considerable part of it is left unpaid. He finds, too, that the church is not only not sympathetic, but mercilessly critical. Moreover, those who criticize a preacher most severely for going in debt often belong to the class who pay nothing, or next to nothing, for his support. One of this tribe once said to a preacher of our acquaintance, "Preachers ought not to preach for money; they ought to preach for souls." Quick as thought the preacher replied, "I can't live on souls; and if I could, it would take a thousand like yours to make one breakfast." "Great silence on the assembly fell."

A New Book.

SELECT SERMONS ON A VARIETY OF SUBJECTS, just as they were prepared for the pulpit, with but very little alteration. By Rev. J. W. Harmon, Superannuate Mississippi Conference. Paulding, Miss. Published by the author.

Through the kindness of the author the above work has found its way to our table. It is a 12 mo. of 249 pages. It has portraits of the author and his wife, recently deceased, both excellent likenesses. It opens with a brief, but very interesting autobiography. Many will wish that this had been more extensive. It contains fourteen sermons; and, as stated in the title, they are "on a variety of subjects." The first is a memorial sermon on the Life and Death of Gen. R. E. Lee. It was delivered in Brandon, Miss., Nov. 27, 1870, and was published soon afterwards in a local journal by request of a number of prominent citizens. Another, entitled "A Consecrated and Sanctified Life in Christ." was preached at the Seashore Camp Ground, July, 1894, was published in the New Orleans Times-Democrat, and severely criticized by a scholarly writer in one of the New Orleans dailies. Another from the text, "Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher; all is vanity," was preached as a commencement sermon at Pachuta Institute, June, 1892. These, so far as can be learned from the volume itself, are the only ones delivered on special occasions. The others form a part of the food with which the author when a pastor was accustomed to feed the flock of God entrusted to his care. They cover a wide range chronologically, some having been preached when the author was in manhood's prime, others when his "way of life had fallen into the sere and yellow leaf."

The author expresses the fear that these discourses as they appear "in cold, impassive type" will lose much of the force which characterized them as originally delivered. This is true to a certain extent of these sermons, as it is true of the sermons of all who have the gift of oratory. On the printed page "the tone of voice," "the vivid expression of the face," and the "living flash of the eye," are, as the author says, wanting. Type can no more convey these than it can "print a thunderstorm." But these sermons are good nevertheless. They embody much wholesome truth in the fervid, exuberant rhetoric which has always been a characteristic of the author's spoken speech. Moreover, the thousands who have heard the author in his impassioned discourses can readily supply as they read the concomitants of the spoken discourse—tone of voice, gesture, flash of eye and facial expression.

The work is handsomely printed on good paper and well bound. The author's numerous friends in Mississippi and Lonisiana will doubtless possess themselves of a copy in the near future.

Premium Offer.

We renew our offer of Chambers' Cyclopedia as a premium. We will send the Cyclopedia in thirty volumes, paper bound, to any subscriber who will pay his subscription for one year in advance, viz.: to October, '95, for $2.50, in addition to his subscription. We will also send the work as a premium to any preacher or agent who will send us five new subscriptions accompanied by the cash—$10.

This offer will soon be withdrawn; therefore, be in haste if you wish to avail yourself of it.

The friends of Whitworth College will be gratified to learn that it has had a very auspicious opening. See the note from President Chambers on our first page. A fuller account will be given in another issue.

The Opening at Centenary College.

I have deferred saying anything about the opening of the present session of our work until the end of the first week, for the reason that the first days are days of confusion. Students must be classed, and with new students this takes time and patience. We are now smoothly moving along on all our departmental lines, and professors and students are getting down to earnest, faithful labor. Our professors are all on hand, recuperated and refreshed by the long vacation, and greatly encouraged by the prospects before them. It is thought best that Prof. Wier continue in the field as the agent of the college. His place is supplied by Prof. Thos. Carter, a graduate of Tulane University, and fresh from a three years' course in Vanderbilt University. We have secured a tutor for the Preparatory Department in Mr. S. D. Wall, a member of our Senior class. I hesitate not to say that we will do as good work and as thorough work this session as will be done by any college in the land.

Our students have come from all parts of Louisiana. We have them from the extreme north and extreme south, from the west and from the east. We have some from Mississippi, some from Alabama, and one from British Honduras. At this present writing we have enrolled just four times as many as were enrolled at this time last session, and the new students exceed the old students in number by five. Every day brings us students, or reports of students who are preparing to come. The friends of the college about here are in fine spirits over the outlook, and everything points toward prosperity. The health of our town compares favorably with that of any other place. We "thank God and take courage."

I am counting largely upon the help of our preachers and people in this great work for the Church and State, and have no thought of being disappointed in my expectation. As our people gather their harvest, let those of them who have given endowment notes send forward the interest on those promptly. We need it to pay the salaries of our professors. The tuition fees being so low do not afford money enough to pay half of the salaries. I trust my brethren in the ministry will call the attention of their members to this statement, and be sure to take the "education collection" besides. The word to the church is, Centenary is going up.

C. W. CARTER, Pres.
Jackson, La., Sept. 12, 1894.

Assessment for the Board of Education.

The Board of Education, under the authority of Section No. 411 of the new Discipline, has assessed the sum of $10 000, and divided the same among the Annual Conferences upon the basis used by the Board of Church Extension which assesses $100,000. The educational assessment is, therefore, just one-tenth of the assessment for the church extension.

The amounts assessed for our own Conferences are: Louisiana, $230; Mississippi, $272; North Mississippi, $311.

If there are heads of families among our readers who do not habitually read our "Home Circle" department, we hope they will at least read one article in that department in this issue. We refer to the article headed, "Begin with the Parents." That article expresses our views exactly, and it is moreover nearly as well written as if it had come from our pen.

The United States distillers are making fortunes out of the increase in excise duty on spirits in the new Tariff Act. It is estimated that there were not less than 60,000,000 gallons of proof spirits in bond when the bill passed the House, but the tariff did not take effect immediately. The duty was increased from ninety cents to $1.10 per gallon. Then the distillers with large stocks on hand take out of bond at once at the old rate, and then immediately increase the price to correspond with the new rate, making for themselves a round $5 000 000. It is said that $23 000 000 of spirit duties were paid into the United States Treasury Department in four weeks.

NOTES.

The Epworth Era is now issued as a weekly.

Bishop Hargrove has appointed Rev. H. M. DuBose as pastor of Tyler station, Texas.

Rev. J. V. Penn, of the Mississippi Conference, is spending a few days at Jefferson City, Mo.

Rev. W. M. Hayes, of Tyler station, has been elected financial agent of Waco Female College.

We have some excellent lady agents, and would be glad to have more. Remember that we give a good commission.

A Conference of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society is called to meet in Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 3 5, 1894.

Rev. J. W. Saudell, of the Mississippi Conference, was married on the seventeenth to Miss T. L. Simmons, of Magnolia, Miss.

A number of brethren have recently brought us under obligations by sending new subscribers. Many thanks. Let the good work go on.

The revival fires are still burning on the Arcadia district. Sinners are being converted and added to the church continually. The Lord be praised.

Miss Spurgeon, of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London, has been occupying a pulpit in London, and is said to preach much like her late distinguished brother.

Miss Hattie Jones, of Savannah, Tenn., left a few days ago for the Indian Territory as a missionary. She will teach in the Methvin Institute at Anadarko, I. T.

Rev. S. J. Davies, of the Louisiana Conference, recently sent a communication to the Nashville Advocate. When the article appeared, lo! the Great Connectional's typos had changed Davies into "Dorris."

While Dr. W. C. Black, editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, was sniffing the breezes of Monteagle, his place was filled by his son, Rev. M. M. Black, and so well that we did not know the Doctor was gone.—Alabama Advocate.

The University of Mississippi opened on the thirteenth with an attendance of 273—the largest enrollment in fifteen years. Adresses were delivered by Judge Hill, Rev. P. G. Sears, Col. J. L. Power, and Hon. G. D. Shands.

Rev. O. L. Hailey, whose book was recently criticised at length in our columns by Rev. L. Carley, has asked for permission to reply. Of course, we grant the request. Bro. Hailey will make his bow to our readers in a week or two.

A man in good health and with fair sense whining that he can not afford a sum below five cents a week to give his wife and children a church paper, is confessing to phenomenal laziness, unless whisky and tobacco get the nickel. —Richmond Advocate.

A little coterie of small-souled cranks, calling themselves free-thinkers, held a convention the other day in Topeka, Kansas, and passed resolutions inviting Grover Cleveland to resign. They are now, doubtless, waiting to see whether His Excellency will accept their invitation. "A gnat on a bull's horn" is Æsop's way of describing such asinine lilliputians.

A novel marriage was consummated in this city on the seventeenth, Rev. F. S. Parker officiating. The contracting parties were A. B. Booth and Anna L. Brown. The novelty consists in the fact that the same parties had made a similar contract once before. They were married in 1866, and divorced in '80. Booth soon afterward married again. Last year wife number two died.

Every reader of the ADVOCATE will, of course, read President Carter's account of the opening at Centenary. An increase of three hundred per cent. over the opening of last year! What better could anybody want than that? And yet there are more to come. Owing to the stringency of the times, many pupils can not enter at this time who will do so later. Let everybody give heed to the suggestions which Dr. Carter makes.

Christian Work says: "The present successor of Dr. Brooks in Trinity Church, Boston, the Rev. Dr. E. Winchester Donald, publicly criticises those 'small-souled Episcopalians who report large gains when they have only gathered into their folds a number of Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and members of other denominations.' He says that 'this is no increase of the army; it is only a shifting of the troops.' And all true as preaching, and truer than some preaching."

Miss Annie Duncan, daughter of Dr. James A. Duncan, has been elected lady principal of Calloway College, Ark.

We invite attention to the advertisement of Millwood Institute, Jackson, La. This institution has a good curriculum and a fine faculty. The president, Miss McCalmont, is a woman of high culture and fine natural abilities. See advertisement and send for a catalogue.

Rev. James Wylie, a Scotch Presbyterian missionary stationed at Liao Yany, in North China, was brutally murdered on Aug. 10 by Chinese soldiers. The murder was entirely without provocation. Mr. Wylie was quietly walking the streets when attacked. Moreover, he had always conducted himself as a Christian minister should. The British government will, doubtless, give attention to the outrage.

A sister who has clipped all the articles from our Hygiene Department every week since the department was started, and preserved them in a scrap book, now has a manual of hygiene of very great value. Others might profit by her example. We put nothing into this department just to fill up. We aim to make the department conducive to health, happiness and longevity. We present this week some suggestions which many of our people need.

We are gratified at the success of Bro. Masao in his campaign in Mississippi in behalf of Sister Lambuth's industrial school. The cause is a worthy one, and Bro. Masao is an admirable representative of it. Reared in a heathen land, he is, nevertheless, a highly cultured Christian gentleman. He speaks English correctly, fluently, and forcibly. He will entertain a congregation anywhere, and will give them something worth thinking about.

East Mississippi Female College opened on the twelfth with an increase of twenty-five per cent. over the opening of last year, both in the boarding department and in local patronage. There was a large gathering of trustees, alumnæ, patrons and friends. Much enthusiasm was manifested in view of the increased attendance and the bright prospects of the institution. The buildings are in fine condition. New instruments have been procured. The teachers are enthusiastic. We invite attention to the communication of Rev. R. S. Woodward in another column.

We hope all our women will read the appeal of Sister Wiley on another page. Theoretically, no one denies that Christ came to save the lost, and that the saving of the lost ought to be the business of the church as whole and of each individual member thereof. Yet theory and practice do not always correspond. In many localities no effort whatever is made for the salvation of those who are "most lost"—the class to whom Sister Wiley refers. If we would be like the Master, we must seek to save even these deeply sinning ones. Christ came "not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

Anti-miscegenation sentiment does not seem to be bounded on the north by Mason and Dixon's line. In the town of Fostoria, Ohio, Rev. Mr. Thompson, pastor of the local Methodist Church, recently married a mulattress. Immediately he was invited to resign his pastorate, and, failing to do so, he found the doors of the church closed against him. If this had occurred in the South, it would have been largely used by the Northern press as an evidence of Southern barbarism. As it occurred in the North, however, we suppose very little will be said about it.

Dr. Domingo Friere, an eminent bacteriologist, has begun the practice of vaccination as a remedy for yellow fever and malarial fever. He has been for some time carrying on investigations and making experiments in the hospital of St. Sebastian, at Rio Janeiro. He claims to have had marvelous success. If he has indeed discovered a preventive of, or an infallible remedy for, yellow fever and all kinds of malarial fever, then he has established an epoch in medical science, and his name will be transmitted to remote posterity as one of the greatest benefactors of his race.

Rev. J. O. A. Clarke, D. D., LL.D., presiding elder of the North Macon district, South Georgia Conference, died a few days since at his home in Macon. Dr. Clarke was received into the traveling connection in the same class with Bishop Fitzgerald in 1854. He is well known to the church as an author, having published "Elijah Vindicated," "The Wesley Monumental Volume," and "Esther: a Sequel to Ben Hur." He was conceded to be the best Greek scholar in the South Georgia Conference. Indeed, in accurate scholarship he has few equals in Southern Methodism. He was a strong, clear, spiritual preacher. He was our presiding elder last year, and our intercourse with him was exceedingly pleasant.

From now until Oct. 1 we will present a copy of Dr. Sawyer's book, "The World in the Church," to every new subscriber and also to every old subscriber who will renew for one year in advance, i. e., up to October, 1895. This work has been highly commended by our church papers and many of the leading men of Southern Methodism, including most, if not all, our Bishops. Here is an opportunity to get the book as a present for doing something which you ought to do anyway—subscribe for the ADVOCATE. This offer is made only to those who send cash with the order at the rate of $2 per annum).

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes. W. C. BLACK

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $1 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

North Mississippi Conference.

To the Members of the Educational Loan Fund Association of Sardis District—

DEAR BRETHREN: We have three applications from worthy young men for aid to attend Millsaps College. They contemplate entering the ministry, and are thus endeavoring to prepare for this divine work. Our ability to help them at once depends on your promptness in paying your annual shares and membership dues. Please forward dues to me immediately, for the business demands haste.

Treas. E. L. F. Ass'n of Sardis District.

Aid Wanted.

May I ask through your paper for aid to help pay the debt on one of our churches? I only want a small sum from each one. Will ten hundred readers send us ten cents each to help pay this debt. We have built a parsonage; have ten new churches under headway.

Brethren, come to our relief. If no other way, deny yourself of ten cents worth of something. Send the amount to my address—Ponobatonis, La.

Kobe Industrial and Training-School.

Bro. T. Masao, our Japanese brother, has been traveling and lecturing quite diligently in some portions of our Mississippi Conference. He reached our place yesterday. Last night, though it was unfavorable weather, he had a fair and attentive audience. His lecture was a treat. To hear his simple account of being brought from darkness of heathenism to the light of a true life is enough to bring conviction to the most skeptical. Some immediate fruit appeared—not up to the right standard; more will doubtless follow on. Up to date Bro. Masao has secured in cash and good subscriptions more than $250 beyond his expenses. This puts the enterprise of building the Kobe Industrial and Training-school on such a vantage ground that we feel assured of its success during the season. All we need is a little more hearty co-operation by preachers and people. None will ever regret inviting Bro. Masao to speak for them. He is an eminent exemplar of the trophies of Christ's kingdom. J. P. DRAKE.

Woman's F. and H. M. Society.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society hold a convention, Oct. 2 to 5, in Nashville, Tenn. The sessions will be devoted to the consideration of topics relative to the development and prosecution of its work. It will open on the night of the second with a sermon from Prof. Collins Denny, of Vanderbilt University. Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Dr. Tigert, and others of the wisest thinkers in our church will make addresses. Mrs. Dr. Hammond, Mrs. Dr. Alexander, Mrs. Dr. Mathews, Miss Lucinda B. Helm, Miss Emily Allen, the Misses Tucker and other gifted women in our church will present papers or participate in the discussions which will follow.

All persons purposing to attend have already been requested to notify without delay Mrs. Rev. T. A. Kerley, No. 209 Meridian street, Nashville, Tenn., that provision may be made for their entertainment.

The membership of the society are requested to observe these days during the first week in October as a special season of prayer, that the one indispensable requisite, the presence and power of the Holy Ghost, may be vouchsafed. As the hours between the leaving of the children for school and the preparation of the noon-day meal is the time most entirely at the command of busy mothers, the convention will suspend its business between 10:30 and 11 A. M., that they, with each member of the society, may unitedly supplicate the divine blessing upon the deliberations of the convention.

Arrangements have been made to devote the November meeting of the different auxiliaries to increasing the permanent Loan Funds of the society, and the movement already so wisely inaugurated, under the divine blessing, should result in increasing the fund to $10 000 during this quadrennium.

Always and everywhere the membership of the society are requested to emphasize the service of prayer—that prayer, constant, humble, fervent, may arise for faith to see and to follow implicitly the leadings of our God.

Tiplocura Treatment.

J. G. Lewis,
300 Camp Street, Margaret Place,
New Orleans, Aug. 16, 1894.

Dr. Chiles—

Dear Sir: You will be pleased to know that since taking your Tiplocura treatment, I have never felt better in my life. I have no desire for liquor, ale or beer, and I feel no ill effects from the fight your medicine had with that I had indulged in for thirty years. I feel hearty, well, and full of life and ambition, and in the struggle and fight arising from competition in my business I never again want wine, whisky or beer to second and support me. Mr. Shaw has watched me very closely all along. If he feels as proud of his institute as I feel for what he has done for me, he is a happy man. With best wishes. Yours obediently,
J. G. LEWIS.

FRUIT BEARING.

(Matt. vii, 15 20; Mark xi, 13; Luke xiii, 6 9; John xv, 4, 8, 16.)

1. It is an humiliating reflection, but it must be true, that there are false prophets. Hypocritical, self-seeking, lucre-loving, demagogical strategists, men who wear "the livery of heaven to serve the devil in." Beware.

(1) They come to you in sheep's clothing. Are so affectedly affectionate, sympathetic, kind, so sweetly winning. So much taffy.

(2) But they are inwardly ravening wolves all the same. Care not for men's souls, but for their purses. Heroes us for building-material in his self-aggrandizement. Has no use for us, if he can't use us. If it suits his selfish and ungodly ends, he readily sacrifices church and church members on the altar of his satanic egotism.

2. The Master enjoins, that we shall judge men by their fruits. As sure as thorn bushes do not produce grapes, and thistles do not bring forth figs, so sure can the inward man be weighed, measured, judged aright.

(1) We must not judge man by his mere profession. Utterance may be true or false. Implicit trust in a man's declarations is not indicative of native nobility, but of weakness. The serpent lied to Eve. There is deep meaning in the vulgarism: "Talk is cheap."

(2) We must judge man by his actions, his every-day life. Not by some isolated action, whether good or bad, for it may be the outcome of unusual influences. But by his actions, taken as a whole, by his life. Considering his life, ourselves unbiased by prejudice, we acquire a correct estimate of a man. Yes, trust a man who prays in secret, whose left hand knows not what the right is doing, when giving alms; trust him who quietly, like Enoch, walks with God—trust him, though he makes no mention of it to any man.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured
by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

GROWING OLD.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

Old—we are growing old,
Going on through a beautiful road,
Finding earth a more blessed abode;
Nobler work by our hands to be wrought,
Freer paths for our hope and thought;
Because of the beauty the years unfold,
We are cheerfully growing old!

Old—we are growing old,
Going up where the sunshine is clear;
Watching grander horizons appear
Out of clouds that enveloped our youth,
Standing firm on the mountains of truth;
Because of the glory the years unfold,
We are joyfully growing old.

Old—we are growing old,
Going in to the gardens of real
That glow through the gold of the West,
Where the rose and the amaranth blend,
And each path is the way to a friend;
Because of the peace that the years unfold,
We are thankfully growing old.

Old—are we growing old?
Life blooms as we travel on
Up the hills into fresh, lovely dawn;
We are children, who do but begin
The sweetness of living to win;
Because heaven is in us, to bud and unfold,
We are younger, for growing old!

Begin with the Parents.

A paper, noteworthy both on account of its subject and its author, appeared recently in the Christian Union. It treats the topic, "How to prevent crime," and is written by Warden Brush, of Sing Sing Prison. A man of his position and experience speaks with authority on such a theme. His views are not those of a lay observer, but of a professional witness. He gives expert testimony. What he has to say is entitled, therefore, to special consideration.

Without entering upon the whole ground covered by Mr. Brush's essay, we want to call attention to his somewhat startling deliverance on a single point—that of the cause of crime. He says:

"I had not been long in charge of a prison before I came to the conclusion that the cause which led to crime and imprisonment was a lack of family discipline. The indulgence of the father and mother, who allow the child to grow up without discipline to form character, leads almost inevitably to evil ways and to crime. The child even of ten years, who is indulged in his natural waywardness, and allowed to say to his father or mother, 'I will,' or 'I won't' is in a fair way to commit crime."

We have heard a great many theories about the cause of crime. Perhaps the most widely prevalent idea is that it may, in most cases, be traced to intemperance. A good deal has also been said about the pernicious influence of sensational and immoral books. There is no conflict between these opinions and that advanced by the Sing Sing warden. He merely goes further. The cause he assigns is manifestly antecedent to the other causes suggested.

There can be no dispute that the distinguished penologist has touched upon a point of capital importance. The lesson he teaches has a present and practical application. It puts a new and most grave stress upon the fundamental matter of parental responsibility. Fathers and mothers have a great deal to do with shaping their children's careers. We have got, of course, to use every means we can devise for reclaiming in after life the children of parents who were themselves hopelessly corrupt, a class from which the criminal ranks are constantly and largely recruited. But multitudes of parents who are by no means corrupt may be to blame for the evil lives of their children.

The love that shrinks from inflicting punishment, and expresses itself in wholesale indulgence, does not deserve the name. It is little, if at all, above the blind fondness of the brute for its young. It is often mere shallowness and indolence, shrinking from that which is at the moment unpleasant and recklessly ignoring consequences. Real love will subject itself to the supreme pain of inflicting pain upon its object for the sake of averting danger and securing the highest welfare in the end. God loves us enough to chasten us for our good, and the earthly father whose fatherhood approaches, however remotely, the divine pattern, will be capable of a like faithfulness.

Family discipline includes, however, more than wise and firmly-administered punishment. Its chief and determining element is a home atmosphere always elevating. The really formative forces are always the ordinary, not the exceptional ones. The influence that moulds is the habitual and unconscious influence. Nothing can surely beget right character excepting right character. What we are before our children, what they see us do—that is the true "family discipline" we are exercising. If there is "heredity of incapacity," as has of late been strikingly argued, there is also heredity of self-will and moral carelessness, and perverse habit. Let all parents take to themselves warning and counsel from the earnest words of the prison officer.—Examiner.

A Boy's Manner.

"His manner is worth a hundred thousand dollars to him!" That is what one of the chief men of the nation lately said about a boy. "To a young man with ambitions it is worth at least a hundred thousand."

The boy was a distant relative of the man, and had been brought up by careful parents in a far-off city. Among other things, he had been taught to be friendly, and to think of other persons before himself. The boy was on a visit to the town where the man lived. They met on the street, and the younger, recognizing the elder, promptly went to his side and spoke to him in his cordial, happy, yet respectful way. Of course, the man was pleased, and knew that anybody would have been pleased. The sentence above was the outcome of it. A little later the boy came into the room just as the man was struggling into his overcoat. The boy hurried to him, pulled it up at the collar, and drew down the wrinkled coat beneath. He would have done it for any man, the haughtiest or the poorest.

The boy has not been in society a great deal. He has not learned orthodox selfishness. He positively can't be easy at the table until his neighbors are waited on; a chair is a torture if he thinks anyone else is less comfortably seated. He wouldn't interrupt to let loose the wittiest or the most timely remark ever thought of. He may learn to do so some day—after he has earned his hundred thousand—but it is doubtful. The expression of his kindliness may become conformed to popular usage, modified, refined, but the spirit which prompts the expression will only grow with his years.

Do not misunderstand, boys. You may be truly unselfish, and yet not have this boy's prize. You may wish to do things for others, and yet feel that you do not know how. The only way to learn is to try; to hesitate for no feeling of bashfulness or awkwardness, but to put into direct and instantaneous practice whatever kind, helpful thoughts occur to you.—Congregationalist.

Little Sins.

Many a brave man who outlived storm after storm of shot and shell and died at last from the ravages of things bought of his own butler, while others came home to marry death at the altars of dissipation. Hundreds of men who have borne the great trials of life with a spirit of sweetness and resignation that made their lives appear to others great Gibraltars of grace, have in the retirement of home got mad in a minute simply because the milk was sour or there was too much flour in the gravy. Multitudes of Christian women, who have passed through the deep waters of affliction with a spirit of unbroken peace and a trust in God that grew stronger and stronger as the sky became blacker and blacker, have gone down so deep into the cave of gloom that it seemed as though the very sun itself had become a great black iceberg, just because the hired girl couldn't fry potatoes to suit them, or "that boy" wouldn't ever wipe off his muddy boots when he came into the parlor. And people who made a solemn covenant with themselves and God that they would praise the Lord at all times though the heavens should fall, have got clear out of patience because somebody happened to talk too long or pray too loud in the prayer meeting. No, it is not the great dragon sins that come out against us and slay us, as we go marching happily on our way toward God, but the little insignificant and contemptible viper sins that steal upon us while we sleep and poison us with their sting. Mosquitoes drink more blood than lions.—Ram's Horn.

Pleasing Mother.

Mothers are usually pleased with the successes of their children. This is especially true in their life after leaving home. A mother watches the successive steps and efforts of her children as only a mother can. If they succeed in their callings, she rejoices as no one else can. If children appreciated the concern that is felt for them, and the earnest desire for their success that follows them everywhere, by their mothers they would care vastly more about pleasing them than is often the case.

Pleasing mother should be a habit with children. Early in life they should begin the cultivation of thought and effort with reference to the gratification of her wishes and of making her happy. If they would do this they would find daily opportunities for speaking kind words and rendering such helpful services and showing such noble traits of character in dealings with others, as would gladden the heart and lighten the cares of mother in a way too often little thought of. If boys, if girls, could but realize their indebtedness to their mothers they certainly would generally be very much more anxious about pleasing them.

The great men of the world, like John Quincy Adams, James A. Garfield, and others, who have acknowledged their great indebtedness to their mothers, took great delight in pleasing them. But most of all their noble lives, their courage in doing right, and their honorable achievements in public life were especially pleasing to their noble mothers. Hardly a higher tribute can be paid to any young man's success in life than that "it pleased his mother."—Religious Telescope.

Difficulties.

After all, difficulties are but friends in disguise. They come with formidable mien, and to meet them men must summon to their aid every faculty of brain and body; they must make a fight, and whether they win or fall they are the gainers. Success is not always measured as the world measures it, because the men who sometimes fail most signally are those who have met difficulty most courageously. The man who is honest and true to his own convictions of right and duty is never a failure, though the world may write him such. Difficulties decide who is the fittest to bear the heavy responsibilities of life. The men who cringe and yield to them are the failures and are not equal to the task of doing great deeds, nor even to bear the daily round of toil.

Difficulties have for their object and end the sharpening of men's character, and he who comes through them without losing courage—who can learn to rejoice in obstacles conquered, and with quiet pulse and more watchful eye await the next, who can truly say, "Sweet are the uses of adversity"—has learned his lesson well. To him the gain has more than compensated for the toil along the way, and any other difficulties which may rise before him will be undreaded and unfeared.—Presbyterian Banner.

Heroes.

There are wives who bear the brunt of ill-fortune without a murmur, husbands who struggle with poverty, or impending poverty, with a calm fortitude which excites the pity of the "cloud of witnesses" in the upper air; both men and women who have secret sufferings so great that their hearts are beating a dead march to the grave, but from whose lips no word of complaint escapes, and girls by the score who keep themselves unspotted in spite of fate, preferring the loneliness of a dingy room, with honesty for company, to the gaudy surroundings which are bought with impurity of life.—New York Herald.

Hygiene.

The Habit of Administering Alcohol.

Anyone who has observed the practice of a majority of people when suddenly called on to look after a person injured by accident, or in a sudden attack of illness, or drowning, can not fail to have observed how, in a majority of cases, the first thing done is to administer some form of alcohol, whatever sort may be handy. No other remedy is so regularly kept on hand as this one for emergencies. Those who administer it do not do it from any study they have made or any knowledge they possess that the remedy will be suited to the case. They desire to do something to satisfy their own anxieties, and this remedy is the first one usually suggested. This shows how deeply ingrained into our natures is our faith in it and how hard it is to uproot a practice, the result of ages of growth. In a majority of cases the remedy does more harm than good. Dr. Wilkinson, of England, has had occasion to mention this fact in the case of a destructive gale at sea, where many persons were thrown into the water and half drowned. He found it necessary to advise all assistants of the danger of giving alcohol to persons in this state. The same is true in many other states—in apoplexy, heart disease, fainting, loss of blood, etc. We advise our readers not to fall into the same error. Alcohol can injure a sick person more than a well one.—Journal of Hygiene.

The Intemperate Man's Brains.

Hyrti, an anatomist of great distinction, used to say that he could distinguish, in the darkest room, by one stroke of the scalpel, the brain of the inebriate from that of the person who had lived soberly. Now and then he would congratulate his class upon the possession of a drunkard's brain, admirably fitted from its hardness and more complete preservation for the purposes of demonstration. When the anatomist wishes to preserve a human brain for any length of time, he effects his object by keeping that organ in a vessel of alcohol. From a soft pulpy substance, it then becomes comparatively hard. But the inebriate anticipating the anatomist, begins the indurating process before death—begins it while the brain remains the consecrated temple of the soul, while its delicate and gossamer tissues still throb with the pulses of heaven-born life. Strange infatuation thus to desecrate the god-like! Terrible enchantment that dries up all the fountain of generous feeling, petrifies all the tender humanities and sweet charities of life, leaving only a brain of lead and a heart of stone!—Journal of Hygiene.

Be Good to Yourself.

Think deliberately of the house you live in—your body. Make up your mind firmly not to abuse it. Eat nothing that will hurt it, wear nothing that distorts or pains it. Do not overload it with victuals or drink or work. Give yourself regular and abundant sleep. Keep your body warmly clad. At the first signal of danger from any of the thousand enemies that surround you, defend yourself. Do not take cold; guard yourself against it; if you feel the first symptoms, give yourself heroic treatment. Get into a fine glow of heat by exercise. This is the only body you will ever have in this world. A large share of pleasure and pain of life will come through the use you make of it. Study deeply and diligently the structure of it, the laws that should govern it, the pains and penalties that will surely follow a violation of every law of life and health.—Selected.

Beds should be aired daily and carefully. Remove every covering and double over the mattress so that the air can have free access for one hour at least, otherwise the effluvia thrown off by the body during the night can not properly be removed. Of course at such times the fresh air should have free access to the rooms. In this connection it may be well to remember that it is always unwise for anyone to sleep in the same room with a person suffering from disease, especially from disease of the throat, lungs or mouth.—Journal of Hygiene.

Eggs contain the elements of a perfect food. A laboring man can do as much work on a diet of eggs as he can if fed on pork or beef.

SEVERE EXPOSURE

Often results in colds, fevers, rheumatism, neuralgia and kindred derangements. We do not "catch cold" if we are in good condition. If the liver is active, and the system in consequence doing its duty, we live in full health and enjoy life "rain or shine." To break up a cold there's nothing so valuable as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They keep the whole system regulated in a perfectly natural way. If we do not feel happy, if we worry and grumble, if we are morbid, if the days seem dreary and long, if the weather is bad, if things go awry, it is the liver which is at fault. It is generally "torpid." A common sense way is to take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. We generally eat too much, take insufficient exercise, by means of which our tissue-changes become indolent and incomplete. Be comfortable—you are comfortable when well. You'll be well when you have taken "Pleasant Pellets."

No Constipation follows their use. Put up sealed in glass—always fresh and reliable.

The Cuisine.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

GREEN TOMATO CATSUP.—One peck of green tomatoes, one dozen large onions, one-half pint of salt. Slice, add salt, and let stand twenty-four hours. Drain and mix with tomatoes one-half pound of mustard seeds, one tablespoonful of allspice, one ounce each of cloves, ground mustard, ground ginger, pepper, celery seed, and one-fourth pound of brown sugar. Cover with vinegar, boil two hours, and bottle hot.

TOMATOES FRIED IN CREAM.—This is a German dish. Fry small tomatoes in butter, first one side, then the other. When fried, salt and pepper, and then sift flour over them. Add a cup of sweet cream. Stew together until the cream is thickened, and the tomatoes cooked thoroughly. —Exchange.

CORNSTARCH PUDDING.—Put one quart of milk over the fire; dissolve four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch in cold milk and stir into the hot milk. Beat the yolks and whites of four eggs separately; stir in the yolks slowly, then the whites and a pinch of salt. Stir rapidly and set off the fire; dip teacups into cold water nearly filled with the pudding, and cool. When ready to serve, turn the cups bottom side up, each one on a dessert plate. Serve with sweetened cream and a bit of currant jelly on the top.—Housekeeper.

APPLE SHORTCAKE.—Make dough as for baking powder biscuit, only a little richer, and roll a little thinner than for biscuit; line a flat pudding-dish with the paste; quarter and core quick cooking apples, place on dough, season well with cinnamon, sugar, and butter; place on this another layer of dough and bake; cover, if the crust should bake too hard before the apples are done. Serve with rich cream. Substitute peaches for apples, and it is delicious.—Selected.

Here is a recipe for easily-made and economical frosting: The whites of two eggs will make frosting for two large cakes if properly managed. Beat them up with a little sugar until quite light, then put a tablespoonful of cold water into a dish, mix it slightly with the eggs and sugar already there, and add more sugar. This may be repeated until nearly a half a cupful of water has been added. The frosting must be well beaten, and may have any flavoring preferred. Made in this way, it sets quickly and retains its moist and delicate qualities much longer than when made with eggs alone. —Omaha Christian Advocate.

DESSERTS FOR CONVALESCENTS.—Among the desserts that may be given to the convalescents are jellies, baked apples, Irish moss blanc-mange, jellies made from gelatine, rice and tapioca puddings and creams. Tapioca cream is made by washing two tablespoonfuls of tapioca in cold water, put it into a double boiler, cover with water, and let it stand over hot water for fifteen minutes on the back of the range. Then pour on one pint of cold milk, bring it to the front of the range, and let it cook thoroughly. Separate the yolks from the whites of two eggs, pour the tapioca over the beaten yolks, and set on the stove again, and let it stand until it thickens like soft custard, then stir in gently the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Stir the eggs in until the cream is very light.—Health.

OBITUARIES.

BRYAN—Miss SARAH F., daughter of John T. and Sarah Jane Bryan, was born in Cherokee county, Texas, Aug. 21, 1867; moved while young with her parents to Jackson parish, La.; was converted to God and joined the M. E. Church, South, not under any special ministry, only that of a prayer meeting, which was in progress at that time, September, 1886.

Sister Fannie was indeed a model girl. Her coversion was bright and clear, and her life calm and serene. She became afflicted peculiarly and severely in the year 1891. All available skill was exhausted in her behalf, but to no avail. She learned very soon that her only refuge was in her Savior, and she calmly submitted to divine providences. Not a word of murmuring was ever heard to escape her lips; but she often said she was ready for the flight of joy time, which took place Aug. 13, 1894. Fannie leaves a widowed mother who has watched with all patience around her bed, and five brothers and three sisters and many sorrowing friends, to mourn—not as others who have no hope, but to rejoice that her sufferings are over.

Now that Fannie is gone to the home of the blessed let us, as mother, brothers, sisters, relatives and friends, like her, calmly submit to the will and providences of him who doeth all things well. May the God of all grace cheer and comfort the bereaved ones!

SIMS—Mrs. ANNIE D. SIMS (nee Oliver) was born at Forkland, Ala., July 9, 1869; was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1887; was married to J. T. Sims, Aug. 28, 1888, and died at Arcola, Miss., Aug. 17, 1894.

Her death has enveloped her own loved household in deepest gloom and cast dark shadows over the community. The church at Arcola has sustained a heavy loss. Her heart was in the work of her Master, and to attend church was her greatest delight. She was a devoted wife and tender, loving mother. I have been her pastor for nearly two years, and have never known or heard of her doing anything that reflected upon the cause of Christ. Her life was a practical comment upon the religion she professed. The removal of no one woman could have been regarded as a greater calamity to this community. She was held in high esteem by everybody, old and young, rich and poor, Jew and Gentile, saint and sinner.

She leaves a husband, two sweet little girls, mother, father and many other relatives and friends to mourn her death. But we are not as those who have no hope. She lived right, and we have the assurance that she has gone to live with her Savior, where she will be waiting and watching for her husband, children and other loved ones to welcome them to her father's house. May God bless and comfort the broken-hearted relatives, and may they resolve to meet her in the heavenly Canaan!

J. C. MIMMS.

WEBB—Died Aug. 13, 1894, at the home of her son, Mr. N. W. Webb, in Winston county, Miss., Mrs. SARAH WEBB, in the seventy-ninth year of her age.

Deceased was born April 9, 1816, near Elyton, Jefferson county, Ala., and in early life moved with her parents to Choctaw county, Miss. Later she was married to Mr. William H. Webb, a pious and benevolent man, who made her life happy until his death in 1877. Unto them were born two daughters and two sons, all of whom are now living.

Mrs. Webb, many years ago, was a member of the Presbyterian Church. In August, 1869, she united with Mt. Pleasant M. E. Church, in Winston county. She was a devout Christian and a zealous supporter of the church, and her upright life bears living evidence after her.

While her sickness was long and wearisome she bore her great affliction with surprising fortitude and submission to the will of God. She died in the blissful realization of the Christian's imperishable hope, trusting in God.

Earthly loves are stronger than death, and eternity will reunite the souls that time has put asunder. Thus has passed away a good mother, a true friend, and a consistent Christian, to join her husband, who had gone before, and is watching and waiting on the other shore.

HER NEPHEW.

HARRIS—ROBERT ANDERSON, infant son of Rev. W. C. and Mary A. Harris, was born in Iuka, Miss., April 2; died Aug. 22, 1894.

In the wisdom of our heavenly Father this precious bud of promise was taken from the chilling frosts of earth and placed in the warm sunlight of God's own presence, there to unfold in beauty and loveliness to all eternity. In the sickness and death of this sweet babe we are assured that there is a lesson by which we all may profit. His intense sufferings, so prolonged and yet so bravely borne, called forth the sympathy and interest of all who attended upon him. Seeing the brightness of his mind and the tenacity with which he clung to life, we hoped for his recovery, believing that God had a work for him to do. After all that could be done for him the angel of death claimed him, and our beloved pastor and wife bow in perfect submission and pass under the rod, believing that all things work together for good to them that love God. They now think of little Robert as among the blood-washed throng around the throne of God, joining in praises to the Captain of our salvation, who was made perfect through suffering. In the "better land" we'll read the meaning of our tears, and there, up there, we'll understand.

E. A. NABLETT.

DAILY—Died at Naw Hope, La., Sister E. A. DAILY.

The subject of this notice was born in the State of Alabama on Sept. 30, 1825, where she was married to the Rev. Levy Daily, Aug. 20, 1840. She became a member of the Methodist Church in early life, in which she lived a devoted member, ever practicing the duties that devolve upon a Christian, visiting the sick, and never losing sight of the fatherless; and it may be said that she kept herself unspotted from the world. She was the mother of twelve children, eleven of which survive her. The influence which she exerted has been demonstrated, in that all the children are members of the same church as the mother.

The community has sustained a loss, and is sorely bereaved; but we sorrow not as those who have no hope. The beautiful character that hangs up in our memory will, no doubt, influence her neighbors to a higher and better life.

After a long life of humility, she departed on Aug. 25 1891, and no doubt, has been exalted to wait for the entire reunion of loved ones in the "sweet by-and-by." J. M. FRANKLIN.

Fort Jessup, La.

SAVAGE—Mrs. CLARISA A. SAVAGE was born Dec. 4, 1809, in Union district, S. C. She united with the Methodist Church and professed faith in Christ in 1824. She moved to Mississippi in 1836, and in 1841 was married to Jessie Hendricks, who died in 1849. In 1850 she married Jno. Savage. He died in 1876. For more than threescore years she walked and talked with her Redeemer.

She was an intense sufferer for more than four months before her death. The writer visited her frequently during her illness. She was always cheerful, and her faith in Christ seemed to grow stronger. To be in her presence, and read the Bible to her and pray for her was indeed a foretaste of heaven. She bore all her afflictions without a murmur. All who knew her called her "Grandma." Her seat is vacant in Sunflower Chapel, but her soul is free from the cares and vexations of life.

May God comfort the bereaved son and grandchildren! May her mantle fall on some one! We laid her body to rest in the Anguilla Cemetery, July 17, to await the trump of God and the resurrection of the just.

Her pastor, J. S. HONGES.

Cary, Miss.

FORD—Mrs. HATTIE FORD (nee Foxworth) was born in Columbia, Miss., July 17, 1871, and died in Gloster, Miss., after a brief, though painful, illness on Sunday, July 1, 1891.

Sister Ford was reared by godly parents in a godly home. It was not strange, therefore, that the traits of character which made her lovable, and which endeared her to all who knew her, were conspicuous in her young, short life of womanhood. She was taught to love the pure and the good from early childhood. Her life was but a brief period, and was yielded up in the effort to impart life. The little sleeper rests near her in the cemetery. Their bodies moulder in the same dust, and their spirits nestle together in the home of the blest, I trust.

May the grief-stricken young husband and father, the devoted mother, and all who loved her, also love and serve the blessed Christ "who gave his life that we might have life" and that we might have it more abundantly."

C. A. POWELL.

HOOVER—Mrs. ELLA HOOVER, daughter of W. G. and Nancy A. Wolle, was born March 9, 1872; was married to A. J. Hoover, Jan. 7, 1892; died March 14 1894

She leaves an infant about one year old and her husband and relatives to mourn her loss. She accidentally caught on fire, and after several days died from the burn. She had been a member of the Methodist Church for five years, and died in the triumph of the Christian faith. May the blessing of God be with those who mourn her loss! O. L. SAVAGE, P. C.

CHAMBERS—THOMAS CHAMBERS was born in Franklin county, Miss., Nov. 21, 1871, and died at Roxie, Miss., Aug. 14, 1891, of a wound inflicted by a Mr. Byrd, of Roxie.

Bro. Chambers had many warm friends, and the whole county is in mourning on account of the sad death of our young brother. His parents are most devout Christians, and consecrated their children to the Lord in infancy. Bro. Tom joined the church while quite young.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Gov. Waite, of Colorado, has been nomioated by the People's Party as his own successor.

It is said that four of the State officers recently elected in Arkansas are natives of Mississippi.

A hotel is to be built on the site of the old St. Charles at a cost of not less than a million dollars.

The Democratic majority in the recent State election in Arkansas is said to be about thirty-five thousand.

There is a great disaffection towards the Democratic Party in Louisiana growing out of the sugar legislation of the last Congress.

After considerable delay, the Citizens' Protective Associat on have filed a suit for impeachment proceedings against the mayor of New Orleans.

That the country has finally commenced in earnest to shake off the ill effects of the panic of last year is becoming apparent from all the trade statistics which come to hand.

The "Church of Apostolic Faith and Order" has been launched in St. Louis. The members are mostly Baptists, and the movement is a protest against choirs, pew rents, ministers' salaries and other "religious abuses."

It is said that Mr. Vanderbilt's daughters have inherited their father's financial ability. They got $10 000,000 each, and, it is said, that Mrs. Sheppard, though she spent money freely and has given away many large sums in beneficence, now has $15 000,000.

Chicago has some trouble with the disposition of its garbage, too, in spite of the fact that it keeps a chief of the street-cleaning bureau, with a number of inspectors under him, whose business it is to see that the garbage contractors do their duty.

Acting upon the advice of Ex-Senator George F. Edmunds, a number of the licensed maple sugar producers of Vermont propose to unite in instituting a prosecution against the United States government for earned bounties on the crops of 1894, the payment of which has been refused by the Secretary of the Treasury.

There is every indication that within a few days there will be inaugurated in Boston one of the biggest strikes in the history of the clothing trade of New England. The various branches of the trade have held meetings and indorsed the recommendations of the Clothing Trade Council that the limping system be abolished, and that the weekly wages system be established; also that a uniform number of working hours be established.

It is announced from Washington that Secretary Carlisle has written a letter to Senator Mandarson containing his final ruling on the subject of the payment of the bounty on the sugar manufactured prior to the taking effect of the Tariff law. The Secretary states that, under his interpretation of the law, it will be impossible for him to make any further bounty payments, although he does not question the justice and validity of the claims.

At a convention of sugar planters in this city, it was resolved to secede from the Democratic party, on account of the treatment accorded to sugar by that party in the last Congress. As the sugar planters and others interested in that industry will not vote for Congressmen who do not pledge themselves to support the proposition to protect sugar, so will they refuse to vote for the presidential ticket of a party which declares for free trade.

According to the latest information from Kentucky, the contest in the Sixth Congressional District of that State, for the Democratic nomination for representative to succeed Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, has resulted in the defeat of Breckinridge and the election of W. C. Owens. The election was merely a party primary; but for exciting incidents, active canvassing and bitter feeling, it was quite unparalleled in the history of Kentucky.

FOREIGN.

The Japanese force moving from Genean has completely routed the Chinese at Sing Chuena. Both sides are supposed to have lost heavily.

A decisive battle was fought at Ping Yang, Corea, in which the Chinese army was utterly routed, losing nearly 20 000 men killed, wounded and missing. The battle places Japan in almost undisputed possession of Corea.

Three hundred and seventy-four foreigners are to be expelled from France as anarchists and dangerous and suspicious characters. It is said that the list contains no American or English names. Many of them will come to America, though, if something is not done to hinder them.

In honor of the Nicaraguan Independence day, the President of the republic, on Sept. 15, pardoned the political prisoners in the national jails. Among the men released under the decree were John Taylor, Clay Ingram and other Americans who were connected with the Mosquito uprising.

When So Many people are taking and deriving benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, why don't you try it yourself? It will build you up. Hood's Sarsaparilla will make you strong.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, sick headache, indigestion, biliousness. Try a box.

CAMP MEETING.

Shiloh Camp Meeting begins Friday night before the second Sunday in October. Ministers invited and will be entertained free. A hack will run from Pelahatchie to the camp ground, and will transport ministers free. They will pay their fare, but it will be returned upon leaving the camp ground.

For Dyspepsia
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. F. H. WELTY, Hamilton, Va., says: "I have used it frequently, and always with the most satisfactory result. Nothing is equal to it for treatment of dyspepsia and the various complications resulting from disorders originating in the stomach. I consider it invaluable."

Indian Mission.

I have just received a letter from Bro. Cammack, our Indian missionary, in which he reports a glorious meeting, with ten accessions to the church, and one more infant baptized, making 45 members. Glory, hallelujah! "Salvation is rolling on."

Brethren and sisters, pray earnestly for Bro. and Sister Cammack, and the Indian Mission.

I will now offer the following premiums: To the boy or girl under sixteen years old who will raise the largest amount on Bro. Cammack's salary, I will give $3 in cash, and to the gentleman or lady over sixteen years old who will raise the largest amount for same purpose, I will give one ten-dollar Oxford Bible. This offer to begin with September and close Dec. 10. Amounts to be in my hands by that date, or they will not be counted in the contest. Old subscriptions will not count in this offer. Contestants must have enough to buy premium, else it will not be given. Please send on amounts as fast as raised. Let everybody help in this great work.

HUMAN SELFISHNESS.

We go our ways in life too much alone;
We build ourselves too far from all our kind;
Too often we are dead to sigh and moan;
Too often to the weak and helpless blind;
Too often where distress and want abide,
We turn and pass upon the other side.

The other side is trodden smooth and worn
By footsteps passing idly all the day,
Where lie the bruised ones that faint and mourn,
Is seldom more than an untrodden way.
Our selfish hearts are for our feet the guide—
They lead us by upon the other side.

It should be ours the oil and wine to pour
Into the bleeding wounds of stricken ones;
To take the smitten and the sick and sore,
And bear them where a stream of blessing runs.
Instead we look about—the way is wide,
And so we pass upon the other side.

O friends and brothers, gliding down the years,
Humanity is calling each and all
In tender accents, born of grief and tears!
I pray you listen to the thrilling call,
Too close out, in your cold and selfish pride,
Pass pitilessly by on the other side.

On Japanese Soil.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B GALLOWAY, D. D.

Our good ship came to anchor in Yokohama Bay Sunday afternoon, at 5:30 o'clock, about a half mile from the wharf. After dinner, Dr. Wainright, Bro. Wadsworth, and myself hailed a sampan and went ashore to attend religious service. No sooner had we placed foot on solid ground than swarms of jinricksha men surrounded us, shouting, "Rickshaw! Rickshaw!" And there were the peculiar vehicles—a long row of them, enlarged baby carriages, with two wheels, shafts in front, and from each hung a Japanese lantern—certainly a very picturesque scene. A decidedly new sensation was experienced as I stepped in and a man trotted off with me at a lively rate. He has easy, regular trot, and such remarkable endurance as to be able to keep that gait for several hours. But at first I could not throw off a sense of humiliation in thus treating a human being. That, however, is his only business, to which he has been trained, and without which he could not secure a livelihood. They are the draught horses of commerce, the roadsters of the country, and the street-cars of the city. We stopped first at the post and telegraph office, that I might cable home our safe arrival. War news, I fear, will so occupy the lines as to delay its transmission. The cable is by way of London and New York.

We then rode on to the Methodist Episcopal Japanese Church, where we were elaborately received and highly honored. I have rarely enjoyed a service more, though not a word of sermon, song, or prayer could I understand. The old tunes were familiar, and I did want to join in the praise. A little Japanese woman played the organ, and all sang. The women had on neither hats nor bonnets, and sat apart from the men. At the close of the sermon I spoke a few words by request, an intelligent young Japanese teacher interpreting. That church has about 150 members, and there is another in the city with 80. Along the crowded streets were thousands who never heard of our Savior, and this little company did look forlorn; but they have the Word of Life, which is mighty to the pulling down of strongholds. A smaller number sat in a certain "upper room" from which power descended, and the ages were made to rejoice. The same Spirit is here in Japan, and will roll away the stone from the sepulcher, and make a new nation stand on its feet. I am glad my first worship on heathen soil was with a native congregation.

After service, we rode through a number of narrow, winding streets on our way back to the ship. The shops were ablaze with many-colored lights, the keepers sitting flat on the floor, and the streets crowded with chattering people of every dress and no dress, all seemingly as happy as children at play. Everything was so novel—the very novelty became a sort of intoxicated delight. Far into the night those oriental visions kept sleep from the eyelids, and then peopled my dreams with hopes for the glad morning when Christ shall win the heart of this Island Empire.

Our ship was to sail for Kobe, where the Conference is soon to meet, at two P. M. So we arose early, and went ashore before breakfast, to see as much as possible of Japan's greatest shipping port, though not her largest and most interesting city. There are two Yokohamas—one foreign and one native. And in appearance they are as distinct as the people who built them. The "concession" has substantial, tasteful modern houses, well-paved sidewalks, electric lights, etc. The city of the natives has narrow, crooked lanes for streets, with no sidewalks (the Japanese all walk in the middle of the street), and buildings and shops that look like children's playhouses. But in the native quarter there are ludicrous evidences of attempts to imitate the foreigner and catch his trade. This was seen on the English signs over many places of business, illustrating what some one has called 'English as she is Japped." Among others that attracted my eye was this, over a barber shop:

SHAVINGS AND HAIR CUTTINGS.

Here is another:

WATER WORK, A SEWER CLEANER, ETC.

This is the Japanese abbreviation on the conspicuous sign of a manufacturer of gentlemen's shirts:

SHIRT TAILER.

Hundreds equally as amusing could be given. No doubt, like funny mistakes are made by foreigners in their early use of Japanese. This was told me. The words in that language for rat and fountain are very much alike. So an accomplished missionary, in delivering an earnest discourse, made the very easy mistake of urging his congregation to "come and seek the Living Rat," instead of "come and seek the Living Fountain." Of another evangelist the story is told that he said, with a loud voice: "If you don't repent, you will go to the post office"—the words for postoffice and hell being very similar in sound. So the honors are even.

From the bluffs we had an admirable view of the city—really a beautiful place of 170,000, or more, inhabitants, with tiled-roof houses and scarcely a spire. Buddhist temples are very few in Yokohama, and they are never adorned with domes, steeples, or towers. The shops are an exhaustless source of interest to a foreigner. The curious and ingenious articles made with the hand, or very crude machinery, bring out the real genius of the people. They furnished striking confirmation of an opinion I had recently read from one of the best authorities on things Japanese. He said: "The Japanese genius touches perfection in small things. No other nation ever understood half so well how to twist a spray of flowers into artistic line, how to transform a little knob of ivory into a microcosm of quaint humor, how to express a fugitive thought in half a dozen dashes of the pencil. The massive, the spacious, the grand is less congenial to their mental attitude." Hence they have never excelled in architecture, have never invented anything like a Corliss engine, and in painting there are no grand original conceptions, but most beautiful copies from nature and from other pencils.

We visited the American consulate to arrange for passports. Foreigners can not travel beyond treaty limits—thirty miles from each of the four treaty ports—without special permission from the Japanese government. The consul, a native of South Carolina, but since boyhood a resident of Iowa, was most courteous and accommodating. By the terms of the treaty, all American citizens charged with any offense in this country are tried by American law. But a foreigner's complaint against a native is tried in a Japanese court. This provision is very offensive to the people, and for years there has been more or less agitation in favor of treaty revision. The American consul, under this provision, becomes a judicial officer—a United States judge—and the consulate a United States judicial district. Appeals are taken from his decisions to the Supreme Court of the United States, as from any lower court at home. A case came up for trial while we were there. Two poor coolies, bruised and battered, were making complaint against some American for assault and battery. The consul informed me that there were cases pending before him involving one and two hundred thousand dollars.

I called at the Bible House to see Rev. Henry Loomis, agent of the American Bible Society, to whom I had a very kind letter of introduction from Dr. Albert S. Hunt, of New York. He greeted the American strangers most cordially, and made us for a time almost forget that we were in a heathen land. As he was a fellow-passenger to Kobe in the Empress, I had opportunity of learning much of missionary and Bible work in Japan. Having been twenty-two years in the country, his acquaintance with the whole field is accurate and ample. This statement will give an idea of the remarkable growth: When he arrived in Japan, in 1872, there were only about 12 native Protestant Christians—now there are over 38 000 In January, 1893, there were 37,398. During the year previous 3,636 converts and additions to the churches were reported. Are not these figures inspiring? Have they not the thrill of power? And this has been wrought in the period of reaction and Buddhist aggressiveness which set in three or four years ago. But of these matters I will write later and more at length. Since writing the above, Mr. Loomis has just come in to tell me that the Bible House in Yokohama was burned last night, and that he will have to return by this evening's train. We hope to have him at our Conference next week.

We visited a large "tea-firing" establishment, where hundreds of operatives are employed—mostly women. There the tea is dried and prepared for the foreign market. There were long rows of large ovens, under each of which was a charcoal fire. A woman stood at each, and with her hand stirred the tea until sufficiently toasted. It is then boxed and shipped to America. I am told that the tea sent abroad is not so pure as that used here. Some chemical is mixed during the drying, which gives the color so much desired by the average American. Those laborers, I understand, get from eight to ten sen (cents) a day, which, in their depreciated currency, is worth four or five cents in American money. Ten cents a day is considered very good wages. Financial doctrinaires will take notice that the currency of Japan is on a silver basis.

I noticed that many of the women in that tea house had black teeth. It is a Japanese custom, dating back 800 years or more, that married woman must blacken the teeth with some kind of ink, and shave the eyebrows when they become mothers. The reason for the practice given is that wives thus become unattractive to other persons. If so, it is a success, for they are almost hideous. Maiden ladies, also, when the prospect of marriage seems hopeless, blacken their teeth, and die to the world. I am told the present Empress discards the custom, and that it is rapidly passing away. But I have already seen hundreds, if not thousands, thus hideously discolored.

At two P. M. our good ship weighed anchor, and steamed down the Bay.

On our way to Kobe I had a fine view of the channel of the Japanese Gulf Stream—the Kuroshio, or "Black Current." It is a mighty river in the sea, with as distinctly marked a channel as that out by the Columbia and Fraser rivers through the mountains of Northwestern America. The gulf stream is a dark blue, almost black, color, contrasting strikingly with the lighter green waters of the ocean; has a temperature ten degrees warmer than the sea just outside its channel, and a speed varying from three to seven miles an hour. Sweeping up from the Philippine Islands, it warms the coast of Japan, then flows in a northwesterly course, and washes the shores of British America and the States of Washington and Oregon. It accounts for the soft, pleasant climate of that section.

On our ship was the wife and family of the Chinese Minister to Japan, and other prominent Celestials, hurrying home because of the threatened war. At Kobe 175 others went aboard, homeward bound. The consul at Yokohama has asked the American representative to protect his consulate and the resident Chinese in the city. Excitement runs high, and everybody is talking about the war. BishopNinde, who is in Japan, and will probably be in this part of the empire in a few days, will hardly be able to visit the Corean Mission.

After a night in Kobe, I came up to Arima, in the mountains, where about 200 missionaries have gathered to spend a few weeks during the hot Summer. Bros. Bonnell and Burke and their families, from China, are here, and nearly all our brethren of the Japan Mission. Our Conference meets at Kobe on Thursday next.

Arima, Japan, Aug. 2, 1894.

P. S.—A letter just received from Dr. Young J. Allen, at Shanghai, reports him as convalescing from a long attack of typhoid fever, his first serious illness in thirty years. Letters have also come from Bros. Parker, Reid and Loehr, speaking hopefully of our cause in China. The brethren here are well and happy in their work.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Perfect Love.

By request we republish the following extract from the last quadrennial address of the college of Bishops:

"The privilege of believers to attain unto the state of entire sanctification or perfect love, and to abide therein, is a well-known teaching of Methodism. Witnesses of this experience have never been wanting in our church, though few in comparison with the whole membership.

"Among them have been men and women of beautiful consistency and seraphic ardor, jewels of the church. Let the doctrine still be proclaimed, and the experience still be testified. But there has sprung up among us a party with holiness as a watchword; they have holiness associations, holiness preachers, holiness evangelists and holiness property. Religious experience is represented as if it consists of only two steps—the first step out of condemnation into peace, and the next step into Christian perfection. The effect is to disparage the new birth, and all stages of spiritual growth from the blade to the full corn in the ear, if there be not professed perfect holiness. Such scriptural terms as 'saints,' 'sanctified,' 'pure in heart,' 'holy,' 'dead to sin,' 'filled with the Spirit,' and 'made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light,' are restricted to the few who have reached the height of perfect purity in love, and improperly denied to the body of believers; and not only to those who are new or weak in the faith, but also to mature Christians who, by walking with God in blessed fellowship and by patient continuance in well-doing, ever increasing in the knowledge of God, and being fruitful in every good work, adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things, and are pillars in the church. We do not question the sincerity and zeal of these brethren; we desire the church to profit by their earnest preaching and godly example; but we deplore their teaching and methods in so far as they claim a monopoly of the experience, practice and advocacy of holiness, and separate themselves from the body of ministers and disciples.

"To teach, practice and promote holiness of heart and life, after the standard of God's law and the example of Christ, is the work of the church. Those to whom is committed the care of souls should not suffer their flock to rest in a name to live without the life, in a form of godliness without the power, in outward morality and religious training without the renewing of the Holy Ghost. Not less earnestly should they be warned against mistaking excited moods and loud professions for pure and undefiled religion. Sin in all its manifold forms and degrees must be rebuked, and the beauty and joy of holiness, and the rich provisions and promises of the gospel, must be set forth, that preachers and people 'may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that they might be filled with all the fulness of God.'"

Abusing the Church.

Men who ridicule our pastors and abuse our church are not fit to preach in it. They do not deserve countenance. Pastors who bring them into their pulpits do not respect themselves nor comprehend their relation to the church of God. Papers that "boost" them are out of harmony with the church they live upon.

Such men have about the same relation to healthy church life that Peffer has to statesmanship and Debs has to honest work. And anarchy is in it all.

But one says: "They are not all alike; some are most useful, and help the pastors."

So; of them I do not write. I write of the other sort. They are "troublers of Israel." I have some opportunity of observation. I have studied this thing for years, and on both sides of this continent. And I say (simply as a member of the Methodist Church, and asking no favors, except what belongs to the truth): The people who ridicule our pastors and abuse our church are not fit to preach in it. Does anyone say they are fit?

I write of those who do the things complained of, not of those who don't. The sort of meetings such people conduct do infinite harm. Whatever hurts the pastor hurts all.

For the pastor I plead as I have done many times before and as I will do to the end. The pastor is, by odds, the most important man in the church.

Pastors should not give "aid and comfort" to men who abuse the church to attract the attention and win the applause of the mob. Nor should Methodist papers give them applause.

The opinion of the General Conference should have some force.

Our people (especially "trustees" and other "office bearers," set for the defense of Israel) should respect their pastors and their church. And they should cease to "harbor" and "feed" ecclesiastical tramps, "collecting shekels," whose "stock in trade" is abuse of the church and slander of her pastors.—Bishop Haygood, in Wesleyan Advocate.

"Our Own Schools."

In the last ADVOCATE, Rev. T. B. Holloman, president of East Mississippi Female College, has uttered a sentiment in regard to the competition between State and Church schools which I would like to hear reiterated again and again. He says: "The universal outcry is for endowment; and while we all realize the great advantage endowment gives, if Methodists were only loyal to Methodist institutions, we could, at every point, compete successfully with the State, do more for religious development, and strengthen our Methodism immeasurably."

I believe that statement to be true, and I think every observing person will agree with Bro. Holloman and myself on that point. Now, if that is a true statement, something else follows, and that something else ought to make some people feel very uneasy. There is a too widespread disposition to ignore the fact of responsibility in the non-performance of duty. Too many people fail to recognize their responsibility for what they do not do. The responsibility which is imposed upon a Methodist to support Methodist schools is self-imposed, and, therefore, is the heavier. He comes into the church under that vow voluntarily taken. He binds himself to that course by a most solemn covenant uttered to the church in the presence of the Most High God. Anybody can see the effect of a violation of such a covenant upon the person who has made it. But the matter is not merely personal. A man in the church stands related to all her interests, and when he fails at any point, those interests suffer damage. Is he not responsible for that damage to the full extent of his failure? Is he not in this case responsible for what he did not do?

I have never heard anyone say that Methodist schools are supported as well as they might be by Methodist people. The almost universal opinion is that they are not. Then the Methodist Church is suffering damage in the fact that many of her young people are being educated under the auspices of other denominations, or by the State. That simply means that many of them are being educated away from Methodism; away from its customs, practices, religion and traditions. This is an example of a church "divided against itself," and the result can be foretold by anybody. This is one line of action which leads to self-destruction. Now, this is a line of action which results in great harm to the church. Are not those who cause this harm responsible for it?

Like Bro. Holloman, I believe if the Methodists would support their own schools, we would not only have better schools, but we would save many of our young people to Methodism. How do Methodists ever expect to have schools that are of any account at all if they do not support them? "If we don't support them, who will?" The Presbyterians won't do it, nor will the Baptists, nor will the Episcopalians. They are committed to their own schools, and they stick to them. These other churches have a cohesive power which seems to be lacking among us. Somehow we don't stick together on the school question. The fact is, a great many Methodists have such callous consciences that they have forgotten their church vows. That fact, however, does not lessen their responsibility. It rather increases it to a fearful degree.

No one can for a moment doubt the ability of the Methodists to support their schools. What if all the boys of Methodist parents in Mississippi should this session knock for admission in to Millsaps College? What if all the Methodist boys in Louisiana should come to Centenary this year? And we have not the right to expect them? Have not the parents of these boys promised the church before God to do this very thing? Have we any right to believe that all these people meant nothing when they took that vow?

Of course, there are some Methodist people who are unable to send their children to college, but this is, I think, a small class. Boarding and tuition are now so cheap that almost anybody can, by self-sacrifice, afford to send their children to college. A man that won't deny himself in order that his child may be trained properly for his life-work is no man at all. Some people expend more money and more time and more thought on training their dogs and horses than they do in training their children. It would be a fearful thing to me to have to stand in their shoes and give the account to God which they will have to give.

I venture this assertion: If the Methodist people would support their own schools as they have promised to do, Methodism would take a new start, and talks about endowment funds would be "few and far between."

C. W. CARTER.

In the Living Present.

Crispi, the prime minister of Italy, in a speech at Naples emphasized that in opposing the socialistic and anarchistic propaganda the State and Church should act in harmony. In this he was certainly correct. Nor is the meaning ambiguous. But our Roman Catholic papers (and many of our metropolitan sheets are the faithful servants of the Pope) interpret the advice of the statesman, that the temporal power of the Pope would be restored. A narrow strip of land, reaching from the Vatican westward to Civita Vichia (the latter a seaport), would suffice. Wonderful interpretation! No doubt, the wish is father to the thought. Is said strip of land the stipulated price Rome demands for joining in the fight against the common enemies of society? Repeatedly the Romish Church has been in "the market," assisting in effecting necessary legislation only on condition of reciprocity. This was seen in the English Parliament, the French Assembly, and the German Reichstag.

Long-bearded, loquacious, obstreperous Peffer, the Populistic senator from Kansas, was very loud in his reformatory pretensions. He would usher in the golden era. But it developed that he is not better than the majority of our every-day politicians. Self is the god whom they worship. The well-being of the country is only incidentally promoted. Peffer was chairman of the Special Committee on Civil Service. As such, he was entitled to two clerks and one secretary. Whom did he appoint for these places? For the former, his two sons; for the latter, his daughter.

"Uneasy rests the head which wears a crown" does not hold good in all cases. It is with potentates as with other people. If native ability is joined by industry, success is ensured in any avocation. Queen Victoria, secure, serene, converses fluently in eight languages. A woman of wonderful talent and energy. Even without royal prerogatives she would have attained to great eminence.

"More money!" is the cry in some of our State Conventions. The cry is popular with the ignorant masses. More money—well, how? More money in the monster vaults in Washington and in our numerous banks does not relieve our impecuniosity. To fill our pockets with more money we have to toil hard. Nor would there be any benefit accruing from cheapening money—the desire of money. If the purchasing price of a dollar is only that of fifty cents, the trader will give us merchandise for our "cheap" dollar just to the amount of fifty cents. No more.

Pierson, the eloquent editor of the Review of Missions, holds that the greatest drawback to the cause of foreign missions is the weakness of the church at home. This weakness he attributes to (1) secularization of the church, (2) sensationalism in the pulpit, (3) indifferentism among Christians, and, lastly, to latent rationalism everywhere. DO SOMETHING.

Honest work brings health and joy,
But idleness is sin;
For every hour find some employ,
From time some blessing win.

The thorns from some one's path remove;
Make some one's sky more clear;
Let some one feel the joy of love,
The blessing of good cheer.

The time of labor soon is o'er,
The sun sinks in the west;
The cotter seeks his open door;
His toil has earned him rest.

So at the close of every day
May you look back and find
The duties in your path that lay,
Performed with willing mind.

"Holiness—Sanctification—Perfect Love."

BY REV. T. B. WHITE.

Beloved: These are Bible words. I write not as a controversialist, or as one specially gifted, or as one who has received a revelation other than God's Word, or as a cruel dogmatist. May it be by the blessings of God, and to his honor, that the great blessing of entire sanctification be so unfolded as it may not be hazy to our spiritual understanding, but a conscious verity! This precious experience of entire sanctification is held by a large minority of the people called Methodist, both lay and clerical. That there be no "divisions and strife," but that our loved church, so honored of God, may maintain the "unity of spirit in the bonds of peace," is the only reason of this writing.

Since our kind editor admits articles touching this "great depositum of Methodism," I flatter myself this article will find insertion.

Beloved, may I say my heart is made to mourn and groan because instead of our "watchmen seeing eye to eye," and leading the dear people into Canaan, there seems to be mystification and entanglement. Come! what are we to do? Leave this tangled web of exegesis and endless controversy, and each for himself enter the Beulah land of "perfect love." Mysterious! Everything is mysterious. "Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness." The very mystery of this doctrine and experience makes in its favor, as of God. It is blessedly mysterious!

I really think, after years of study, investigation, observation and experience, our brethren all are much closer together than many think. The arch-enemy, so wary, would make use of this condition to further his cause, so "let us not be ignorant of his devices." Just eliminate or modify a few radical expressions from the nomenclature of our theology, and the whole system stands out unique as of God; as a unit, "fitly joined and compacted together by that which every joint supplieth," "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ," "that we may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God."

O beloved, let us do more praying; have more fervency of spirit; have a "thus saith the Lord" for everything; have more love which "believeth all things;" less of acrimony, and hair-splitting theology; and let not prejudice, for once, be in our hearts. Let us seek to be led by the Holy Spirit, for "he will guide you into all truth." "Let us, therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded; and if in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you." "If any man do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."

Beloved, let us seek the will of God. What is it? "It is the will of God, even your sanctification." Oh, how much of spiritual formation—"going after strange flesh"—having other gods—is going on! The apostle has reference to that. The church is the Lamb's wife. How much of the world and the flesh may still remain—in our hearts, although we have a genuine conversion, experience! Has all this been taken out in conversion? Let everyone that can testify to that lift up his hand. Are there any heart-burnings, jealousies, bickerings, envyings, malice, pride, desire for the things of the world, its honors, glories, vanities? For "out of the heart of men proceed evil thought, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceits, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness." Are all these removed in conversion? Who of us fulfills the unselfish injunction. "Look not every man on his own things, but also on the things of another?" Who is it obeys the sweet command, "In honor preferring one another"? Who is it has the royal inheritance, "Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus"? Who of us has that "charity (love) which beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things, which thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth?" "To be carnal minded is death; to be spiritual minded is life." "The carnal mind is enmity against God." Carnality is sin; sin is revolutionary. Sin in one marks him not only as a deserter and rebel, but as a traitor. Don't wonder the apostle needs that highly wrought figure when speaking of this inbred sin, carnality, "O, wretched man that I am; who shall deliver me from this body of death?" Sin, actual and original, is the work of the devil; instigated by the devil. "For this purpose, that the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." Glory to God! is the carnal mind wholly destroyed in the blessed work of conversion? Can sin enter heaven? I make, nor do I admit a point, in the question frequently asked, "Is a man converted, if he dies suddenly, who never claimed entire sanctification, saved in heaven?" I leave that to the Divine Sovereign, the omniscient Arbiter, before whom everyone will stand or fall. If any had an opportunity to "go on to know the Lord," "to leave the principles of doctrine of Christ, and go on to perfection," "to sanctify the Lord God in their hearts," "to be filled with all the fullness of God!" "be sanctified throughout, soul, body and spirit, and preserved, blameless and harmless, the sons of God in a crooked and perverse generation," "be complete in him," "become partakers of the divine nature of our Lord Jesus Christ," and fail to receive this rich earthly inheritance—"come short of it"—matters at the final reckoning may be very different with them. "God is not mocked!"

Now, my beloved, let us be sure we are right about this infinitely important matter. We can not jeopardize our all; we must not fail. "Let us fear lest a promise being left us of entering into that rest, any of you should come short of it." O Holy Spirit, diffuse the light!

Refiner's fire, go through my heart,
Illuminate my soul;
Scatter thy light through every part,
And sanctify the whole! Amen!

Sanctification, so well and thoroughly begun in a sound scriptural conversion, culminates in heart purity, of which the blessed Savior saith, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Conversion, implying absolution from actual sins; sanctification, implying "cleansing from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit;" the "carnal mind," inbred sin. Hallelujah! If this complete double work is done in conversion, well, glory to God! we have no controversy with you. If, as death stealthily approaches, the "Lord should suddenly come to his temple," as by his sovereign grace, praise the Lord! If, through a period of years, as "Enoch, who had this testimony, that he pleased God," through condescending grace, the believer, by a special act of faith, received Christ as his sanctifier, and walks in uprightness before him "without spot and blameless," hallelujah to the Lamb, whose "blood cleanseth from all sin!" And if this cleansing process makes us "meet to be partakers of the saints in light" (hallelujah forever!), then our gravitation is heavenward; the transition, or rather translation, is easy, natural, delightful. "To die is gain." The sting of death is drawn; the bloodwashed are agreeable companions; the Lord Christ is our magnet; he will have "seen the travail of his soul, and be satisfied." The house of many mansions, prepared for those who have come up through great tribulation, and washed their robes and made them "white in the blood of the Lamb," is achieved. O glory to God for this "great salvation!" Have you got it?

How It Strikes a Stranger.

MY TRIP TO MONTEAGLE.

In fulfillment of promise, I jot down some of the impressions of my recent trip to Monteagle. A life-long Mississippian, closely kept at home, I saw some things of great interest to me en route. A night trip over the Q. and C. line to Chattanooga usually affords few sights. At Birmingham I was awakened by the loud-resounding train bells in the handsome and well-roofed depot tracks. A brief glance by electric light and sky light (reflected from iron furnaces) gave the impression of a well-built and progressive young city. The broad streets and stone buildings have a substantial air that is quite pleasing. The glow of hundreds of iron furnaces in the suburbs reaches high above the clouds, suggesting thoughts both sublime and awful.

Our train being an hour late, found me awake and the sun rising as we glided into sight of the southwestern point of old Lookout, near the picturesque town of Attalla. Who can describe his emotions in viewing for the first time a mountain clothed in verdure, bathed in lakes of purple, touched and tipped with Aurora's rosy fingers, as "she opes the pearly gates of morn"? Sunrise among the mountains on a bright and dew-dipped morning is as charming as any sunset could be. The curling smoke from chimneys of early-rising denizens of the valley; the quiet cottages of the mountaineers, seeming to cling to the strong cliffs of the rock, while cattle and horses quietly browse on the meadows between, present a scene of sylvan beauty and rural life truly poetic.

As we glided along up Wills' valley and down the Chattanooga for eighty-seven miles, these sights were being rapidly thrust upon my vision in bewildering variety, and yet with general similarity of outward contour.

The passage of the railroad track beneath the beetling crag of Lookout's northeastern point and close to the brink of the Tennessee river where Moccasin Bend winds its serpentine length between this point and Walden's Ridge, is said to be a wondrous feat of engineering. Three important railroads use this right of way from Wahachie to Chattanooga. It belongs to that superb old line, the N., St. L. and C. railway. The A. G. S. and M. and C. pay for the privilege of using it, and find it much cheaper than tunneling the mountain or double-bridging the river.

I find that a mountain is like the ocean in the infinitude of its coloring, the boundless variety of its beauty, the sense of awful grandeur it induces. No wonder the good Book uses these as types of the love and power and protection of the omnipotent Father, who is glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, wondrous in his grace and mercy.

Circling under Sunset Rock and Point Hotel (built in the rock near the crest that overhangs the river), we are soon on the stone-paved streets of noisy Chattanooga. It is much like other cities of its size, only more so. Its drainage is perfect, its buildings massive, and some of them very handsome. That erected by The Times is thought to be the most stable and symmetrical of all such public buildings in the South, and, perhaps, unexcelled anywhere as the home of newspaperdom. Its five stories rise from the vantage ground of an eminence immediately above the business part of the city. That editor ought to gain great inspiration. Thoughts that breathe and words that burn ought to fly out from that sanctum daily. The Times seems to have the courage of its convictions. This, at least, is commendable and somewhat rare. The churches, with their towering and heaven-pointing steeples, proclaim the truth that "here we have no continuing city." The native stone (a combination of limestone and granite) looks enduring as well as beautiful. When these crumble may all who ever worship there find a home in the gold-paved and jasper-walled city whose ever light-bearing temple is the Lord himself. Among these consecrated buildings I fain would linger, but here I am still at Chattanooga when I promised to go to Monteagle. You are so tired I must give you a rest and take another issue for my impressions of Monteagle, etc. While here, however, I'll say that every lover of beautiful trees and perfectly kept landscapes should be sure to visit the National Cemetery near the base of Missionary Ridge. It lies between two street-car lines of the city—two miles distant, perhaps. Here the mortal remains of thirteen thousand Federal soldiers lie beneath the smooth, green sward, shaded by the most beautiful collection of young forest trees my eyes ever rested on. I thought how green, how forever vernal grows life out of death. Ten men, with several horses and lawn mowers of different kinds, continually clip and keep the seventy-five acres devoted to these fallen heroes. At the summit of the cone-shaped hill waves the flag for whose honor they bled and died. In the center of each section stands an enduring tablet with some beautiful sentiment embossed thereon. I copied from one of them these noble lines:

"Your own proud land's heroic soil
Must be your fitter grave;
She claims from War his richest spoil—
The ashes of the brave."

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

Our North Mississippi Conference female college, the Grenada Collegiate Institute, opened its thirteenth session, and first of the new management, Sept. 5. The opening, with an enrollment of over sixty pupils, was highly gratifying. We confidently expect over one hundred in the next week or ten days. Our equipment is now excellent. With the new matting, rugs and furniture, the rooms for boarders are neat and comfortable, and the class rooms are fitted up for the best work. Many improvements have been made, and many more are contemplated. If the brethren will rally to their Conference school, we will fit up an art gallery at once in the upper court next to the dome, where we can have ample room and the best possible light. The room we are now using was intended for that purpose, but our class starts off so well that it is now about as large as the room can well accommodate. The collection of books I find here in the library is quite small. We need, and must have, a first-class library for the benefit of our pupils. A good collection of choice reading matter is a necessity for the success of the literary societies it is my purpose to organize in a few days. All appliance for immediate need in scientific instruction not now on hand are being arranged for. We feel hopeful now that every room fitted up for pupils will be taken. Indeed, there is not room enough in the building to accommodate one girl in ten of those who go off to school from the North Mississippi Conference membership. Is it, then, asking large or unreasonable things of our people to fill up their own school, even to its utmost capacity? I believe they will do it. We march an army to church now of about forty, and it is being increased day by day. I never saw a brighter nor a happier lot of girls. Our teachers are taking hold of the work heartily, and everything is working harmoniously and smoothly. Indeed, everybody seems happy throughout the college. I write this much that the brethren may know how we start off.

J. W. MALONE.

Brookhaven, Miss.

Our church here is gradually developing. Attendance at Sunday-school and preaching services is constantly growing.

Rev. Tokichi Masao was with us yesterday. He preached in the morning, and lectured at night on Japan. He took a collection for Mrs. Lambuth's training-school for girls in Japan. Forty-seven dollars and forty-one cents were contributed in cash and subscription.

Whitworth College opens very encouragingly. The enrollment is more than twice as large this year as last. So I am reliably informed. Considerable improvements have already been made in the dormitory, kitchen, dining-room, and campus; and still the work goes on. I think the Mississippi Conference and Whitworth College have in Bro. Chambers the counterpart of Dr. H. F. Johnson. I feel sure that the Methodists of Mississippi will rally to his support when they know what he has done, continues to do, and proposes to do for the higher Christian education of the young women of our country. His faculty, I think, challenges competition in the State, unless it be at Columbus. I am confident that old Whitworth has started on a new era of prosperity.

We have the promise of the services of Rev. W. M. McIntosh to assist in a meeting the latter part of next month. We are praying for and expecting a glorious time. M. H. MOORE.

Selections.

The Sin of Fretting.

There is one sin which, it seems to me, is everywhere and by everybody underestimated, and quite too much overlooked in valuations of character. It is the sin of fretting. It is as common as air, as speech; so common that unless it rises above its usual monotone we do not even observe it. Watch any ordinary coming together of people, and see how many minutes it will be before somebody frets—that is, makes more or less complaining statement of something or other which most probably everyone in the room, or in the car, or on the street corner, it may be, knew before, and probably nobody can help. Why say anything about it? It is cold, it is hot, it is wet, it is dry; somebody has broken an appointment, ill-cooked a meal; stupidity or bad faith somewhere has resulted in discomfort. There are plenty of things to fret about. It is simply astonishing how much annoyance may be found in the course of every day's living, even at the simplest, if one keeps a sharp eye out on that side of things. Even Holy Writ says we are prone to "trouble as sparks fly upward." But even to the sparks flying upward, in the blackest of smoke, there is a blue sky above; and the less time they waste on the road, the sooner they will reach it. Fretting is all time wasted on the road.—Helen Hunt.

Living at Our Best.

Do not try to do a great thing; you may waste all your life waiting for the opportunity which may never come. But since little things are always claiming your attention, do them as they come, from a great motive, for the glory of God, to win his smile of approval, and to do good to men. It is harder to plod on in obscurity, acting thus, than to stand on the high places of the field, within the view of all, and to do deeds of valor at which rival armies stand still to gaze. But no such act goes without the swift recognition and the ultimate recompense of Christ. To fulfill faithfully the duties of your station; to use to the uttermost the gifts of your ministry; to bear chafing annoyances and trival irritations as martyrs bore the pillory and stake; to find the one noble trait in people that try and moilst you; to put the kindest construction on unkind acts and words; to love with the love of God even the unthankful and evil; to be content to be a fountain in the midst of a wide valley of stones, nourishing a few lichens and wild flowers, or now and again a thirsty sheep; and to do this always, not for the praise of man, but for the sake of God—this makes a great life.—F. B. Meyer.

A Consecrated Tongue.

The Holy Ghost is the power of a gentle heart. His quiet, loving, benign influence soon works its changes in voice and hand and heart. The wondrous changes that the Holy Spirit has wrought in the human voice, softening and subduing its harshness, are readily seen. The scolding, carping, fault-finding spirit that bitters and burns and blasts, is driven from the soul that is possessed by the Spirit of God. "Bitterness and wrath and anger and clamor and evil speaking with all malice"—what an array of vipers that sting and poison life, nestling beneath an unsanctified tongue. The tongue is a revealer of the heart. Many a well-dressed man or woman with all the outward marks of refinement, discount it all as soon as the mouth is opened to talk. The Holy Ghost takes possession of the tongue, and his greatest victories are gained there. "A soft answer turneth away wrath." How often that truth is needed in our Christian life. Gentleness of the tongue is a grace sorely needed in Christian conversation. It is so easy to find fault, to answer back, to speak unkindly, to cherish old grudges, to get excited and talk loudly, to say mean things about others. "Put these things away" by putting this fruit of the Spirit in their place. Good breeding in the world is attested by the very tones of the voice. Shall our lineage in the family of God have a lower standard than this?—Christian Intelligencer.

Personal Work.

After all the preaching is done, and the exhortation ended, more real good may be wrought by the private, personal word than by all other means combined. Face to face personal work has a mark of earnestness and a definiteness of aim that can not be mistaken. Says the Evangelical: "One of the strongest elements in the work of soul-winning is found in direct personal work. There is great potency in prayer. There is power in impassioned exhortation and entreaty. There is much force in the tender and cordial invitation coming from the pulpit. But where all these have failed and proven powerless, an earnest personal word, coming from a soul all aflame with the love of Jesus, has been successful in helping the undecided to solve the great question of salvation. The greatest soul-winners to-day are those who, with hearts consecrated to the work, labor with the individual, and by direct personal persuasion win him for Christ. The church needs more of this kind of work. The earnest labors of every pastor should be supplemented by personal endeavor on the part of his members."

Practice Love.

We learn to love by loving. It grows by practice. Like everything else, it gathers strength through exercise. The more we keep at it, the easier and more natural it becomes.

We can form the habit of looking at people with love, thinking about them with love, speaking of them in love, and acting toward them lovingly. Our deeds will react upon our thoughts, and our thoughts and feelings will prompt to action. So we may become steeped in love. It will radiate from us as the light from the lamps. We shall be charged with it as the battery is with electricity, and power will go out from us. So instead of crying idly, "Oh, for more love!" let us lay more stress upon the practice. If we continually use what we have, it will increase.—Christian Inquirer.

What is the right kind of religion? Not that which consists in a profession of faith in a creed; your professed belief may be sound enough, and yet it may never have produced the fruits of righteousness in the life. It is not merely "getting happy;" it is better to be just, benevolent and faithful than happy. Neither is severe condemnation of other people's faults a sign that you are right. You may denounce other people's faults, and yet not renounce your own besetting sins. Someone has said, "It is entirely safe for you to distrust all those 'experiences' which lead you to think better of yourself and worse of your fellowmen." The root principle of true religion is such a faith in God as makes spiritual things real, such faith in Christ as brings to the soul the assurance of forgiveness, such consecration to God as gives every talent and faculty to his service. It gives peace and power. The joy of salvation is not a selfish gratification. It is the love and peace of God in the heart, prompting to the doing of good to others, according to the measure of our ability and opportunity.—Guardian.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and forced to do your best will breed in you temperance, self-control, diligence, strength of will, content, and a hundred virtues which the idle will never know.—Charles Kingsley.

A Typical Instance.

A coroner of Miami county, Ohio, after due examination made by competent physicians in the case of a man who died of typhoid fever under the so-called Christian Science treatment, declares in his verdict that the patient died because of improper treatment, and was the victim of a practice which is detrimental and jeopardizing to the public health and the best interests of the people. He recommends the enactment of laws that would make this sort of practice a crime against the State. Instances of deaths occurring under circumstances akin to those recited above are becoming common.

Little children, stricken with contagious and dangerous diseases, have been allowed to grow worse, until they have died, under the superstition that a cure was to be wrought by faith, or in answer to prayer, or by the influence of Christian Science. This sort of credulous folly ought to be exposed and denounced. We suppose that no Christian believer doubts that God's blessing and guidance and help, along with, and upon, the physician's skill and the nurse's fidelity, are factors of power in the recovery of the sick. But to depend on divine interposition alone, as the means of recovery, and to expect the sick to get well from dangerous maladies without the aid of the physician, or the use of the agencies which Providence has put into our hands for use in case of illness, is a policy of stupidity, blindness and superstition which ought to have no place in an age which professes to be civilized and enlightened.—N. W. Advocate.

Earnestness in Practical Religion.

Theology and religion should never be divorced, nor should religion be separated from its practice, nor its practice from the earnestness which should always distinguish it. Perfunctory religion must be displeasing to God and can be of little service to man. God pronounces a woe upon those who are at ease in Zion, and men are instinctively repelled from the house of God by such worshipers. There is unhappily so much of this formalism in many churches; and such manifest lack of blood-earnestness in their aggressive Christianity, that failure only can be the legitimate result. It is a mockery to God and man to presume to expect that churches can flourish and non-church-goers can be attracted and souls can be saved by the lackadaisical, namby-pamby, ceremonial, formalistic efforts of many churches.

Where enthusiasm of the right type is wanting in the membership Ichabod may be inscribed on the lintels and door posts of the house where they assemble for the practice of their formalities. God has not changed his opinion of such worshipers, since he wrote with the pen of Isaiah, 'Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth; they are a trouble unto me; I am weary to bear them."—The Treasury.

Suggestive.

If you should wish to be miserable, you must think about yourself—about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay to you, and then to you nothing will be pure. You will spoil everything you touch; you will make sin and misery for yourself out of everything which God sends you; you will be as wretched as you choose.—Kingsley.

The Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur is one of the most successful pastors in the Baptist or any other denomination in this country. He has for many years made it a practice to give special attention to the habits of his people as to their religious reading and their familiarity with the denominational papers. He is unwilling that any family in his church should be without such a paper, and he takes special pains to see to it that none is left pariless.

The State of Tennessee has bought 9,000 acres of coal land, and will mine it with convicts. No more convicts will be leased to mining companies and by this step it is hoped to settle the convict question and put a stop to rioting in the mining regions of the State, caused by free labor coming in contact with convicts.—Exchange.

Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people, and the old are hungrier for love than for bread. The oil of joy is very cheap, so if you help the poor on with a garment of praise, it will be better for them than blankets.—Professor Drummond.

The dreariness of drudgery may be changed to the blessedness of drudgery if the daily duty be regarded as the college of life for growth in mental power and as a gymnasium for building up character.—Chicago Interior.

Rather than upbraid God for the ills that have befallen thee, thank him for those which have not befallen thee.—Ivan Panin.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. T. Cunningham, P. C., Hillhouse, Miss., Sept. 18: "Closed a meeting of six days at McLeod's Chapel, on Friday night last. Had no ministerial help from first to last, but the presence and power of the Spirit were manifested. A number of bright conversions in the old way—through agonizing prayer at the altar. Quite a number reclaimed who had gone back to the world. Six accessions by ritual. We are now in a meeting at Sherard with cheering prospects. Rev. J. A. Whitehurst came yesterday, and will be reinforced by his brother, Rev. J. B. Whitehurst, later."

Rev. C. C. Grisham, Paris circuit, North Mississippi Conference, Sept. 11: "We are closing our protracted meetings on the Paris charge. God has blessed us with 80 additions, and more to follow. We have had about 100 conversions to date. This is the third year for me on the work, and we have had 250 additions to the church during that time. To God be all the glory! God bless Bro. F. D. Guice, of the Mississippi Conference, for valuable services rendered at three of my meetings; for I broke down in one of the meetings, but he continued the fight, and God gave us 28 additions. The local brethren have assisted faithfully in the work."

Rev. W. F. Sanders, Centerville charge, Louisiana Conference: "On Sept. 9 we closed a glorious meeting of ten days at Centerville. Results: 26 converted, 3 sanctified, and quite a number reclaimed, and 11 accessions; 4 infants baptized. This was a time of great power at Centerville. We closed a short, but a good, meeting last night at Master's Chapel. The church was gloriously blessed. Six converted and a goodly number reclaimed; 2 joined; infants baptized, 2. To God be all the glory! Revs. B. M. Walker and J. J. Arnold did the preaching in these meetings, save one sermon by Rev. S. J. Davies, P. E., which was a soul-stirring one. Glory be to God! Salvation is rolling on."

Rev. Ben. P. Jaco, P. C., Abbeville circuit, Sept. 13: "We have held six meetings of much interest and great good. Some churches were revived, others powerfully blest. The Holy Spirit, in sweet and wonderful power, was greatly felt. The cold were warmed, the backslidden were moved forward, and sinners were made 'new creatures in Christ Jesus.' Misunderstandings and disagreements were cleared up, so that we are of one mind—in some cases possessing the spirit of Christ where another spirit once prevailed. Decided success is ours, and many victories have been won for Christ and the church. Have received about 30 souls into the church, erected many family altars, and put general activity in the maintenance of the institutions of the church. We expect to make a full report at the Annual Conference."

Rev. J. R. Roy, Simsport circuit, La., Sept. 17: "I commenced a meeting at Legonier Sept. 4, and continued to Sept. 14. Bro. Johns, of Pisquemine, was with me and did the preaching. Results: 9 additions on profession of faith; the church greatly revived. Bro. Johns preached to the delight of both pastor and people. He endeared himself very much to my people. Some of them expressed a desire to have him for their pastor for another year. On Saturday before the third Sunday in September I went to Marine, one of my appointments. Preached Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night; opened the doors of the church, and 15 joined the church. The Lord was with us in great power. Praise his holy name for what he is doing for us. I also baptized 3 infants. We have had a total this year of 39; have one meeting to hold yet. Brethren, pray for us. All glory to God for his holy presence!"

Rev. W. T. Woodward, Port Vincent circuit, Woodville district, Louisiana Conference: "We are moving along splendidly on this work. Our third Quarterly Conference was held last week, and we had a delightful time indeed. After listening to a very timely and spiritual sermon from our beloved presiding elder, P. A. Johnston, from the text—I. Timothy iv, 16—the Lord's Supper was administered, and the largest number communed since the second coming of our blessed Lord than any previous occasion since I came to the work. The Conference was well attended. Bro. Johnston put in a good lick for Centenary College, as to having it repaired. Preacher's salary up to date, lacking twenty-one dollars. All collections ordered by the Annual Conference are in full in good subscription. I expect to bring up a clean sheet this December. We have had about 75 conversions on the work, 31 accessions, 18 baptized and 39 entire sanctifications. We have the Port Vincent M. E. Church, South, all finished save ceiling, flooring and seating. We are going to have our parsonage under headway ere long. My good people presented me with a beautiful gold watch last week. They could not have presented me with a more useful article than a good timepiece. The watch has already proven to be an excellent time-keeper. We are going to stay in the Louisiana Conference, unless they hade us hence."

Newton Brown (layman), Indian Mound, La., Sept. 9: "Bethel has been considered the hardest church on East Baton Rouge circuit; but during the last week it witnessed a great revival. The meeting began on the first Sunday in September. Every sermon was preached with power and seemed to suit the occasion. Monday afternoon the Rev. Samuel Bell came to the assistance of our pastor, Bro. Linfield, and preached six sermons accompanied with the Holy Spirit. The meeting continued until Friday night with three sermons each day, besides a powerful work done in the woods prayer meeting. Valuable assistance was rendered by Bro. Lewis McMenis, a layman from East Feliciana, who led the woods prayer meeting, besides doing good work in the altar. When the four o'clock service closed Friday evening and the altar exercises were closed, Bro. Linfield told the congregation that if there were any who were in earnest about their spiritual condition, he would pray with them until they were satisfied. The altar was soon crowded with penitents. Small groups could be seen in every direction pleading with God for the conversion of their friends. The Holy Spirit came down and took possession of the meeting. Each soul caught the fire. This service continued until 9 o'clock at night, when the pastor called a halt to attend to the reception of members. There were 20 accessions. Thirty persons claimed conversion. The results will never be known this side of eternity. May God bless Bro. Linfield for proving to be such a power in the hands of the Lord! To God be all the glory."

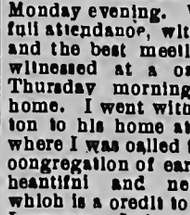
Rev. P. E. Duncan, West Point, Miss., Sept. 8: "Perhaps some of our brethern would like to hear an echo from one of our mission circuits. I rejoice to read the good tidings which have come from so many parts of our moral vineyard. It seems like a tidal wave of salvation is flowing over our land. The Cedar Bluff circuit has eight appointments, furnishing an ample field of labor for a beginner in the itinerancy. From the Conference Minutes can be seen the financial standing of the work. Paid preacher in charge last year, $158.05; presiding elder, $26 35; Conference claims, $29 00. To this should be added a nice new church, a monument of the indomitable energy and perserverance of Bro. A. P. Leach, my predecessor. Have organized since Conference six Sunday-schools, which, I trust, will not be driven into winter-quarters by the first killing frost. Have just closed six of my protracted meetings, with gracious revivals at each place. Some of the manifestations of the Spirit's power will long be remembered by those present. Differences of years' standing made up in church, and pardons asked and granted. Eighty members by letter and profession were added to the different churches, and between thirty and forty joined other churches. I wish to make grateful acknowledgement of valuable services rendered in two of my meetings by Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan and my presiding elder, Dr. T. C. Wier. We have purchased a lot, and are preparing to build a nice church at Mahen, the place chosen to hold our next District Conference. Should the writer be the preacher in charge, he will take this occasion to extend you a cordial invitation to be present. Have all my Conference collections in cash and subscriptions, and expect to have something over for good measure. I greatly feel the need of Christian literature among my people, and hope before Conference to place a goodly number of our valuable church organs among them."

Rev. W. S. Shipman, Greenwood, Miss., Sept 7: "Our church here is doing well, spiritually and financially. Saloons will soon be a thing of the past in this, the livest town in the Delta (so the drummers say), and I am of the opinion 'blind tigers' will have a hard time to live in Greenwood. We attended the opening of Grenada Collegiate Institute on the fifth instant, and was well pleased with what we saw and heard. The presidents are young, vigorous, cultured, deeply pious, and are determined, by the help of God, to impress every young lady that enters school that it is presided over by men and women that know and love God and the Methodist church. The faculty seems to be wisely selected. We had the pleasure of their company for hours, and found them genial, happy, and intelligent; seeming to understand their business, and more than willing to attend to it, and they are all members of the Methodist Church. About thirty-five boarding pupils were present at the very beginning, and as many as fifty are expected in a few days. This is a good beginning, and we have reason to believe 'tis the beginning of very great success. Why not? This institution is the property of the Methodist Church, and the only college for girls in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference, and every preacher, layman woman and child in the bounds of this Conference should feel an interest in this institution and rally to its support. Brother, you have an interest in this college, and if 'tis not run to suit you, speak out; 'tis ours, and if it is not what it should be, it is our business to make it what it should be. When the North Mississippi Conference agreed to purchase the property, of course it was done with the understanding that we would love, honor and be faithful to this, our only college for girls and young ladies. We needed but one, but that one we needed badly, and the older we grow, the more we need it. Upon what basis can we project church educational enterprises if not upon the faith of our people, and especially our preachers? Faith in their loyalty to whatever the church thinks best to be done. The North Mississippi Conference decided that we needed one female college, and bought the property now known as Grenada Collegiate Institute for young ladies; and when around this institution the prayers, faith and works of every Methodist, and especially every member of the North Mississippi Conference, clusters, you will see your ideal of a Methodist female college."

Rev. J. W. Burton, L. D., Ramsay station, Ala., Sept. 12: "By request of Bro. Thompson, of Lauderdale circuit, Meridian district, I was at Bethel Church to commence a meeting on Aug. 19. We held six days, with two sermons a day, save one, which was rained out. Bro. D. L. Kirkland came to our help on Tuesday, and did much earnest work until Thursday night, when he left us for other fields. We had a good meeting; 7 infants baptized; 5 new family altars erected; 9 backsliders reclaimed up to Wednesday night. After this time the spirit was so profusely poured on preacher and people that we failed to keep an account. For man to report such meetings in full we think impossible, for the full amount of good to be known will require the developments of eternity. To God be all the praise! Bro. Thompson was on the mend when heard from last. God bless the ADVOCATE.....On the morning of Aug. 25 I was found at Lake Camp Meeting, where a large number of people had already collected, and services actually going on, but no evangelist. Such plugs as your humble servant, McDonnel, Witt, Williams, Barr and others, had the preaching to do. The congregations continued to increase until Monday evening. We had a large and full attendance, with good preaching, and the best meeting I think I ever witnessed at a camp ground. On Thursday morning we left for our home. I went with Rev. R. W. Burton to his home at Laurence station, where I was called to preach to a nice congregation of earnest listeners in a beautiful and newly-built church, which is a credit to the good people of Laurence. It is not quite completed, but no doubt will soon be. We had a good service there, with five or six penitents at the altar for prayer. Sorry I could stay no longer, but was compelled to leave in order to commence another meeting for Bro. Thompson. Much love and good wishes to the good people of the camp meeting and Laurence station.....On the morning of Sept. 1, I commenced a meeting at Brogan Chapel, and continued until the evening of the fifth with apparently little good accomplished. The church seemed to move up a little, but no good apparently on the outside. One adult baptized. There were about ten or a dozen young men here and as many young ladies whose souls seemed to be wrapped up in each other; so that we could find no means to reach them, and had to leave them in the hands of a loving Creator to watch over them and care for them. The sixth found me at my own home, surrounded by loved ones, who had been kindly cared for by our Creator in my absence of the past three weeks. To God be all the praise for past blessings. Much love to the ADVOCATE. Other reports may follow."

Scrofula in the Neck

The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:



Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

He has never been very robust, but now seems healthy and daily growing stronger."

Worse Than Pestilence.

The papers state that since Ingersoll's recent deliverance advocating suicide, a copy of his article has been found in the pockets of several persons who had taken their own lives. Whether this be true or not, it is unquestionably true that suicide is a legitimate fruitage of Ingersoll's creed. Ingersoll's deliverance in advocacy of suicide was not needed in order to produce a bounteous harvest of self-murder. The propagation of his creed is sufficient. Suicides are more frequent among the people of the United States of America than they have been among any civilized people since the fall of the Roman Empire—with, perhaps, the single exception of the French about the time of the "Reign of Terror." Infidelity is prevalent in this country to-day as it was in France a century ago, and as it was among the Romans during the age of Nero. Is there no connection between the two? Do they not stand related as cause and effect? We are firmly convinced that they do. Thorough investigation, we believe, would reveal the fact that a very large percentage of those who have committed suicide in the United States during the past decade had become secretly, if not openly, disciples of Ingersoll. Not every infidel avows his principles. Out of deference to public opinion and for prudential reasons of various sorts, many take more or less pains to conceal their unbelief from their fellow-men. From this class we are persuaded come a large percentage of our suicides. And why should such a man not commits suicide when he is involved in troubles from which he sees no way to extricate himself? If there is no God and no life beyond the grave, why should a man continue for years to bear unbearable ills,

"When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin!"

Accept Ingersoll's premises and you find it difficult to resist his conclusion.

But suicide is only a very small part of the direful harvest which Ingersollism has produced in our midst. Human nature needs, as an incentive to virtue, faith in a Supreme Power that rules the universe in the interest of righteousness. Destroy this faith, and the poor, depraved, corrupt thing becomes the sport of lawless caprice and hellish passion. If there is no God, and no life beyond the grave, then why should those mythical notions which men conceive of as moral obligations exercise any restraining influence upon one's conduct? If there is no such thing as moral law and a moral Ruler of the universe, if the interests of this life are the only interests to be guarded, then why hesitate to commit what men in their ignorance call crime, if one's temporal interests can thereby be promoted? Convince the masses of mankind that the Bible is a cunningly devised fable, God a myth, and the future life a madman's dream, and you put a premium upon vice, you open the flood-gates of iniquity, you subvert the very foundations of social order.

Does anyone ask for proof of this? Then let him turn his eyes to godless France during her "Reign of Terror." What a spectacle! Each citizen an Ishmaelite with his hands lifted against every man, and every man's hand lifted against him; riot; disorder; anarchy; streets flowing with blood; vast caravans bearing to the tomb legions of headless bodies.

This was the outcome of infidel principles regnant in the human heart a century ago. And infidelity has not put off her Ethiop skin or washed away her leopard spots since that woeful day. Let infidelity become regnant in the public mind, and we would very soon experience here on American shores a repetition of the very worst features of the Parisian "Reign of Terror." What mean those cries that ever and anon rend the air of this heaven-favored land: "Down with government—down with law and order—down with the church—down with the ministry—away with the Sabbath—away with your God—away with your prayers and preachments—to arms—to arms—knife—pistol—dynamite—fire—blood?" What mean these cries? Ah, they are the cries of that same infidelity that deluged France with the blood of her best citizenship. Yes, here in this glorious land of liberty, infidelity seeks to re-enact the scenes of that most awful chapter in the annals of our race. The triumph of infidelity means anarchy—means the destruction of civilization—means the death-knell of humanity's hope of progress.

Why do we thus write at this time? Simply because, as a watchman on the walls of Zion, we see the foe approaching. From recent observations and experiences we are firmly convinced that infidelity is prevalent among us to a degree that the average Christian has never dreamed of. Infidel literature is on sale among us, and if anyone doubts that it finds purchasers let him make an investigation. The result will be an eye-opener. The deadly virus goes oftentimes where its presence would never be suspected—into Christian homes. Young men—yea, even boys—come into possession of it, read it, and become infatuated with it, when the mere suggestion of such a thing to their parents would cause them to lift their hands in holy horror. One of the needs of our day is a rigid censorship over the literature that finds its way into our homes. A great deal better would it be for a household that small-pox or some other deadly contagion should be introduced into it than that it should be polluted with infidel literature. We lift our voice in solemn warning to the parents of this generation just at this point. A little inattention here may be the source of irretrievable disaster. Parents, beware, oh! beware.

The public prints inform us that the arch-apostle of American infidelity has been invited to lecture in a number of our Southern cities in the near future. The man who joins in such an invitation is a foe to the best interests of society. A great deal better would it be to import pestilence into our great centers of population. Ingersoll, the lecturer, is as much more dangerous than Ingersoll, the author, as oratory is more fascinating than the printed page.

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

BOOKS.

DAILY TALKS AND WALKS WITH GOD IN HIS OWN WORDS AND WAYS; or, The Father Speaking to His Children. A volume of suggestive topics and impressive texts for the daily use of pastors, Christian workers and the religious household, to which are added Gems of Thought on the conduct of life, selected from the great thinkers of religious literature. Prayerfully arranged by an Old Pastor, with an Introduction by Rev. J. W. Lee, D. D. New York and St. Louis: N. D. Thompson Publishing Co.

The above is the full title of a work which lies on our table. It is a large, handsomely-bound octavo of seven hundred and seventy pages, printed in large, clear type on beautiful snow-white paper, and illustrated with a number of full-page engravings. The author seeks to conceal his personality behind the pseudonym. "An Old Pastor;" but his publishers have baffled him by inserting his portrait. No one who is familiar with the handsome face of Rev. Joel T. Daves, now of the North Georgia, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, will need any information as to the identity of "An Old Pastor" when he has seen this portrait. The work also contains a portrait of Rev. J. W. Lee, D. D., of St. Louis, who wrote the introduction.

The work is constructed on the diary plan, two pages being allotted to each day in the year, one for the morning and the other for the evening. A little more than half of each page is occupied with Scripture quotations. The rest of the page is filled with selections in prose or poetry from a variety of sources. The Scripture selections seem to have been very judiciously made. The other selections cover a very wide range as to both subject and authorship. Whether viewed from the standpoint of literature or religion, the work contains many gems. It is a book for use in the closet when the door is shut.

It is sold, we believe, only by subscription. Fuller information concerning the work can be had by communicating with the author at Edgefield, Ga.

JAMES GILMOUR AND HIS BOYS. By Richard Lovett, M. A. Fleming H. Revell Co., Chicago. Price, $1 25.

The above is the title of a biography of Gilmour, the well-known missionary to Mongolia. The work contains a number of letters from the missionary to his sons. It is handsomely illustrated. Gilmour was a very diligent student at college. Soon after graduation he felt an unmistakable call to mission work in foreign fields. He was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. The story of his missionary labors, as here told, is both entertaining and edifying. Our copy of the book not long since fell into the hands of a boy of sixteen. He read it from beginning to end in a day or two, and was charmed with it. This we regard as a testimonial of no small value to the merit of the book. Missionary literature gotten up in a style attractive to the young is a desideratum of our times. Literature of this character widely disseminated will help to answer our prayers for an increase of laborers in the great mission field.

PERIODICALS.

In all its history of sixty-four years, Godey's has never made a more radical or more welcome change than it has in its recent reduction in price to ten cents.

A new plan for reaching the North Pole is offered in the September Popular Science Monthly, by Sinart Jenkins. In his article, entitled Arctic Temperatures and Exploration, he gives his experience in enduring extreme cold as a Canadian surveyor, and presents details as to route, equipment, and time for a successful polar expedition.

The editorial announcement of The Picture Magazine, of New York, declares that "A choice and varied assortment will be given each month, of odd, useful, interesting, practical and amusing illustrations." The promise is well fulfilled in the September number which has just come to hand, for it contains eighty illustrations, while the price is only five cents per copy or fifty cents per year. The publication is certainly a novelty in this country, for in its twenty large pages it contains no reading matter aside from the briefest of titles to each picture with an occasional necessary line of explanation.

The Treasury of Religious Thought for September, is replete, as usual, with a fine array of material helpful to pastors and Christian workers. Space will not admit of even a general outline of the contents. The departments on Christian Edification, Thoughts for Family Life, Young People's Service, Prayer Meeting Service, Current Secular and Religious Thought, etc., are well supplied with interesting and helpful reading. Annual subscription, $2 50. Clergymen, $2 Trial subscription three months, October, November and December, 25 cents. E. B. Treat, Publisher, 5 Cooper Union, New York.

Our Quarterly Review has become a bi-monthly. The issue for September and October is before us, having the following as its title: "The Methodist Review: A Bi-monthly Journal Devoted to Religion and Philosophy, Science and Literature." It contains seven articles as follows: The Citizen and the Nation, by R. W. Gilder, editor of the Century. Infinity, by Noah K. Davis, of the University of Virginia. Strictures on Dr. Elliot's "History of the Great Secession," by Bishop Soule. Physiological Psychology, by Prof. A. C. Wightman, of Randolph-Macon College. Arnold of Rugby, by Bishop E. R. Hendrix. The Constitutional Crisis in the Methodist Episcopal Church, by the Editor. Besides these, the Editorial Departments comprise about forty pages. The new editor is demonstrating his fitness for the place. We sincerely hope that the time is near at hand when it can no longer be said that Southern Methodism is not sufficiently appreciative of high-graded literature to sustain a review.

To Preachers and Agents.

We desire to call the attention of preachers and agents to the advertisement of the Oxford Bible in another column. On account of the space it occupies, this advertisement will not appear again in some weeks. For this reason it would be well to cut out the advertisement or preserve this week's issue of the ADVOCATE. If you do not need a Bible yourself, it is very likely that your wife does, or one of your children. If so, you can get this handsome book as a premium for only five new subscriptions to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2 each. We will give this premium to agents and also give each new subscriber any one of the twenty-five-cent books offered in this issue, viz., "Fifteen Poets," or "Premium Cook Book." Remember you are getting ninety cents' commission on each new subscription, while the subscriber is getting a premium of twenty-five cents. This offer may not last long; therefore, don't delay.

W. C. BLACK, Publisher.

NOTES.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher has passed her eighty-second year, but is still able to write for the magazines.

We spent last Sabbath in the empire of Texas. Some notes anent the trip will appear in our next issue.

The Chief Justice of the Court of Japan is a Christian, and president of the Young Men's Christian Association at Tokio.

F. Elwin Elwell, the sculptor, has finished the $30,000 monument to General Hancock which Pennsylvania is to erect at Gettysburg.

Oxford University, England, conferred the degree of D. C. L., Aug. 15, upon Prof. S. P. Langley, the astronomer, of Washington, D. C.

Fifty years ago the number of Chinese Protestant communicants was only six; twenty years later it had risen to two thousand; and two years ago it was fifty thousand.

The meeting at Felicity is still in progress with increasing interest. The pastor, Bro. Faunt LeRoy, is assisted by Rev. J. A. Parker. Several of the resident ministers have also given aid.

The forty-second session of Roanoke College, Virginia, opened on the twelfth instant with the largest enrollment for seventeen years. The students already present represent thirteen States and Territories and Korea.

Rev. James G. Sibley, Columbia, Miss., writes, Sept. 20: "Sister M. J. Miller is much better. If she continues to improve for the next ten days as she has for the past five or six, she can be up some."

Dr. H. M. DuBose called at the ADVOCATE office, a few days since, en route to Jackson and other points in Mississippi. We are sorry indeed to have missed him. We were in Texas at the time. Hope he will call again. Glad to know that he is itinerating even temporarily in his native Mississippi.

A striking example of the growth of the missionary spirit is seen in the fact that Australasia has recently sent missionaries to Ceylon, Africa, China and Japan.

The names of the delegates to the Annual Conference from the Delhi district were not given in the report furnished us. They are Dr. A. S. Helmick, A. W. Moore, S. Whited, E. E. Riggs. Alternates: D. G. Chapman, O. Moore.

Do you want a passage of Scripture to carry in your mind as a safeguard against temptation and as a restraint upon the unholy passions that belong to our fallen nature? Try this faithfully for a week—"Thou God seest me."

A German Evangelical Deaconess Hospital was dedicated at Jerusalem, July 3. The edifice with the lot cost 300 000 francs. It has accommodations for fifty or sixty patients. The sick of any religion or nationality are to be admitted.

The trustees of the estate of Lady Henry Somerset, the leader of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in England, are petitioning the courts for an injunction to restrain her from closing all the saloons on her estates, which she is proposing to do.

Mrs. Caroline E. Haskell has given $10 000 to the University of Chicago to found a lectureship on "The Relation of Christianity to the Other Faiths of the World." Dr. J. H. Barrows, president of the Parliament of Religions, will deliver the first course.

Serious anti-Jewish riots have recently occurred in Russia. At the fair in Katerinoslov, a very serious riot broke out and the Jewish shops were attacked, Jews everywhere assaulted by a drunken mob, their property destroyed and many lives sacrificed.

When a man prays, "Lead us not into temptation," and then with the imprint of the prayer upon his lips walks into a grog-shop, and seats himself for a chat with those who there congregate, what shall we think of his prayer? One word is sufficient—"Fraud."

New York State has three thousand six hundred and seventy-five inmates of its juvenile reformatories, Kansas only two hundred and eight; New York has eight thousand one hundred and ninety convicts in its penitentiaries, Kansas only nine hundred and eighteen. New York has saloons.

We are greatly rejoiced to hear of the auspicious opening of Malone College. The boarding patronage is much larger than at the opening last year. With a stirring, wide-awake president and a thoroughly equipped faculty, Malone College merits the attention of all who have daughters to educate.

Appleton's Annual Encyclopædia for 1893 has a department recording gifts and bequests for public purposes of $5,000 and upward during the preceding twelve months. That some conception of the duty of the wealthy to the public has taken root may reasonably be inferred from the fact that the total of last year's beneficence is $29,000,000.

Grenada Collegiate Institute opened magnificently. Be sure to read what President Malone has to say in another column. The Board of Trustees have reason to congratulate themselves upon the wisdom of their recent action. A good day's work was done for the institution and for Mississippi Methodism when Bros. Malone and McIntosh were made joint presidents.

The total number of newspapers published in the world is about 50 000, distributed as follows: United States and Canada, 20,934; Germany, 6 000; Great Britain, 8 000; France, 4,300; Japan, 2,000; Italy, 1,500; Austria-Hungary, 1,200; Asia (exclusive of Japan), 1,000; Spain, 850; Russia, 800; Australia, 800; Greece, 600; Switzerland, 450; Holland, 300; Belgium, 300; all others, 1,000.

A curiosity of journalism is a paper published in Alaska. It appears but once a year, and is issued by missionaries at Cape Prince of Wales, Behring Sea, under the title of the Eskimo Bulletin, and appears on the arrival of the solitary vessel which visits the Eskimo village once a year. It is printed by hektograph on one side of thick leaves of paper, twelve by eight inches. The contents are in Eskimo and English.

"The most annoying thing in Russia," says a recently returned traveler, "is the press censorship. You pick up a magazine or a newspaper in the reading-room, and in the midst of an interesting article you will find a few lines, a column or a whole page, blacked out with a marking-pot. By no chance can you read anything which the press censor thinks unfavorable to Russian policies."

The Salvation Army has concluded to fortify in New York. The new building to be erected as a headquarters, in West Fourteenth street, at an expense of $325 000, testifies at once to the courage and energy of the organization, and to the favor it has found with men of large wealth and strong religious convictions.—Zion's Herald.

One of the most difficult duties which the Christian has to perform is that of seeking reconciliation with his foes. This is especially the case when the Christian is himself at fault. It is much easier to forgive those who have wronged us than to ask forgiveness of those whom we have wronged. If you do not believe this is true, try it. And yet difficult as it is, there is no duty more plainly inculcated in the Divine Word.

If a Massachusetts temperance paper is to be believed, the American millionaires are a model lot as regards their personal habits. John D. Rockefeller never permits strong drink to pass his lips. Jay Gould tasted wine not over two or three times in his life, and then not because of a desire for it. The Vanderbilts are equally abstemious. Collins P. Huntington does not even drink coffee. His strongest beverage, as related, is tea.

Dark Africa is being opened up. There is navigation for 120 miles up the Congo, to the head of tidewater. Then from Stanley Pool there is navigation for 1,000 miles into the center of Africa. The only break is between Stanley Pool and tidewater, where the river is broken by cataracts. A railway is now building over this part, 25 miles of which is already completed. There will be steam communication by water and rail from the central region of the Dark Continent to the sea.

The London Temperance Hospital has had a total, from its commencement, of 9 442 in-patients and 47,746 out-patients, Mr. Cash, chairman of the Board, says: "Since the opening, twenty and three-quarters years ago, not only have the medicines been compounded without alcohol, so much used in ordinary dispensing, but out of the whole 9,442 cases of in-patients, alcohol has not been used in any form only in seventeen instances. Nevertheless, though, during the whole period the most serious medical and surgical cases have been dealt with, a specially low rate of mortality has been maintained, being only six and three-tenths per cent."

The Louisiana Holiness Association have arranged with Rev. W. B. Godbey, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to hold their Fall session in the St. Charles Avenue Methodist Church, corner of Calliope street and St. Charles avenue, Oct. 1 to 7, inclusive. The object of these meetings is to secure the conversion of sinners and the entire sanctification of believers. The work is undenominational (or rather inter-denominational), as members of all communions take part in the work. Everyone is cordially invited. The seats are free. Services will be held daily at 10 A. M., and 7:30 P. M. Opening services Monday, Oct. 1, 7:30 P. M.

Referring to Senator Daniels' statement that the monument to Mary Washington recently unveiled was the first monument ever built to a woman by women in the history of the world, and request for information if anyone reading the Christian Advocate knew of any other, a correspondent calls attention to the fact that in 1869 an appeal appeared in the Methodist Recorder, of London, to the mothers and daughters of Methodism to erect a monument over the remains of Susannah Wesley, the mother of John and Charles. He says that Daniels' "Illustrated History of Methodism" records that the appeal met with a hearty response, and that the monument has been erected in the front of the City Road Chapel.—New York Advocate.

We make the following extract from a letter recently received from a lady of high social standing and more than ordinary piety: "I will no longer delay doing what I have felt that I ought to do for some time—express my high appreciation of your editorial services. You began well; you soon got better, and you have continued to improve. Recently it seems to me that every issue is an improvement on the preceding one. If you keep on at this rate, there is no telling what you will be after a while. How any Methodist family in Mississippi or Louisiana can do without the ADVOCATE is more than I can see. It is a weekly feast to my soul. May God bless you in your noble work for his church." Such words of appreciation are gratifying. Better and better is what the ADVOCATE shall be if it is in our power to make it so. "Onward" has been our motto since early manhood. We intend to keep it flying at the mast-head while life shall last; and we know of no reason why we should take it down when we have landed on the other shore.

From now until Nov. 1 we will present a copy of Dr. Sawyer's book, "The World in the Church," to every new subscriber and also to every old subscriber who will renew for one year in advance, i. e., up to October, 1895. This work has been highly commended by our church papers and many of the leading men of Southern Methodism, including most, if not all, our Bishops. Here is an opportunity to get the book as a present for doing something which you ought to do anyway—subscribe for the ADVOCATE. This offer is made only to those who send cash with the order at the rate of $2 per annum.

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes. W. C. BLACK
112 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $1 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

We will also send the work as a premium to any preacher or agent who will send us five new subscriptions accompanied by the cash—$10.

This offer will soon be withdrawn; therefore, be in haste if you wish to avail yourself of it

A Reward of $500

Will be paid for any case of Rheumatism which can not be cured by Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. This offer is made in good faith by the proprietors, and there is no reasonable excuse for anyone to suffer longer. Any ordinary case will be cured by one treatment, and it is poor economy to suffer when relief can be secured so certainly. The price of a month's treatment—two bottles—is $5, and that is the cost of a cure. Full particulars and testimonials of wonderful cures sent to any address. Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York. Agents wanted.

Malone College.

The Malone College at Holly Springs opened to-day (Sept. 18) with forty girls in the boarding department and forty-three day pupils, with others still to come. Our building will soon be full. Grenada has opened well, and the Methodist girls of North Mississippi can be educated in our own State and in our own schools.

Notice.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi Conference:

Brethren: Will you please send me your church extension moneys before you go to Conference. Remit me by check on New Orleans or Vicksburg or money order on Vicksburg.

You will facilitate my work as treasurer if you will kindly observe my request. Yours truly,

THOS A. HOLLOMAN.

Notice.

To the Local Preachers in the Brookhaven District:

Any brother seeking for license to preach or to be recommended for admission on trial or to be ordained, will do well to consult the Discipline for the studies he will be examined on. Books will be needed, and the applicant will be expected to furnish the books. His failure in this particular may defeat his purpose. I give this notice to save trouble, as we begin the fourth round Oct. 6, 7. Let no brother come, expecting anything less than a thorough examination.

Pastors, please take notice.

Kobe Industrial and Training-School.

Since my last report I have secured in cash and subscription the following contributions for the Kobe Industrial and Training-School:

Crawford Street, Vicksburg	$30 90
Brookhaven	47 41
Bolton	17 65
Edwards	9 00
	T. MASAO.

Brookhaven, Sept. 17.

Yazoo City	$32 55
Wesson	20 50

I have been engaged in this work nearly six weeks, and I now wind it up. But for the unfavorable circumstances that surrounded some of the brethren, this would have been an ample time for me to reach all the leading charges of the Conference. As it is, I haven't reached but half. This, however, is not my fault. I have done my best. I take this opportunity of asking those brethren whose circumstances did not permit them to accept my appointments to do what they can for this noble cause. Thanks to the brethren for their co-operation and Christian hospitality. T. MASAO.

A FORTUNE LOST.

It was not at Monte Carlo or Baden-Baden, but at home, in her own house, when her system broke down under the strain of Uterine trouble, that her fortune and good health were lost. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC restored it rapidly by its wonderful influence and tonic power.

MISSIONS.

(Matt. xxviii, 19, Acts x, 34, 35; Romans x, 12, 15.)

Our first text contains the Christian's marching order. We consider

1. The Commander.
2. The commanded.
3. The command.

May the Holy Spirit assist us!

1 The Commander. What of his antecedents, character, conquests.

(1) The best commanders are usually those who worked themselves up from the rank and file. As a man, Christ came from the humblest walks of society. Had not where to lay his head. Is familiar with the difficulties in missionary operations.

(2) The best commanders take the lead in the attacks on the enemy. Christ did not only say, "Go," but also, "Come." Fierce was his contest in Gethsemane and on Calvary. But nothing less than victory would satisfy him.

(3) Commanders are usually decorated and honored after vanquishing the foe. God highly exalted Christ and has given him a name which is above every name.

2. The commanded. Primarily, those who were in the reach of his voice, his disciples. But also

(1) Those called to preach, to go as missionaries. Faith comes by hearing the Word of God.

(2) Those occupying the pew. Not going themselves, they send. Give of their means, according as the Lord has prospered them, to the support of the holy ministry at home and abroad.

3. The command.

(1) To go. The valley of dry bones could not come to the prophet, the prophet had to go to the valley. Go, the heathen are dead in trespasses and sin; they are blind, halt, maimed. Go to the highway and hedges, and bring the outcasts in.

(2) Teach. Disapprove of literary pedagogism as mission work. There is no gospel in the English A B C and the multiplication table. Teach the life and doctrines of Christ. Teach man's duty to God, to his fellow-man, and to himself.

(3) Baptize them in the name of the Triune God—that is, make them Christians.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HOME CIRCLE.

THE BROKEN FOLD.

BY JAMES BUCKHAM.

Dear, my friend, grieve not o'er much
For the vanished voice and touch;
Sit not gazing, white or cold,
At the broken curtain-fold.

Thou this little chamber hast,
But the house is high and vast.
He hath freedom now to go
In and out, and to and fro.

O the crystal-fountained halls!
O the rosy-windowed walls!
O the music and the bloom,
As he treads from room to room!

Backward shall the curtain flow
In the little chamber low!
Shall be here return and dwell,
Bearing sprays of asphodel?

Nay, ah, nay! Bide thou awhile
In thy place; nor weep, but smile.
Some day—sweet day!—thou shalt rise,
Smooth the fold and meet his eyes.

Reproving a Child before Company.

Probably most parents, even very kindly ones, would be a little startled at the assertion that a child ought never to be reproved in the presence of others. This is so constant an occurrence that nobody thinks of noticing it; nobody thinks of considering whether it be right and best or not. But it is a great rudeness to a child. I am entirely sure that it ought never to be done. Mortification is a condition as unwholesome as it is uncomfortable. When the wound is inflicted by the hand of a parent, it is all the more certain to rankle and do harm. Let a child see that the mother is so anxious that he should have the approbation and good-will of her friends that she will not call their attention to his faults; and that, while she never under any circumstances allows herself to forget to tell him afterward alone, if he has behaved improperly, she will spare him the additional pain and mortification of public reproof; and, while the child will lay these secret reproofs to heart, he will still be happy.

I know a mother who had the insight to see this, and the patience to make it a rule; for it takes far more patience, far more time, than the common method.

Once I saw her little boy behave so boisterously and rudely at the dinner table, in the presence of guests, that I said to myself: "Surely, this time she will have to break her rule and reprove him publicly." I saw several telegraphic signals of rebuke, entreaty, and warning flash from her gentle eyes to his; but nothing did any good. Nature was to much for him; he could not at that time force himself to be quiet. Presently she said, in a perfectly easy and natural tone: "O Charley, come here a minute! I want to tell you something." No one at the table supposed it had anything to do with his bad behavior. She did not intend that they should. As she whispered to him, I alone saw his cheek flush, and that he looked quickly and imploringly into her face; I alone saw that tears were almost in her eyes. But she shook her head, and he went back to his seat with a manful, but very red little face. In a few moments he laid down his knife and fork, and said: "Mama, will you please to excuse me?" "Certainly, my dear," said she. Nobody but me understood it, or observed that the little fellow had to run very fast to get out of the room without crying. Afterward she told me that she never sent a child away from the table in any other way. —Helen Hunt Jackson.

Many mean things are done in the family for which moods are put forward as the excuse, when the moods themselves are the most inexcusable things of all. A man or woman in tolerable health has no moral right to indulge in an unpleasant mood.—J. G. Holland.

To Prevent Wrinkles.

Keep a sunny temper and a good digestion. In the line of preferment, live for others, forget self. If the tendrils of a vine fall through the lattice into a dark cellar they continue to grow, but in a feeble way; leaves pale green, dwarfed, yielding no bloom or fruit; so if we do not seek the sunshine of human sympathy, the tendrils of our social natures become shrunken. Our love is chilled in this selfish atmosphere. The growth, the life of love is reflex. If we give, we may receive. The spring which pours its crystal offering from the mountain's heart, swelling the brook, the river, giving greenness to the meadow, beauty to the flower, loses its identity in the sea, and returns to its mountain, clothed in the garb of showers with coolness and verdure in its wake.

The pond becomes stagnant and offensive. So the heart, hugging its misery, loving self, bemoaning personal injuries, petting bodily infirmities, turning the eye ever inward, is left behind in the great swift rush of the present that is pulling all people upward, making them better, wiser, happier.

Wilkinson says, "The soul is form, and doth the body make." The happy temper, the unselfish life, the youthful soul, will to a great extent ward off the blows of time.

We do not realize the price we are paying for the harmful pleasure of fretting and looking inward, until, in our wrinkled faces and our children's irreverent and captious dispositions, we see the architecture of our selfish soul.

Many of the ills of life will succumb to the efforts bravely made to forget pain, either of body or mind, to give all the wonderful machinery of our natures free play, to battle for the good, to allow the physical organization all opportunity in repairing damage wrought by sob of pain or whim of impatience.

Of course, we can not look youthful and wear a crown of many years. Time, toil and sorrow may be written upon our faces; but when beautiful souls smile, warm and glow through them, the lines will be softened and graceful, and lend a beauty to the cheek from which the rose has fled.—Exchange.

Tom's Battle.

"There isn't any use in trying to do good, mother," said Tom Winter, one Sunday afternoon. "I've tried so hard this week, but I get angry so quick. I think every time that I never will again, but when anything provokes me, away I go before I know it."

"Temper is your enemy; you can conquer him if you meet him the right way. Remember how David met Goliath, with only his sling and the little stones from the brook. He defeated the mighty Philistine, because he went in the strength of the Lord. Now, your temper is your giant. If you meet him in your own strength, he will defeat you. But if, like David, you go in God's strength, you will overcome. Try again tomorrow, Tom, and ask God to help you."

"Well," promised Tom, "I'll try, but I can't help being afraid."

The next day everything went on smoothly until play hour. The boys were playing ball, and one of them accused Tom of cheating. Instantly his face crimsoned. But the angry words died on his lips. He thought, "I will try, if God will help me." Tom shut his eyes tightly and all his heart went out in a prayer for help, and he conquered.—Presbyterian.

Setting People Right.

Don't be forever setting people right. There is a household fiend, with a memory for dates and details, who can never sit still and hear papa say that he went downtown on Monday at eight without correcting the statement with the remark that the hour was half-past. If mama happens to allude to Cousin Jenny's visit as having occurred last Thursday, this wasp-like impersonation of accuracy interposes with the statement that it was Friday, not Thursday, which brought Cousin Jane. A dozen times a day exasperating frictions are caused by needless corrections of this sort, referring to matters where exactness is not really imperative, the affairs in question being unimportant, and no violation of truth being for an instant intended.—Harper's Bazar.

A Preacher's Mother.

My mother's habit was every day, immediately after breakfast, to withdraw for one hour to her own room, and to spend that hour in reading the Bible in meditation and prayer. From that hour, as from a pure fountain, she drew the strength and sweetness which enabled her to fulfill all her duties, and to remain unruffled by all the worries and pettishness which are so often the intolerable trial of narrow neighborhoods. As I think of her life, and of all it had to bear, I see the absolute triumph of Christian grace in the lovely ideal of a Christian lady. I never saw her temper disturbed; I never heard her speak one word of anger or calumny, or of idle gossip; I never observed in her any sign of a single sentiment unbecoming to a soul which had drunk of the river of the water of life, and which had fed upon the manna in the barren wilderness. The world is the better for the passage of such souls across its surface. They may seem to be as much forgotten as the drops of rain which fall into the barren sea, but each drop adds to the volume of refreshful and purifying waters. "The healing of the world is in its nameless saints. A single star seems nothing, but a thousand scattered stars break up the night, and make it beautiful."—F. W. Farrar.

When Night Comes.

It is so easy to say, "You must stop worrying;" it is so hard to get away from the cares that chafe and cut into our souls. Every man bears his own burden; most men are weighted with the burdens of their brother drones. "If you did not worry, you would feel better," is good advice, but just as practicable for the average man as, "If you did not breathe, your lungs would heal," to the man suffering from hemorrhage. Breathe he must until death releases him, and worry men will until the wearisome tasks are forever laid down. The people who say, "I never worry," are simply untruthful, or so happily placed that they have no cause for anxiety, or in supreme selfishness load their worries on someone else. One thing you can do. Though the ways of your life be filled with trouble, harassment, and annoyances, lay them away at nightfall. When darkness rests upon the face of the earth, say, "Here we rest," or as the Indians more euphoniously phrased it, Alabama. And to your wearied soul shall be fulfilled the promise of old: "At evening time it shall be light."—Selected.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

RED PEPPER SAUCE.—Put two dozen whole red peppers in a porcelain-lined saucepan; add two onions pared and sliced, two tablespoonfuls of mustard seed, one of salt, one pint each of vinegar and water, cover closely and boil ten minutes. Strain, return to the kettle, add four tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, one each of grated horseradish and celery seed, and two dozen whole cloves; boil one hour, strain and bottle.

VEGETABLE SALAD.—Take a pint of green peas, the same of string beans, half a dozen asparagus heads, a carrot and beet cut cnt in slices, arrange all the vegetables on a salad dish, dress them with two tablespoonfuls of oil, one of vinegar, a teaspoonful of salt, and a quarter of a saltspoonful of pepper, and serve the salad. This is a good way to use up "left overs," but the salad is so agreeable that it pays to prepare the vegetables on purpose.

Take large potatoes, bake until soft and cut a round piece off the top of each. Scrape out the inside carefully so as not to break the skin, and set aside the empty cases with the covers. Mash the inside very smoothly, working into it while hot some butter and cream, about half a teaspoonful for every potato. Season with salt and pepper, with a good pinch of grated cheese for each; work it very soft with milk and put into a saucepan to heat, stirring to prevent burning. When scalding hot stir in one well-beaten egg for six large potatoes. Boil up at once, fill the skins with the mixture, replacing the caps. Then return them to the oven for three minutes. Arrange upon a napkin in a deep dish with caps uppermost, cover with a fold of the napkin and serve very hot.

HYGIENE.

Abuse of the Stomach.

Different constitutions have peculiarities in regard to the way in which they assimilate food, and the old adage that what is one man's meat is another's poison, is a very true one. There is no ailment more common in middle life and in old age than indigestion. This, of course, depends upon improper food taken too frequently and in undue quantity. As a rule the victim of indigestion flies to medicine for relief, or to one of the thousand and one quack remedies that are advertised to cure everything. How much more rational would it be to alter the diet, and to give the stomach the food for which it is craving! If the stomach could talk I can imagine it, after pills, and gin, and bitters, and quack remedies of every description have been poured into it, begging to be relieved of such horrors, and saying, "Give me a little rest, and a cup of beef tea, and a biscuit, and go and take a little fresh air and exercise yourself." Instead of this, the miserable organ has to be dosed with all sorts of horrible concoctions in the way of drugs, brandies, sodas, and champagne, to endeavor to stimulate it into action. There is no doubt that the stomach that requires stimulants and potions to enable it to act efficiently, can hardly be said to be in a healthy state, or can long continue to do its work properly. The digestive organs, unfortunately, are the first to sympathize with any mental worry. They are like a barometer, and indicate the errors of malnutrition and its consequences. The healthy action of every organ depends upon the proper assimilation of the food taken. As soon as the digestive process fails, everything fails, and ill health results, with all its concomitants.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Air We Breathe.

It is said that "twelve thousand silk-worms, when newly hatched, scarcely weigh one-quarter of an ounce, yet in the course of their life, which only lasts about thirty-five days, they will consume between three and four hundred pounds of leaves."

This seems wonderful, but not more so than the quantity of air a man will consume. In one year he uses in his breathing one hundred thousand cubic feet of air, and purifies over three thousand five hundred tons of blood.

Suppose he does not breathe pure air? Then the impurities that he takes in go into his blood, and must be gotten rid of some way. Sometimes the blood carries them to the skin, and they come out in pimples or boils; sometime sthey cause fevers or other diseases. So you can see how important it is to breathe good air. The air of the house is never quite so good as that out-of-doors, because stoves and furnaces make a gas that poisons the air more or less; then the breath sent out from the lungs is poison, so it is very important to have as good air as we can in the house, and to be out-of-doors, walking, riding or working, as much as possible every pleasant day. At night there should always be fresh air in the sleeping-room. If there is not, the sleeper will wake up in the morning feeling very tired and unrested, and the reason is, he has been breathing air over again until there was no life in it. Remember, if you took back into your lungs one breath just sent ont from them that had no fresh air mixed with it, you would die of suffocation in sixty seconds. Don't economize on air. Have plenty of it, and as good as you can get always.—New York Advocate.

Rest.

More than half of a housekeeping woman's time is spent in worrying, and a good share of the other half in preparing food, as though the stomach were the immortal part of us. Take one-quarter of the time a woman devotes to making pies, preparing puddings, putting up preserves, icing cakes and frying doughnuts, and let her devote it to rest and recreation, and she would not look like a shred of parchment paper at forty. It is the non-essentials that kill us.

A prominent physician of San Francisco says: "No cigarette that I ever heard of is free from opium. Beyond question the boy who smokes cigarettes stunts his growth, wrecks his nerves and weakens his heart and kidneys long before he reaches manhood."

THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA

by Columbus brought enlightenment to the world. Now floods of enlightenment in this century are in the lines of science. The triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that RUPTURE or Bresch, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death. TUMORS, Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations. PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula, lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife. STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting. STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. JOYCE—WILLIAM JOYCE was born in Murray county, Tenn., May 25, 1822; came to Mississippi when a young man; married in 1846 a good, pious woman, whose daily, devoted, consistent life was largely instrumental in bringing him to Christ. He was happily converted at a camp meeting at Carthage, Miss., in 1851, and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which he served as class leader, Sunday-school superintendent and steward faithfully until he became too feeble to attend to those duties longer. He established the family altar as soon as converted, and kept it up with intervals of short intermissions through life. He gave liberally to the church, and was a constant attendant at the services; was at all times ready to hear testimony to the power of God unto salvation.

Thus lived one of the best of men, and after a long, protracted illness he died. Aug. 9, 1894, in the triumph of a living faith.

Bro. Joyce was indeed the friend of his pastor, and loved his church. He was a high-toned, honorable Christian gentleman, who knew what was right and fearlessly maintained it. He was well read and thoroughly settled in his conviction, and was a man with a great deal of self-respect. He has gone to be with loved ones gone before in the home of the blessed. May the Lord comfort those left behind; so at last may they be united to part no more! R. M. DAVIS.

WILLIAMS—MRS. E. J. WILLIAMS who departed this life March 14 1894, at Wall Hill, Miss., was the daughter of Dr. R. C. Hancock and E. A Hancock; was born in Williamson county, Tenn., Aug. 4, 1825; was married to Dr. F. E. Williams in 1840; united with the Episcopal Church two years later, and afterward united with the M. E. Church, South, and was for thirty-three years a devout, consistent member of Brock's Chapel Church.

It was my privilege to know Sister Williams for a few months only, and that in her affliction. Although suffering great pain, she was ever cheerful and thoughtful of the comfort of others. Her faith was strong and clear. I frequently visited her during her last days. She was ready to go, and it seemed that heaven was revealed to her longing eyes, and the angels came down and hovered around her bedside to comfort and sustain her, and she shouted aloud the praises of God. Truly a good woman has left us for the other shore.

Two daughters are left to mourn the loss of a godly mother and a wise counselor. May the Spirit Divine give peace and consolation to their hearts, and enable them to follow the steps of their sainted mother, and meet her in that land of bliss, where suffering and separation will come no more! HER PASTOR.

DUNN—VALERIA H. DUNN was born in Amite county, Miss., May 20, 1809, and died Feb. 5, 1894. He was married to Miss Mary Ann Bostwick, May 16, 1833.

Bro. Dunn was converted during his schooldays, and was a member of the Methodist Church for more than thirty years. The last years of his life were especially given to preparation to meet his God.

His home was in every respect the preacher's home. It was always a pleasure to the pastor to visit him. He was not an emotional Christian, but his walk and conduct as a member of the church proved that he had the right idea of what constitutes true Christian character. I shall never forget how rejoiced and grateful he was when his last and eldest son joined the church. This writer shall never forget the pleasant hours spent in Bro. Dunn's home, and how he appreciated the prayers made for him and his dear family.

He leaves a Christian wife and four children to mourn for him; but in their sorrow may they be grateful to God for preserving his life so long, and may the same hand that guided him guide each one of them, and may they meet their dear father where parting will be no more! G. D. ANDERS, P. C.

KING—MRS. M. A. KING (nee Shull) was born in Sabine parish, La., Aug. 6, 1873; was married to Mr. S. W. King, of Geneva, Texas, Dec. 20, 1893; departed this life, Aug. 28, 1894, after a protracted illness, which was borne with patience. Sister King united with the M. E. Church, South, July 2, 1887, and lived a consistent Christian life.

She leaves a husband and a number of relatives and friends to mourn for her; but our earthly loss is her heavenly gain. She loved her husband with an intense devotion and made his home the dearest spot on earth. To father and mother she was not only a beloved daughter, but a trusted and familiar companion. To brother, sister or friend she was a safe counselor. She was tireless in ministering to the needs of the suffering and sorrowing. In the death of Sister King the church has lost a faithful member, which makes a void that can not be filled

To the bereaved we extend our heartfelt sympathy. Weep not, loved ones; she is safe in the glory land, and is free from the cares of this life. Only live so as to meet her in the Celestial City, where she is "tenderly calling with beckoning hands," and where "parting is no more." W. A. CLARKE.

WILES—MRS. MARY J. WILES (nee Keathly) has gone, but she stands with those on the other shore who have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb. She had a lovely Christian character, and bore with great fortitude and patience the lingering disease, consumption, which closed her earthly career, Sept. 8, 1894. She was born March 8, 1845, in Scott county, near Hillsboro. She connected herself with the Methodist Church, 1872, at Oak Ridge, Warren county; was married to W. W. Wiles, Nov. 4, 1891, who is left in the winter of his life without her loving presence and lovely life to cheer him.

May the wing of the Almighty overshadow the bereaved husband, and may he in all things see the wisdom of a God who doeth all things well! Rest, dear friend, until called to awaken from thy blessed sleep. FRIEND.

WATTS—MRS. HINDA SOULE WATTS, daughter of Geo. W. and S. O. Soule, was born in Clarke county, Miss., Aug. 26, 1874, and died in Meridian, Miss., July 1, 1894 On May 24 she joined the East End Methodist Church. She was married to Mr. C. H. Watts, of Meridian, Miss., Aug. 22, 1893.

As a daughter, she was most dutiful. As a friend, she made them wherever she went; she was thoughtful, tender, sympathetic, womanly. As a wife, devoted, filling admirably every obligation of that sacred relation.

For three or four months before her death she was confined to her bed, and it was my privilege to be with her frequently. We conversed freely on spiritual matters. She rested with implicit faith on the Word of her God. When she realized that death was at hand, she said: "Has it come so soon? But it is all right." She immediately called for the family and friends, bade them good-by, and gave them exhortations and encouragements. Her face shone with a supernatural light. After about half an hour, during which time she was talking of heaven, the light faded. Then, as she turned and looked me full in the face, the light gradually returned with all its former intensity as she asked, "Bro. Lewis, don't you think I am ready?" after which it faded to return no more

We laid her to rest in the Rose Hill Cemetery. B. F. LEWIS.

Meridian, Miss.

AZWELL—AMANDA M. PAINMORE was born forty-two years ago. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at Ebenezer Church, Choctaw county, Miss., under the ministry of Rev. Thomas Castles. She was married to S. G. Azwell, near Double Springs, Oktibbeha county, Dec. 17, 1872 Seven children from this marriage survive, and two have preceded the mother to heaven.

Sister Azwell died at Okolona, Miss., Aug. 20, 1894, at seven o'clock P. M., and was buried at Rhodes' Chapel, near Tahhville, Chickasaw county, Miss.

Sister Azwell lived a quiet and devoted Christian life, fulfilling her duties as wife, mother, and friend, and setting a good example to all about her. She was a great sufferer, but found grace to be resigned, and she died in peace and full of hope. May the divine blessing attend her bereaved husband and children! PASTOR.

SPEARMAN—BENJAMIN R SPEARMAN died Aug. 12, 1894, aged twenty-two years.

Bennie possessed many traits of character, as was proven by his kindness and genial disposition. He had passed through many trials and misfortunes. His parents died when he was quite young. He left Grand Cane, La., some time last year to better his condition in Texas. He left with cherished plans and fond hopes for the future; but, alas! when least expected, the death angel came and chilled that fair brow and made lifeless that manly form we loved so well. Little did we dream, when we bade him farewell, that it was forever, and we should never see his face or hear his voice again. He leaves four sisters to mourn his loss, besides many loved ones; but we bow in humble submission to the will of him who giveth and taketh away.

Brother, we hope to meet thee again. GERALDINE.

SMITH—We, the committee appointed by the president of our missionary society of Central Church, Meridian, Miss., submit the following resolutions:

Whereas, It has pleased God in his all-wise providence to remove from our midst in the bloom of life our loved sister and co-worker in the missionary cause, MRS. S. P. SMITH; therefore, be it

Resolved, That our society has lost one of its loved members: one whose gentle presence and bright face has been sadly missed. May her removal be an incentive to greater faithfulness on our part! Our hearts go out in warmest sympathy to the bereaved family and loved ones. We pray God to comfort them as he alone can do.

Resolved, That while we recognize the hand of the loving Father in this dispensation of his providence, and our hearts are made sad, we bow in humble submission to his will, and have faith in "him who doeth all things well."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the bereaved family as a token of love and condolence from our society, a copy be forwarded to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and a copy be spread upon the Minutes of this society.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures nightsweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Your estimate of values depends largely on your belief regarding immortality.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

If you do not want to be tempted, keep your thought from all that is evil.

U. S. Gov't Baking Powder Tests.

The report of the analyses of Baking Powders, made by the U. S. Government (Chemical Division, Ag'l Dep't), shows the Royal superior to all other powders, and gives its leavening strength and the strength of each of the other cream of tartar powders tested as follows:

	LEAVENING GAS. Per cent.	Cubic in. per oz.
ROYAL, Absolutely Pure,	13.06	160.6
The OTHER POWDERS TESTED are reported to contain both lime and sulphuric acid, and to be of the following strengths respectively,	12.58	151.1
	11.13	133.6
	10.26	123.2
	9.53	114.
	9.29	111.6
	8.03	96.5
	7.28	87.4

These tests, made in the Gov't Laboratory, by impartial and unprejudiced official chemists, furnish the highest evidence that the "Royal" is the best baking powder.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Portland, Oregon, had a fire on Sept. 23 in the dock of the Pacific Coast Elevator, which destroyed property valued at $1,400,000.

After 1,156 ballots had been taken by the delegates, Hon. J. G. Spencer, of Claiborne, was nominated for Congress from the Seventh Mississippi District.

The Democrats of the Fifth Congressional District (Louisiana) have unanimously renominated the Hon. Chas. J. Boatner to succeed himself in Congress.

A very disastrous fire occurred in this city on Sept. 22, by which the passenger depot of the Queen and Crescent railroad and a large part of the freight depot were destroyed.

Chicago is putting down her gamblers with a strong hand. A citizens' association called the Civic Federation, the mayor and the chief of police have combined against them, and they must go.

Iowa was swept by a cyclone on Sept. 22. Several towns were destroyed, and great damage was done to buildings, fences and crops. The cyclone was accompanied by blinding flashes of lightning. About fifty people were killed.

Representatives of the workingmen of this city held a mass meeting last week, and it was resolved to form an independent party, with the intention of naming candidates for Congress. Both of the old parties were denounced.

The Salvationists are the first to find some good use to turn living pictures to. Three pictures were exhibited before an interested audience at the Princess Rink in Chicago. The series represented the home of the drunkard before and after his reformation.

On Sept. 22 the nominating committee appointed at the Planters' Convection, held a week ago at Point-a-la-Hache, in Plaquemines parish, met at Poydras, in the same parish, and nominated the Hon. H. P. Kernochan as the planters' candidate for Congress from the First District.

According to the dispatches, Representative Andrew Price, of the Third District (Louisiana), has been actively at work in behalf of the sugar interests of the State. He has received assurances from Secretary Carlisle that the administration will favor the payment of the bounty on this year's crop by Congress at its session this Winter.

A company, to be regularly chartered under the laws of the State, has been organized, embracing the leading shipers of Jackson, for the purpose of running a boat between Jackson and New Orleans, on Pearl river. It will be remembered that the Rivers and Harbors bill, which recently became a law, appropriates $5 000 for Pearl river, below Jackson, and the Evening News suggests that when Congress meets that the Mississippi delegation in Congress urge a larger appropriation.

FOREIGN.

It is said the Chinese are afraid that the Japanese will capture Pekin, and the navy has been ordered to defend the approaches.

An immense meeting in favor of the granting of amnesty to the Irish political prisoners was held in Phœnix Park, Dublin, Sept. 23. Addresses were made by John Redmond, Tim Harrington, and Dr. Joseph Kenney. It is estimated that fully 15,000 persons were present.

The Japanese government has decided to follow the advantage it has gained against the Chinese and push the war with all possible vigor before the arrival of Winter. Orders have been issued for 80,000 troops to depart immediately for the front. The national enthusiasm aroused by the success of the Japanese forces is unbounded.

William H. Ellis, a prominent colored man of Texas, who obtained a concession from the Mexican government for the colonization of rich lands in the northern part of Mexico, with negro families from the United States, is now in Mexico arranging the details for the carrying out of the terms of his contract with the Mexican government.

The official advices which have been received concerning the great naval battle fought on Sept 16, off the mouth of the Yalu river, in North Corea, agree in reporting that the engagement was a most sanguinary one, and was hotly contested on both sides. The advices received also make it certain that the victory remained with the Japanese, as the Chinese experienced the heaviest losses and their ships were compelled to retire to the Chinese naval station of Wei-Hai-Wei.

That Tired Feeling, which is so common and so overpowering, is entirely driven off by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier. Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes weakness.

Hood's Pills are the best after-dinner pills, assist digestion, cure headache. 25 cents a box.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, which met in Chattanooga, Tenn., finished the work of the session on Sept. 22.

Do not wear impermeable and tight-fitting hats that constrict the blood-vessels of the scalp. Use Hall's Hair Renewer occasionally, and you will not be bald.

According to recent dispatches from South America, more trouble is brewing in Brazil. Admirals da Gama and De Mello, who failed in the revolutionary movement of last year, are in Argentine busy plotting another attempt to overthrow President Peixoto, and the revolutionists in Rio Grande do Sul are again becoming active.

The patient Swedes are now aroused, and have raised the cry of war or separation from Norway. Norway, although the much smaller country, asks for equal rights with Sweden. The demand would be fair if Norway also would agree to fulfill the corresponding duties.

Not "What," But "How,"

Is the suggestive motto of "METHOD," the most unique and valuable magazine for Christian Workers published. It is the only periodical on earth devoted exclusively to the discussion of "METHODS OF CHURCH WORK." Leaving others to discuss what is needed and why, "METHOD" tells HOW THE WORK IS TO BE DONE. October number, Vol. 2, No. 1, now in press, will be conveniently arranged in "Departments:" (1) "How to Make a Working Church," (2) "Sabbath Services, Prayer Meetings, Socials, etc.," (3) "Revivals," (4) "The Children," (5) "The How" of Sunday-school Work," (6) "The Epworth League, Methods and Plans," (7) "Woman's Work." (8) "How to Raise Church Funds," (9) "Bible Study," etc., etc. Our space forbids more than this general outline of contents. In each department there will be valuable articles, all having to do with the "How;" giving the best methods and plans, with illustrations, plates of printed forms, programs, special services, etc. Published quarterly, 60 cents per year. Edited by Rev. W. F. Cook, D. D., and Rev. Ellison R. Cook, assisted by a corps of successful workers.

Special offers to readers of this paper: (1) For 60 cents we will send "METHOD" one year, and a copy of "PERSONAL WORK HOW ORGANIZED AND ACCOMPLISHED." Revised and enlarged edition. 64 pages of method and studies. Worth its weight in gold to anyone who wishes to do personal work.

(2) For 80 cents we will send "METHOD" one year, and a copy of that wonderful book, "TOUCHING INCIDENTS AND REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER." A handsome cloth-bound book of 300 pages, sold everywhere at $1.00, and worth more. All subscriptions begin with October number. Send us your name and subscription to-day. Use P. O. or Express Money order. Address. CHRISTIAN GIVER PUB. CO., Atlanta, Ga.

More Spiritual.

We can not be too spiritual. It is well, however, to have clear ideas of spirituality. A man may be very familiar with the Bible and yet not be truly spiritual; and one may pray a great deal and still lack in spirituality. We have known some people who could repeat Scripture with remarkable fluency and pray with apparently the greatest freedom, and yet they were living quite unspiritual lives. What is it, then, to be vitally spiritual? It is to be modestly Christ-like. It is to have an unappeasable hunger for gospel truth. It is to be unswervingly obedient to Christ. It is to love prayer, not as an exercise, but because it brings the soul into communion with God. Let us be more spiritual.—Zion's Herald.

MY FOE.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Not from my foes without, but those within,
I pray to be protected hour by hour;
For that aggressive self, that leads to sin,
And lures to pleasure with seductive power,
Stands ever by the portal of desire,
And mocks my spirit when it would aspire.

From that most subtle foe, disguised as friend,
I need be ever on my guard, for when
I cease for one brief moment to defend
The castle of my soul, he seeks me then
In some unlooked-for way, with mien so fair
And voice so sweet, the while he sets his snare.

With booeyed words, and sophistries and lies,
He arrows on the pleasures of the sense;
He pictures Duty in a hideous guise,
And laughs at Labor's paltry recompense;
"Let dullards toil," he cries, "thine is the right
To gather all life's blossoms of delight!"

Again, in mask of teacher he appears,
And cries: "Why seek to lift another's load?
Each soul that journeys down the vale of tears
Must carry his own burden o'er the road;
Accept thine own, but let all others go."
Despite his mask, I know him as my foe.

My base foe, self, which, envious of the goat
It can not reach, since formed of dying clay,
Would hinder and oppose my striving soul
That longs and labors for the better way;
And with this foe my spirit must contend,
In prayer and vigil, even to the end.

Selections.

In the Mountains of Japan.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

The first place visited in Kobe after securing lodgings was that most sacred spot to Southern Methodism in Japan, the honored grave of Dr. J. W. Lambuth. It gratified me to see that the children watch tenderly over the modest tomb, and occasionally freshen it with flowers and tears. A missionary's grave in a heathen land—what a treasure! Like the sepulcher of Elijah's prophetic successor, it will make many a dark soul stand on its feet. It was fitting that the flags over foreign consulates should fly at half-mast the day he was buried, while hundreds of Christians and non-Christians wept and cried, "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof!" A man of saintly life, a missionary of tireless toil, a Christian of unfaltering faith, rests in peace in a heathen land. His life was a perpetual sacrifice, his presence an evangel, his dying religions experience a succession of epiphanies, his death a translation, and his memory is at once a benediction and inspiration. His last words were a note of victory, and an appeal in behalf of the benighted people for whom he was dying: "I die at my post; send more men." I uncovered in that presence, and prayed that a double portion of such a consecrated spirit might abide upon the mission.

Almost all of our missionaries, and many from China, Corea, and Japan, representing the several evangelical churches, were at Arima, a mountain village with mineral and hot springs, some twelve or fifteen miles from Kobe, I came up here for a few days. The ride was by train to Suni-Yoshi, seven miles, and by ka-go, eight or nine miles up the mountain. And what is a ka-go? Well, it is a sort of veranda, bamboo chair, with the legs cut off, hanging on a pole, and carried by coolies. Two men are usually able to carry a person, but not less than three would consent to bear me on their shoulders. And then they slyly and mischievously asked Bro. Moseley, who is rather small, to take my place. It took four men for Bishop Key up those hills, and then they complained that the old father was very heavy." It is quite a peculiar sensation to be swung in a big basket and carried on the shoulders of men. Especially will a stranger occasionally get a little nervous as the men climb the narrow path which overlooks a deep gorge, or turn some sharp point where, if a foot should slip, horses and rider would fall a hundred feet or more. But they are sure-footed, and have never hurt a passenger. I felt sorry for the poor, perspiring, underfed creatures, with chafed shoulders, and got out to walk for awhile. The road, however, we reached the top of the mountain and started down to Arima, two miles distant, they almost ran at a canter, and were in the highest glee. I occasionally cried, "Hoi a slower!" but not understanding a word, they dashed on at a quickened pace, jolting every muscle until it was painfully sore. I prefer the jinrikesha to the ka-go.

This village in the mountains is the summer resort of missionaries in China and Japan. It affords opportunity, at little expense, for needed rest and escape from the hot, depressing climate of the valleys. A Missionary Conference is held here every year, which has proven very helpful. One is now in session, attended by over 200 missionaries from China, Corea, Japan and Formosa.

Every morning, a little after six o'clock, I am awaked by the monotonous beating of a drum, and the weird, wearisome repetition of a few Japanese words. This morning I went out to locate the early serenader, and found it was an old Shinto woman at her morning devotions. The drum accompaniment, I am told, is to drown the noise of the world while she is engaged in prayer. The prayer is the "vain repetition" of words that mean very little to some and nothing to others. One old priest acknowledged that many of the people got it all wrong, and didn't understand what they were doing. And yet the poor old soul was pounding her drum and wailing her meaningless prayer. Alas! for such superstition. To-night Dr. Wainright and I went to another house, and, after hearing a man through his monotonous wail, had quite a talk with him about his religion. He had scarcely an intelligent idea of the worship in which he had just engaged. Most respectful was he, however, and asked many questions about our religion. The intense, yearning expression on the face of his wife, who sat on the floor beside him, made me so anxious that she should know the way of life. Her earnest look was a prayer, and indicated a hunger of soul that can not be satisfied with the husks of heathenism. And as the children clustered around the parents, all paying eager heed to Bro. Wainright as he talked, it was a picture I shall never forget. That humble Japanese house, at least to one heart, was converted into a holy temple, and made blessed because of the conscious presence of the mighty Redeemer, who seeks the heathen for an inheritance.

In a number of houses I have seen these domestic shrines, with various little images, including the inevitable fox, holders full of bits of paper, tablets with names of different gods, lamps for light, and a drum, or gong, for noise. This, I have concluded, is one of the strongest influences in holding these people to their old faiths and superstitions—their church in the house. The temples are not largely attended, and they very rarely have the impressiveness of a great assembly united in worship. Their temples, in this conservative mountain village, are more numerous than in other places of the same size, but they are poor affairs, insignificantly small, and with rude furnishings. There is nothing gorgeous or grand in building, service, assembly, or priestly vestments. And very few new temples are being erected in the country. Whatever the cause of this decline—whether the influence of Christianity or the gradual diffusion of education or natural decay—their so-called religions seemed destined to become effete. May God hasten the glorious morning! Just outside these temples I noticed a number of thin pieces of wood with Japanese characters on them. They contain the names of contributors to that temple and the amounts given. It is said the priest sometimes falsifies the figures in order to induce others to larger liberality. In front of the shrine is a contribution box, and a rope attached to a bell, or gong, above. The worshiper first drops in his coin, and then pulls the rope to wake up his god. He pays before he prays. Wonder if such a rule in America would not thin out the congregations? That, and something else, have had like effect in this land. But of their several forms of religion I may write more in detail.

One of the attractions this mountain retreat has for foreigners is a large, bold spring, strongly charged with carbonic acid gas, and has other mineral properties. A little sugar mixed with it in a glass makes as delicious soda water as an American ever drank. There are also hot springs which are popular for bathing. Above everything, the Japanese delight in hot baths, and prefer a temperature of about 110° Fahrenheit. Cleanliness is a chief characteristic. They bathe often; some persons several times a day. Every town and city abounds in public baths, and they are liberally patronized at all hours of the day. I am told that, in the family, water for the bath is prepared in the morning, into which the father first plunges, and in the same water all the household bathe in order. In the public baths the same water is used by the natives all day—special and separate provision is made for foreigners. At these places may also be seen another national characteristic—an utter absence of modesty. Though there has been some legislation against mixed bathing, the law is practically disregarded. One reared in our Christian land is constantly shocked, and made to blush by the undress of these people—both men and women. It is impossible to conceive their entire innocence of the sense of shame. And this, as may easily be imagined, keeps forever irritated the open sore—the offensive cancer—of this, in many respects, most attractive land and interesting people. In their case cleanliness is not next to godliness, nor does it lead thereto.

The streets are full of children, the least strapped on the backs of the little larger, and the impression is thereby made that this is a land of large families. Everybody lives outdoors—we see them all. As a matter of fact, there are fewer children in Japan, in proportion to families, than any country in the world, except France. This out-door habit, of course, destroys family life. The American and Christian idea of a home has no place in the thought or heart of this people. A missionary told me yesterday that when one of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church was preaching here some time ago, he referred to the "home," when the interpreter stopped and said the Japanese had no word to convey the meaning of a Christian home. That dearest, divinest thing in this world is only the product of Christianity. Heathenism has no homes—only houses.

For several days I have enjoyed the delightful hospitality of Bro. W. A. Davis and wife, among the most faithful missionaries in the field. Brother Davis is from Missouri, and his good wife, whom he first met in Japan, was Miss May F. Bice, of California, and an honored member of our missionary band. Their work has been at Uwajima, far in the interior, their nearest foreign neighbor being 125 miles away. They have given me an interesting account of an unusual episode in a missionary's life in Japan, and a great honor as well—their entertaining a prince at dinner. He has large estates at Uwajima, but being a member of the House of Lords spends most of his time at Tokio, the capital. In rank he is one of the ten highest in the Empire, being a Marquis, and is one of the four wealthiest of the Mikado's subjects. There are only four persons in the town who are admitted to his house, and there is not a home he would condescend to enter. He, however, welcomed Bro. Davis and wife, and accepted their invitation to dine; said, as they were foreigners, he supposed they were sincere in extending the invitation; if Japanese, he would only consider it an empty courtesy. When the dinner hour arrived they sent messengers to announce that the feast was ready, and to escort him thither. This is Japanese custom—a custom which must have prevailed in Bible times, when the Master of the feast sent out notice to "them that were bidden." He was accompanied by two of his retainers, and made himself most agreeable to his hosts. Many inquiries were made about their work, and interest expressed therein. The next day, agreeable to custom, he sent a handsome present. His father, a very aged man, was a great friend of Dr. W. R. Lambuth's, he having ministered to him in a severe illness. Afterward, it is said, a missionary of the Congregational Church endeavored to cultivate the old gentleman, but he assured him that Dr. Lambuth was his spiritual adviser. This little incident is related to illustrate a fact of importance—in Japan Christian missionaries have access to the better classes. Their work is not among the coolies, but among the middle and higher circles of society. One of the Supreme Judges of the Empire is a Christian, as also was one of the Speakers of the House of Representatives.

The Residue Theory.

Bro. Burt reviews Bro. Ellis and myself in regard to our opinions about the "Residue Theory"—views based, as we believe, on Holy Scripture. Bro. Burt assails our orthodoxy, not because we do not agree with the Bible (for a little singular to say, Bro. Burt, in his article, ignored the Bible as the supreme source of authority), and labored to show that we were not orthodox according to "Thus saith Mr. Wesley." As it is from Mr. Wesley we differ, he tells us the Constitution of the United States will allow us to do this, "but the Methodist Church does not," and so, in effect, reads us out of the church. Bro. Burt is considerably more hasty and stringent than our Bishops, or several of our Conferences of which I have been an acceptable member. Fifty-eight times the Bishops have asked at the sessions of the Annual Conferences, "J. B. Walker—anything against him?" The answer has always been, "Nothing against him." This, too, in the face of the fact that some sixteen or eighteen years ago the Publishing House at Nashville printed a treatise of mine of some sixty pages, setting forth the same opinions I now hold. This treatise was advertised and put on sale by our Publishing House. I also participated in quite an extended discussion presenting the same opinions, while stationed in Galveston and acting as associate editor of the Texas Christian Advocate.

As Bro. Burt accepts Mr. Wesley as the highest authority, I will give him a quotation from Mr. Wesley on toleration and freedom of opinion. (Wesley's Works, vol. VII., page 321, par. 9.) Mr. Wesley says: "One circumstance more is quite peculiar to the people called Methodist—that is, the terms on which anyone may be admitted to membership into their society. They do not impose, in order to admission to membership, any opinions whatever. Let them hold particular or general redemption, absolute or general decrees. Let them be churchmen or Dissenters, Presbyterians or Independents; it is no obstacle. Let them choose one mode of baptism or another. It is no bar to their admission. One condition, and only one, is required: a real desire to save their souls. Where this is, it is enough; they (the Methodists) desire no more."

It seems to me, Bro. Burt, you have either departed from, or collided with, your chosen authority.

Bro. Burt, as some others of that ilk, seem to have forgotten that our church has a creed consisting of twenty-five Articles, substantially the same as the so-called "Apostles' Creed." We have none other. In these Articles there is no mention of the "Residue Theory." I don't think Bro. Burt can find the word "residue" in any part of our Discipline prepared by Mr. Wesley. Of course, I passed an "acceptable examination" on Wesley, Watson, the Discipline, the hymn book, Fletcher, Mosheim—in short, all the various books in the "course of study." But no committee was ever so absurd, or so bigoted and narrow, as to ask our class, "Do you subscribe to, and believe as scripturally true, all the opinions and speculations of these writers?"

As Bro. Burt insists on conformity to Mr. Wesley in order to be an acceptable Methodist, let me call his attention to some of the opinions and practices of that remarkable and extraordinary man, and inquire if Bro. Burt feels it obligatory on him to conform to them all. Mr. Wesley said, "Slavery was the sum of all villainies." I don't think Mr. Wesley meant so much as the logical sequence would lead us to conclude, for if slavery is the sum of all villainies, then, if slave-holders did not repent of this most heinous of sins, then all of them, from "the beloved Philemon, the owner and master of Onesimus," with the "believing masters" of slaves, as the Holy Spirit calls them (1. Tim. vi, 1), and all along down the centuries to George Whitefield, the holy, illustrious and successful preacher, and purchaser and owner of more than twice a score of negro slaves to cultivate his orphanage farm, are all unsaved and damned. Can Bro. Burt accept this? Does Bro. Burt believe that the thirteen colonies revolted against George III. because they had on their tables various sorts, and too much meat? Does Bro. Burt adopt Mr. Wesley's sermon on "The Cause and Cure of Earthquakes"? Does Bro. Burt believe that Mr. Wesley had any scriptural right to make attendance on class meetings a test of membership in the church of God, when he did not do so in regard to prayer meetings—a scriptural means of grace? Does Bro. Burt follow Mr. Wesley in preaching twice a day, and giving away all his receipts except very moderate current expenses?

In regard to the Residue Theory, Mr. Wesley, in preparing the Articles of Religion for the American Methodist Church, expurgated and eliminated the Residue Theory from the Ninth Article of the Creed of the Church of England, and reduced that Article to what we find in our Seventh Article. He evidently had given up the opinion he held on that subject as expressed in the sermon on "Sin in Believers." There is, and there can be, no other solution for this expurgation and elimination of the Residue Theory from the Article. In regard to what Mr. Wesley has written in the sermon on "Sin in Believers," his statement of the scriptural and spiritual state of justified and regenerated believers is so scriptural, exhaustive and clear, that I am entirely satisfied with it as a complete refutation of what he says about the Residue Theory. Mr. Wesley quotes six passages of Scripture to prove the Residue Theory. If the editor will permit, I will publish an article from an able pen that, I think, will show that Mr. Wesley's exegesis is incorrect. With regard to our hymns, our admirable collections, I have to say they are poetry, and fine poetry, but hymnologists must be allowed "poet's license;" but, as long as we have the Bible, and accept it as God's own Word, we will never go to the uninspired poets to prove and sustain our theological opinions.

Bro. Burt ought to know Mr. Wesley did not approve the non-scriptural phrase, "second blessing." His letter about this business finds the same objections we find now. These men, of whom Bell and Maxfield were the leaders, posed as these people do now—as martyrs. They brought on a rupture in the church; Bell turned prophet and predicted the end of the world Feb. 28, 1763, and turned out an infidel. These second-blessing people charged Mr. Wesley with being "a hypocrite," "an enemy of the doctrine of holiness;" and one of them said, "If the devil had been in the pulpit, he would not have preached such a sermon."

In a pastorate of fifty-eight years I have not found the few who have professed the second blessing at all more exemplary in their lives, or more Christly in tempers, than those who had been "born of God," and had the witness of the Spirit to their adoption as God's children; but, as I thought, quite too many of the second-blessing people were intolerant, irascible and censorious. Not all, however. Some have exhibited all the beauty of holiness. I have no quarrel with any of them. I wish and pray that we all may enjoy perfect love and perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord.

Our church does not require, as a prerequisite to admission to membership, belief in the cognate doctrines of the Residue Theory and Second-Blessing Theory; nor as necessary to be admitted to receive the Holy Communion; nor has there ever been an example of expulsion for not believing or professing these doctrines. All traveling preachers, and none of any other class of our members, are asked at the close of their two years' probation, just before their reception into full connection, if they expected to be made perfect in love in this life. I answered in good faith, I did, and was seeking after it. Just as when asked when a boy, "Do you expect to become a man?" I answered I did, and, like all boys, thinking manhood a desirable estate, I desired and longed for it.

It seemed a mite odd to me, after sixty years of membership, to be asked if I have received the second blessing. I thank God, in reading and hearing and preaching his Word, in prayer, in meditation, in holy song, under many conditions I have received scores of blessings, and rejoice that there is more to follow. Of Mr. Wesley I wish to say I have the most exalted admiration. He was one of the greatest and most useful men the great God ever made; but he was a man, and not infallible.

In the Living Present.

Paul. Thompson, the lawyer of Breckinridge, who, during the trial of his client, remarked, among other untruths, that all men were purchaseable, differing only in regard to price, exclaimed, when he heard of Owens' victory over the notorious bawd, "The women did it!" Yes, they did. Though Kentuckian ladies discard so-called woman's rights, they exerted their influence in a truly feminine manner, at the drawing-room, and at the dinner table. Their husbands and sons yielded to their entreaties, and by their votes ordered the audacious politician to the rear.

Videant consules! Our Papists, nearly all, pretend to be good Democrats. They crowd the hurrah-clubs. How they love this country! Ready to die for it. Is it patriotism or Jesuitism? In view of services rendered, the United States Congress donated, approved by the President, to the Roman Catholic Gonzaga College in Washington City a tract of land worth $27,000. To other institutions of that church in Washington, Congress donated $53,000. Whither are we drifting? Videant consules ne quid res publica detrimenti capiat.

On the ninth of October the Swedes will celebrate the three hundredth birthday of their great king, Gustavus Adolphus. When under Tilly and Wallenst in the Romish cohorts were devastating the Protestant provinces of Germany, the noble king hurried to the relief of the oppressed. Heroically he struggled against the priest-ridden marauders, until, at the battle of Luetzen he fell, while in the van of his victorious band.

"Three C's, says the Emperor of Germany, he would like to write in golden characters. 'Tis those commencing the words church, children, and cookery. What these three words express is dear to his heart. The three require diligent attention. Neglect will entail disaster.

The tramp evil has come to stay. Coxeyism collapsed, but the tramp is marching on. The governor of Massachusetts has appointed a committee of three to investigate this evil. They report that drunkenness and business depression are the cause. They recommend that the labor of the tramp be not paid in money, but in edibles and wearing apparel.

Our social scum and vagabonds who look upon the lynching of negroes as "gentlemanly" sport should heed the following from Sam Jones: "The brother in black is a good citizen compared to the many who despise our laws and would overthrow our institutions. The negro is not a bad citizen."

A Young Preacher Needs Help.

A young preacher who has attended our college needs help. Last year a good sister loaned him his board money. He has worked through vacation to pay this debt. The good lady is not able to help him any more. He is a worthy young man and a good student, and the fact that he has worked during the students' rest months to pay his last session's board bill demonstrates that he possesses "grace and grit." Now, is there not a Methodist, or somebody else, in Louisiana or elsewhere, who will loan this young preacher one hundred dollars to enable him to take another session's work with us? Surely such a case as this ought to bring a quick response. Let me hear from some one right away.

C. W. CARTER, President.

[We hope all our readers will read carefully the above note from President Carter. Here is a first-class opportunity for some brother whom the Lord has prospered in business to do good. Remember that only a loan is called for, not a gift. And what better security could be asked for than the promise of a young man with such a record?—EDITOR.]

Millsaps College Opening.

The third annual session of Millsaps College began Wednesday, Sept. 26. A large number of students and visitors assembled in the college chapel, and after prayer by Rev. A. F. Watkins, several interesting addresses were delivered. The session begins under the most inspiring and encouraging circumstances. The campus is alive with students. We now have 180, and all the indications point to an enrollment of 200 within the next two weeks. Let the Methodists of Mississippi see their great opportunity and responsibility. Of course, our facilities must be enlarged. Major Millsaps' proposition stands open. Let the response from the church be generous and prompt.

MY PETITION.

May every thought of mine this day
Be pure as sunshine's clearest ray.

May every word that I shall speak
Be wise and gentle, true and meek.

May every act be just and kind,
From dross of selfishness refined.

May thought and act and kindly word,
Together bound, a threefold cord,

Reach out to men and help me save
Some sinking one from sin's cold wave.

Sanctification.

We are glad that the ministers and laity are agitating the subject of sanctification. It is a great and vital subject, and, therefore, should be written and preached on often, but not in an uncharitable and obscure way. We honestly believe that if there was more sanctification in the hearts of some who write and speak on this subject, that there would be more hope of it appearing in its true light, which is not the experience or experiences of brethren, but the Word of God. Some advocate it in the sense of a "second blessing" (or a higher and completer work than that of conversion), and in order to make it appear in this light, they resort to their experience; but all such should not forget that their experience is as liable to deception as their imagination. The experience of some, if not all the "second-blessing" brethren, is, that after their conversion—that is, new birth—they were fluctuating in their religious life. Some go so far as to say that they were sinning nearly all the time in one way or the other, but since their sanctification, in the sense of a second blessing, they do not sin. When brethren talk and write thus, it argues to me that they have failed to consider the teachings of the Bible, and we all should not forget that the Bible is our rule of life and doctrine, and that just as sure as we do not depend on its teachings under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, we are liable to go astray in our belief and experience. The Apostle John was inspired to write these words of Christ, "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." (John iii, 7.) This change of the new birth must be wrought, we see, and that same apostle, under the inspiration of the same Holy Spirit, in speaking of a person who is born again, said: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he can not sin, because he is born of God. In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil." (I. John iii, 9, 10.)

Now, we see that the plain teaching of the Bible is, that conversion, or regeneration, or the new birth, or whatever else we may call it, distinguishes us from sinners in this: that sinners sin, and we do not, if we are converted, regenerated, or born again. What is plainer? The only way to distinguish God's children from those of the devil is: God's children do not sin, and the devil's do. As respects what our second-blessing brethren experienced when they received what they call the second blessing, be it allowed me to say that I experienced the same blessed things when I was converted. It is said that I got all at once. If this be possible, how can it be a second blessing? Let us not forget what God has already taught us in the Scriptures just quoted. It is said that conversion is essential in preparing a person for that complete submission to the will of God that is so necessary to obtain the second blessing; but let it not be forgotten that no one was ever, or ever will be, converted without a complete and unreserved submission to the will of God. We have never known a brother, whether a second-blessing one or not, who did not advise penitents to make an unreserved surrender to God in order to be converted.

Manual Labor Schools.

The likeness and history of Major R. W. Millsaps, given in the ADVOCATE of March 1, shows a real live specimen of a noble man. But for the existing presence of the truth, it would appear more like fiction, so wonderful is it. He has added another to the demonstrations of the grand possibilities there are in man by developing them in himself. But he didn't stop at that. He has gone on applying them to noble uses. He is an honor and a blessing to his country. But it remains for him to reap the climax by building up a manual labor school, where other boys, like he once was, can have opportunity of procuring education by regular work and indomitable perseverance, as he did. There are many young men doomed to ignorant and unprofitable lives by poverty. They have natural capacities, but lack means of developing them. If there were manual labor schools to afford enough regular employment for such boys to earn their board and tuition by working a given length of time every day, they would emulate the noble example of Major Millsaps, and become learned and useful, too. That is one great desideratum. Free tuition is a good step in the right direction. But the board constitutes the main item of the expenses that shut out most young men from school; and, if they be not furnished the means of paying their way by means of their manual labor, they must remain shut out in ignorance, with their natural capacities for usefulness undeveloped, and the world kept that much poorer. How much richer is it made, in anything that renders life the more enjoyable, by such developed men as Major Millsaps, who has demonstrated what a poor boy can do when he has a chance!

The greed of capital has so combined against labor, and reduced its products to such low prices, that a youth, with as noble aspirations as impelled the youthful Millsaps to work his way in more auspicious times, can not now lay up enough money to pay his way through college; but, with favorable opportunities within their reach, many youths would gladly work their way while developing themselves at manual labor schools. Major Millsaps worked his way through, and the State is much richer and better off by his development. Then why not the State, every State, afford its youths of to-day favorable opportunities to develop themselves likewise? And since the State of Mississippi is so much benefited by the development of one of her boys through such means, why not afford all such facilities of working out their destiny, and be itself correspondingly benefited? Could any State make a better investment of money than in building up such schools, with farm and factory annexed, for the boys to earn their living thereat by manual labor, while developing their bodies thereby, and improving their minds and hearts by study? It is believed that such schools could be made self-sustaining. If they could not be made self-sustaining by proper management, how can a boy possibly sustain himself at home and lay by enough money to pay all his way all through school, without any chance to make a dollar in the meantime, but obliged to pay out money every day?

Major Millsaps is computed to be a millionaire. How many such boys would the State have to help develop themselves to get back in their wealth what their development cost the State? The State is made up of individual citizens, and the wealth of the individual citizens constitute the aggregate wealth of the State. But dollars and cents is not the only, nor the main, thing to be taken into the consideration. The world, generally, is in eager pursuit of "the almighty dollar," and money is powerful—too much so—but knowledge is power, too, and they are both two-edged swords; they will cut either way, for good or for evil, accordingly as they may be wielded. Therefore, they both need to be controlled and guided by a higher and purer power. Ignorance and sin is a reproach to any people, but knowledge and righteousness exalt a nation; and the chief duty of the State is to educate its people properly, that they may make good and useful citizens, and become prosperous and happy in consequence of such qualifications.

A Rejoinder.

MR. EDITOR: Suffer a few words in reply to Bro. Beard's article, which is justifying and defending that resolution which said the Opelousas district "has been overlooked" by the Church Extension Boards. To make a blunder is excusable, but to make one, and in the face of facts and figures defend it, and try, by bold affirmations, to transform an inaccurate statement into truth, is wholly inexcusable. The presiding elder of the Opelousas district has, in his zeal, devoured the president of the Board of Church Extension of the Louisiana Annual Conference. He is non est, a thing of the past. He was a man of many and great words. This, his reply, is farther from the true facts than the original resolution, which was evidently fathered by the presiding elder, and these brethren signed like cuckoos, which come forth and crow when the clock strikes. In the ten years of their existence the Boards of Church Extension have helped seven distinct churches in the Opelousas district—four of these since 1890. In the ten years past the General Board has helped fourteen churches in the Louisiana Annual Conference. Five of these were in the Opelousas district—more than one-third. In the same time the Conference Board has assisted thirty-six churches. Five of these were in the Opelousas district. New Iberia had gifts from both Boards aggregating $1,800, and a loan from the General Board of $1,000, and there was on hand $500 bequeathed by Dr. Schriner, and secured by Bro. Medlock; but the completion of that church, with all these aids, was a great success. The Opelousas district has had its full share of recognition by the Boards in the remote and the immediate past, and it should receive no more proportionately in the future than it has in the past. Here is the full exemplification of that fictitious case of Mr. Hyde and Dr. Jekyll. The president of the Board of Church Extension of the Louisiana Conference has been so completely transformed by becoming presiding elder of the Opelousas district that the man who stood as the invincible "Goliath of Gass" for church extension is obliterated, swallowed up in the booming, rustling, blustering presiding elder.

At the coming Annual Conference we hope to have the pleasure of seeing this Mr. Hyde transmigrate by some metamorphosis back into Dr. Jekyll. There will be many contortions, convolutions, much wriggling, writhing and grimaces by which the presiding elder will become once more the redoubtable champion of church extension, walking up and down the plain, bidding defiance to all comers. Your humble servant, little and unknown, forgotten, alas! even in the Opelousas district, alone am left to defend and give "administrar" assistance to this great society.

EPILOGUE.

Oh, Uncle Davy, hear my voice! While in your broad vision you superintend the movements of this great society in all our Southland, let your eye rest on the Opelousas district for a spell; don't overlook it. May your powers of vision be like the eagle's, whose eye can look at the sun, being adapted to views in the high empyrean, the clear atmosphere of vast altitudes; yet can so adjust the focus as to see a field rat from afar! So, Uncle Davy, just focalize your gaze upon a single object in the prairie grass of the Opelousas district. To carry out the figure, he is big for a rat, but not as big as an elephant. Uncle Davy, don't forget Jimmie in all your large-hearted liberality; don't "overlook" his district.

"Centenary is Going Up"

Hear it, ye Methodists of Louisiana! That is good news for you. One from beyond the bounds of your State echoes back that the college is worthy—yea, thrice worthy—of your constant efforts and self-denial in its behalf. Having formerly been a Centenary student for five years, and afterwards classed with graduates from nearly every Southern college, I have been in a position to judge fairly of Centenary's work. It far excels that of the average college and compares favorably with that of the best colleges.

Furthermore, Centenary is now equipped to do better work than when I was a college student. She has among other advantages a much better faculty. An intimate acquaintance with each individual member of the faculty enables me to make this statement. Attention might be called to the professor of astronomy and chemistry—a Christian scholar of experience, a tireless worker, who inspires a student with life and energy; to the professor of mathematics—a big-hearted man, who can with ease teach his department as few other men are able to teach; to the professor of English—a man of broad culture and extensive learning, who possesses in addition a native genius sufficient to instruct successfully in that difficult branch of learning. But space fails me and I forbear. Suffice it to say that the professors, without an exception, are all noble Christian men, who are faithful to their work and true to the church. Your money in Centenary is, therefore, a good investment, which will repay you an hundred-fold.

May Centenary College continue to rise until its past glory shall be eclipsed only by a more brilliant future!

A Glorious Meeting in Aberdeen, Miss.

We commenced a meeting at Aberdeen, Miss., Sept. 2. Rev. Lewis Powell, of the Tennessee Conference, being here on a visit, did the preaching for us for several days. He is a strong man in the pulpit, and his incisive deliverances made deep impressions on the minds and consciences of those who listened to him from time to time. On the sixth Rev. W. M. McIntosh, whose fame as an evangelist had preceded him, came and took charge of the meeting, and turned loose the artillery of the gospel on the congregation, doing faithful and efficient work for ten days. He is a man of intelligence, piety and zeal, and any church or community desiring a good meeting would do well to procure his services. There is no foolishness, no fanaticism, no clap-trap about him or his methods. He is one of the presidents of the Grenada Collegiate Institute, and expects to transfer to the North Mississippi Conference this Fall and become one of us. I take pleasure in commending him and his school to the favorable consideration of the people.

Bro. McIntosh preached some sermons here that will not soon, if ever, be forgotten by those who heard them. Many were converted. Backsliders were reclaimed. Believers were encouraged and strengthened. Twenty-four joined our church, and several will join other churches.

Bro. J. A. Leech, who is laboring with Bro. McIntosh, was with us and did good work in the service of song, at the altar, and in preaching to the children and young people. He is a consecrated Christian and will do good wherever he may go, both by precept and example. It was a privilege and a pleasure to have him at our parsonage home.

During the meeting we were also favored with the presence and help of Bros. Lagrone, P. E; Barnes, Bowen, Woollard, Broyles, and last, but not least, Bro. Bachman, who sung, prayed and sold good books. We appreciate the services of all these brethren, and give the glory to God for what he has wrought through them in and for Aberdeen.

East Tennessee Letter.

The re-adjustment of Conference boundaries to suit State lines always brings about desirable results. See the result to Centenary College from the re-adjustment along the Louisiana State line. You say "a gain of three hundred per cent."

Our Holston ceded her South Carolina territory to the betterment of all parties concerned. Then her Georgia territory (or most of it) with like results. Then her North Carolina territory with like advantages. One more cession needs to be made: namely, that portion of her territory lying in Virginia. Holston is hooked to assemble at Abingdon, Va., in a few days. The preacher in charge there is in agony. Hear him: "About all Abingdon can do, owing to its size, is to entertain our Annual Conference . . . Members of the Conference can have board and lodging for their wives at hotels at one dollar per day." And he calls on the presiding elders to send in the names of "delegates, superannuated and supernumerary preachers likely to attend." Some of us feel invited to stay away, as our body is too numerous for the town. No blame attaches to the preacher, but to our overburdening polity. With proper readjustment, many good results will come, among which will be the rallying of Virginians around old and honored Emory and Henry—perchance another "three hundred per cent.," as in the case of your venerable Centenary. Tennessee Methodism can never be unified and inspirited as she ought to be until Conference lines conform to our State boundary.

I have just risen from a careful reading of your issue of Sept. 30. That issue is worth more than its weight in gold, admitting that gold has of late doubled in value. Success to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE!

Epworth League Work.

We organized, about fifteen months ago, an Epworth League which continues to prosper. Our president, Mr. Senter, and vice-president, Mr. Kline, are making both the Devotional and Literary Departments a success. The Devotional Department is conducted by the president every Sunday afternoon, and the service is very profitable. The Literary Department is very attractive and is well attended by our young people. Through the Epworth League we hope to educate our young people for future usefulness in the church, and at the same time save them from the hurtful influences of the dance, euchre parties and other social vices.

Another thing we have done, which we think a great benefit to our town, viz., to organize a lecture course, beginning Oct. 6 and continuing until May. The lecturers are among the most distinguished ministers and laymen of the country. Through this means we hope to keep out of our town theatrical companies by furnishing a higher order of entertainments. We would commend this course to all of our towns. Our church is prosperous. Services are well attended.

Selections.

The Sensitive Man.

The most troublesome man in the church is not the rudely outspoken one, nor yet the chronic grumbler and objector, nor yet the perpetual critic and fault-finder, nor yet the church gossip. Bad as they are, they are not so bad as the man who applies every thoughtless remark, every word and deed that is capable of inappreciable interpretation, to himself and who is continually being hurt, offended and insulted. You can scarcely crook your finger without giving him offense. He is always on the lookout for slights and insults, and takes them when they are neither intended nor given. The least little thing throws him off his guard into a whirlwind of passion, and he threatens to leave the church. Don't be easily provoked. Keep cool. Be slow to take offense. Remember that "to err is human; to forgive, divine."

Do the Next Thing.

Vagueness is one of the worst curses of life. Either men look upon the great principles of duty through a glass, darkly, or they miss in putting them to practice through failing sharply to discern the right time and fit place of application. So it comes to pass that many men whose general intentions are of the best actually make their concrete performances to be of the worst, simply because—to use a phrase which is expressive, if it be slightly alloyed with slang—they do not "stick on" to their proper and waiting work.

Usually what a man ought to do is what he can do. When, under Nehemiah, the walls of the holy city were rebuilding, the priests repaired "every one over and against his own house;" and when the restored metropolis of Israel was to be guarded against invasion, every one in his watch was "to be over against his house." That was handy. It was economical, because it wasted the least possible time, while it quietly enlisted a special vigilance, proportioned to the individual anxiety of each householder that he and his might be safe.

There is this to be considered too: that great things usually so lie—so to speak—with their little ends toward us, that we are constantly exposed to danger of misapprehending their relative size and value. He consequently, who waits for "an eligible opportunity," and passes by many outlying possibilities lest they prove to be beneath him, will be almost sure to waste himself upon long waiting with scant results. If a boy wants to make a merchant of himself, his best way is to begin wherever and however he can, and by the energy and honesty and fidelity of his service in the lowest place demonstrate his fitness for a higher—a fitness toward which employers are seldom blind.

And so, if a Christian desires to be useful in the Master's name and for the Master's sake, he must avoid the mistake of idly waiting about for some first-class opportunity to offer itself.—Moravian.

Inward Decay.

Both life and death have their hiding-place within. The vital forces hide in the secret recesses of our being, and there, also, if anywhere, decay commences. A tree may be fair outside, and the branches may be clothed with verdure, but if the heart is hollow and rotten, its end is not far off. But though winds and frost may sweep every vestige of verdure from the branches of a tree, yet if there is soundness within the trunk, and if there are vital forces working for repair and restoration, a little time may suffice to clothe the tree again in all its beauty. So also a man may be swept by the hurricanes of misfortune, he may be stripped and torn by detraction, and insult, and slander, but if the life of God is in his soul, there will yet be fresh leaves and buds and blossoms, and there will also be fruit in due time.

There are institutions which without appear unpromising, which exhibit little show or splendor; but which have within vital honesty, rugged common sense, and earnest activity; and these elements meet the needs of the case, and insure final success; while on the other hand there are institutions which have all the show and appearance of wealth and prosperity, but inside have nothing but form and mass, pretense, emptiness and decay. The world, the flesh, and the devil hold carnival amid corruption and rottenness, and the time is sure to come when the seeming prosperity will vanish like a dream, and the hard, naked, wicked facts will come to the light.

Beware of inward decay, in the heart, in the home, in the Christian experience, everywhere; see to it that inward life be strong, and that Christ dwells in the heart by faith.—The Safeguard.

Hard Work.

It is useless to expect to accomplish much, either in the salvation of souls, or the advancement of the material interests of the church, without earnest and honest labor. The time has long since passed, if there was ever such a time, when any amount of learning and genius can take the place of hard work and a plenty of it. A prayerless closet will be followed by a barren ministry; and just as true is it that a deserted study will soon show itself in a poverty-stricken pulpit. No amount of general learning, readiness of speech, genius, if you please, can take the place of specific and careful and prayerful preparation for the pulpit. The same is true of all duties that devolve upon the gospel minister. In his pastoral work, the care of the sick, the watchful oversight of the wayward and erring, the administration of all the temporal affairs of the church, the highest success is always the result of the most systematic, painstaking and untiring effort. In no other way can we do great things for God and his church; in no other way can we win the smile of Heaven.—Southern Advocate.

You have a mission. Have you found it?

God's Choice of Men.

God's choice of men is determined not by intellectual, but by spiritual equipment. Scholarship, culture, great intellectual power are being largely set aside by God to-day in the most spiritual conquests that are being won in the world. Why? Not because he is averse to these things. No, no! Not because he can not use them. God can use the ripest scholarship, the largest natural gifts, the greatest brain power he ever endowed a rational being with. But he can not use the man who, having these things, has nothing else. So he sets them aside. A man may have the wisdom of Solon and the eloquence of Demosthenes, but if the Spirit is not in him, God can not use him for spiritual work. If he be a man of no intellectual gifts, and as ignorant as dear old Billy Bray was, if he is full of the Holy Ghost, God can use him to do glorious work for him.

I am almost tired of hearing people, when we ask them to do a bit of aggressive work, reply, "Well, but, you know, I am only a hewer of wood." That is a poor life-calling, I admit—only a hewer of wood. It seems to me as if the supply is very much larger than the demand. . . Hewers of wood! Yes, because most of our Christian people are so poorly equipped spiritually that that is the only bit of work God can entrust to them. But it does not follow, because you are a hewer of wood, that that is what God desires you to be—Rev. Charles Inwood.

The Christian's Rewards.

Christians are to serve God, not because he promises to reward them, but primarily because they ought to, whether they receive any reward or not. Yet, as an encouragement to every Christian, God says he will abundantly reward them. He does not say just what the rewards, in every instance, will be. He does not say they will be cash rewards. He does not declare that they will be health rewards and temporal gains, although these are often given; but they shall be such as seem good and wise to God, and most truly profitable to the faithful Christian. And surely he whom we serve and in whose hand are the rewards should have the sole right of saying just what the rewards shall be, how they shall be distributed, and when. And surely, also, we shall be rewarded according to our labor, its amount and quality.—Zion's Herald.

Confession.

It has been said that the hardest words to pronounce in the English language are, "I made a mistake." When Frederick the Great wrote to the Senate, "I have just lost a battle, and it's my own fault," Goldsmith says, "His confession shows more greatness than his victories." Such an acknowledgment is a sign of genuine nobility of character. It has, however, been a puzzle to us how people can be so ready in their prayers to confess their offenses, and yet be so reluctant to frankly admit their mistakes to their fellow-men.—Mid-Continent.

One Hank More.

A woman who was known to be very poor came to a missionary meeting at Wakefield, and offered to subscribe a penny a week for the mission fund. "Surely," said one, "you are too poor to afford this." She replied: "I will spin so many hanks of yarn a week for my living, and I'll spin one hank more and that will be a penny a week for the society."—Spurgeon.

["One hank more" from some poor person would amount to a great many pennies. Let us have that hank.—EDITOR.]

Preaching to a Small Congregation.

The minister who can not preach to his best to a slim house does not consider rightly. Philip never preached better than when he had only one man an audience. It is a fact that a poor sermon to a thin audience has more power over each hearer. This is a side light on the statement that God does not permit his word to return to him void.—The Interior.

It is the duty of the church members to welcome strangers and make them feel at home in the church. But it is also the duty of the stranger to be approachable and affable. They must come half way in order to be easy.—Guardian.

People who excuse themselves for not being more active in religious matters because there is so much hypocrisy, never, we observe, retire from their business pursuits because there is so much rascality among business men.

The Golden Rule offers this advice: "Let not your fine boots pinch your gifts to missions, nor your ribbons cut up your plan for beneficence."

The man of the one talent who is faithful is worth twenty men of ten talents who have stored them in a graveyard.

Rev. R. E. Rutledge, Learned, Miss., Sept. 21: "We have held revival services at our four churches in the Learned circuit. The Holy Spirit was with us at each place, reviving the Christians. There were 19 accessions to the church and a dozen or more converted. Glory to God!"

Rev. E. P. Craddock (Ellzey circuit), Ellzey, Miss., Sept. 19: "We have just closed our last protracted meeting. Sixty profess conversion, 40 joined the church, and more to follow. We are on a higher plane of religion, and moving along well. We hope the finances will not 'trail in the dust.'"

Rev. J. J. Arnold, L. P., Centerville circuit, Louisiana Conference: "Assisted by W. F. Sanders, P. C., I held a meeting at Cotton's School-house. Results: 17 conversions and 8 sanctifications; also baptized 9 infants. Salvation rolls on. I am glad the devil was disappointed in this meeting. Glory be to God!"

Rev. Jno. A. Miller, P. C., Ruston, La., Sept. 23: "We have just closed a gracious revival at Ruston. We have between 25 and 30 conversions, 23 accessions by disciplinary form and 6 by certificate. Bro. R. M. Blocker was with me through the entire meeting, and was efficient through the Lord in bringing souls to Christ."

Rev. H. B. Trevillion, P. C., Ellisville, Miss., Sept. 18: "We closed on the sixteenth instant a glorious meeting here. Mrs. Mollie McGee Snell was with us, and her Bible readings and lectures and peculiar personal work were greatly blessed. She is simply wonderful. The church never was as spiritual as now at this place. Before the meeting it was very cold. Rev. W. G. Forsyth was also a great help. Results of meeting: a live church and 34 accessions. There were many more conversions. Religion is the talk of the town."

Rev. W. T. Griffin, Terry, Miss., Sept. 21: "We have closed our round of protracted meetings. Have had revivals at each church; several conversions, some entire sanctifications, backsliders reclaimed, family altars established and much good done generally. Received about 50 into the church in all. This work is building up gradually. Byram, Forest, Hill and Terry Churches are much stronger than they were two years since. Spring Ridge holds her own. Have repaired their church; bought lamps, etc. Have four regular prayer meetings and five Sunday-schools. I wish to endorse Bro. Burt's timely article in last ADVOCATE."

Rev. W. D. Bass, Poplar Creek, Miss., Sept. 19: "I have just been with Bro. J. H. Rogers in another revival of wonderful power at Wesley's Chapel. People were saved from childhood to the old man of gray hairs. Don't know how many were converted. Once or twice I counted 130 and more who came forward declaring themselves on the side of duty and religion for all time to come. Fifty-three joined our church, and others to other denominations. Poplar Creek circuit is no longer on the back-ground, but is one of the best works in the Meridian district. The pastor's salary and Conference collections will all be met."

Rev. J. M. Huggins, Arkabutla circuit: "We have had revivals at all the churches, resulting in a deeper consecration on the part of the membership, and 20 accessions to the church in profession of faith. Our people in the Chestnut Ridge neighborhood have very nearly completed a new church on a point much more accessible than where the old one stood. For this enterprise much credit is due Bro. S. H. Hall, whose liberality and energy made possible that which seemed to some impossible. Bro. Townsend, a Cumberland Presbyterian, also brought us under much obligation by valuable assistance rendered in the erection of this house of worship."

Rev. J. White Davis, Gilbert, La., Sept. 15: "Arriving in Hamburg, Miss., Sept. 11, I found Bro. J. N. Tunker in the midst of a protracted meeting. Rain prevented the good results we would have otherwise had. Wednesday the pastor held a delightful service for the children, at which time a dear little boy was converted. May the Lord prepare him for and call him into the ministry! The meeting was closed too soon. Could it have been held a week longer, glorious would have been the results. I think I have never seen at any place greater interest manifested in a meeting, especially by the young people, than was at that place. Results: 2 or 3 conversions and 8 accessions. Bro. Tucker has the entire confidence of his people and has his work well in hand. If all the people on his work are like those in Hamburg, he certainly has a good people to serve."

Rev. J. H. Holland, P. C., Americus circuit, Mississippi Conference: "I am closing up my protracted meeting. I have held three meetings. My first meeting was held at Rosedale in July. I was assisted by Rev. C. W. Gavin, of the Alabama Conference. This was a tolerably good meeting. My second meeting was held at Cross Roads, the first of August. This was a good meeting. Several conversions and four added to the church. I was assisted three days by Rev. James King, L. P. He did us some good preaching. Our third quarterly meeting for Americus and Escatawpa works was held at Ward's Chapel, embracing the second Sunday in this month (September). On account of rain, our presiding elder and Bro. G. R. Ellis, of the Escatawpa work, did not reach the church until late Saturday evening, so the meeting began on Sunday morning, and the good Lord was with us in the first service in great power. Bro. H. E. Partridge, our much-beloved presiding elder, was full of the Holy Spirit, and preached with power. We ran the meeting three days, and Bro. Partridge did all the preaching, except one sermon preached by Bro. G. R. Ellis. The meeting resulted in 12 bright conversions and 10 bright sanctifications. Glory to God! the holy fire is beginning to burn in the hearts of the people on the old Americus circuit. And now, in conclusion, we expect to close up our meetings with a great and grand old-fashioned camp meeting at old Salem Camp Ground, beginning on Thursday night before the third Sunday in October. We want all preachers to pray for the success of our camp meeting."

Rev. M. L. White, Mt. Carmel, Miss., Sept. 14: "On the first Sunday evening in last February I organized a church at Oakvale School-house, with 15 members; preached for them Sunday evenings. Six weeks ago they commenced to build them a church-house, 32x50. A deed was secured to two acres and a half of land. Bro. Preston Turnage, a mechanic, was hired. The community came together, all bringing their tools, Presbyterians and Baptists assisting. I never saw a more jolly crowd of people at work trying to get the church ready for the protracted meeting. The second Sunday in September was set to commence the meeting. By that time the house was ready. A beautiful building, nice and roomy. When completed, it will be worth $600. The church is an honor to the community. I began to write to one preacher after another to help me. I failed to get a preacher. Bro. Thomas Boon, an exhorter from Winsburg circuit, did what he could for me. Bro. W. A. Miller, a young man just licensed to preach, preached one night. The pastor had the burden of preaching to bear. I don't think I have ever seen a grander revival. Old men and young men were saved from sin; 30 or 40 people at the altar for prayers; young men praying in public, also young women. One good sister said she never saw so many young ladies pray. Last evening of meeting was beyond description. After being engaged five days, we closed yesterday evening, with shouts and praises to our God. Twenty-two joined the church. One-half of this number were grown men; 18 of the number baptized; 2 infants baptized; great many conversions. To God be all the glory!"

Rev. P. H. Howse, P. C., Meadville, Miss., Sept. 21: "I have held three of my protracted meetings. 1. At Nebo, Aug. 18-23, assisted by Bro. W. W. Simmons, who did us fine service and great good. He is a man with more than ordinary ability. The results of the meeting are a gracious revival of the church and 8 accessions. We will not soon forget Bro. Simmons. Our second meeting was at New Providence. We protracted from our third quarterly meeting, Aug. 21-28. Bro. J. M. Weems, D. D., did the preaching, and it is hardly necessary for me to say that it was in a masterly and scholarly, yet simple manner. His words came burning from his heart, as fired by the Holy Ghost, and fell upon the hearts of his hearers like a consuming fire. The church was graciously revived, backsliders reclaimed, 4 joined the church, and a number converted, and sinners made to quake and tremble in their seats. The memory of Bro. Weems will remain with those people after he has gone to his reward. Our third meeting was held at Oak Grove. Bros. J. W. Tinnin and Milton Ferrell came to my assistance, Sept. 8. Meeting continued to the sixth. These brethren did fine work. They preached with the gift of the Holy Ghost, and God honored their labors, the people of the church rejoiced and sinners wept. There were five accessions. Eternity alone will reveal the glorious results of those meetings. May the God of all grace go with those brethren and bless them here in their labors, and hereafter crown them with immortal glory! The other two denominations on my work, which are our brother Baptist and Presbyterian, have been and are holding their revival meetings. I wish them much success. May God give us a revival in Meadville, that we may capture this one of the devil's strong fortifications for our Master. Pray for our success!"

LINDSEY CHAPEL.

(Num. xxiii, 28.)

The church bearing this name is located about four miles south of Clarksburg, at the old Clarksburg mill-place. This place, a few years ago, was noted for its wickedness. Sabbath desecration, gambling, profanity, dancing and drunkenness were some of the sins that cursed that wicked Sodom. Last July Rev. C. C. Griffin, assisted by the writer, held a four or five days' meeting there. We had a good meeting. We captured the old dancing hall for Christ, and on Sunday, Nov. 26, last, we organized with nine members. The infant plant was added to Clarksburg circuit, and christened "Lindsey Chapel" in honor of Bro. G. G. Lindsey, to whose untiring zeal the success of this enterprise is largely due. At the first Quarterly Conference of this year a Building Committee was appointed, which went to work in earnest and in a short time a very nice church was erected.

On Saturday, Sept. 8, we began a protracted meeting. The church was dedicated on Sunday by the Rev. B. S. Rayner, of Morton, Miss. The sermon was eloquent, logical and appropriate. The dedication was followed by a most delightful communion service. About sixty-five communed. The meeting continued nine days, and never in my life have I seen such a manifestation of the power of God. It was one continual season of glory and joy. It rained every day except two; but the people were too much in earnest to stand back on that account. I never saw God's people work so faithfully; never heard such shouting; and, thank God, I never felt so happy. Not only at the church, but on the road to and from church, at their homes and in the secret grove, God's people shouted along the praises of their King and Redeemer. On Friday night, just after the grove meetings were ended, and the people had returned to the church, the Holy Ghost was poured out upon the people as it never had been before. I believe there were at least one hundred rejoicing together, praising God and telling "what great things the Lord had done for them." We didn't have any preaching that night; we didn't need any. The Holy Ghost did the preaching. One man was converted on his way to church, others in the secret grove, others at the church; and, the best of all is, most of them were the sky-blue get-up-and-tell-it kind. One grand feature was the great part the ladies and young people took in the meeting. We had ladies and boys and girls in their teens that would stand up and testify for Jesus, pray anywhere they were called on and do anything else they could for the Master. We are indebted to Rev. C. C. Griffin, of Pulaski, Miss., and Rev. R. H. Barr, of Trenton, Miss., who did most of the preaching.

There were 10 children baptized, 24 received in the church. Two others applied for membership, but have not yet been received in. Twenty-five or thirty conversions and reclamations. Nearly the entire congregation pledged themselves to live better lives. Our little band of nine has grown to forty, and every member counts. I have had ninety-nine addition on the circuit this year. To God be all the praise!

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending and stating that she also has been cured." MRS. ANNA SUTHERLAND, Kalamazoo, Mich.

PAIN AND MISERY

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA

Cures Rheumatism.

"About 8 years ago, I suffered from what the doctors called rheumatism. Nobody knows the pain and misery which I had to endure and which clung to me in spite of the medicines prescribed. At last, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After a short time, the pains ceased. I continued the use of the Sarsaparilla for a whole year, until the rheumatism entirely disappeared." — JAMES WAY, proprietor of livery stable, Roseville, Cal.

Gambling in Futures.

The citizens of Vicksburg and the region roundabout have organized and gone to work vigorously to secure congressional legislation suppressing gambling in futures. The movement has the vigorous support of the Vicksburg Herald. The Herald declares that the Louisiana Lottery is a mere bagatelle in comparison with this species of gambling. The Herald is right. The evil wrought by the Louisiana Lottery is utterly insignificant in comparison with the disastrous results of this future gambling. It is to the interest of those who manipulate the great gambling machine to depress the price of cotton, and there are numerous ways of doing this that the honest farmers of the country have not thought of. Every conceivable method is worked for all it is worth by these sharks to bring down the price of cotton so as to increase their own margin. The question of suppressing this infamous system of robbery should be esteemed by the farmers of the South as paramount to all other questions now discussed in the political arena. No question of coinage and tariff has any such direct bearing on the financial interests of the farmers of the South as this anti option question.

Let the cotton planters all over the South go to work at once. Let them organize; let them overwhelm their senators and representatives in Congress with petitions in favor of anti-option legislation. Let them have an eye to their own interests in exercising the right of suffrage. Let them vote for no man of any party who will not pledge himself to use his utmost efforts for the suppression of this infamous business. Let the press of the South do its duty. We speak more particularly of the smaller papers—the weeklies which circulate among the farmers in each county and parish. These papers can accomplish wonders in stirring up the farmers on this subject. The farmers are all right in sentiment, but they need to be stirred up and put to work.

We speak of the farmers because they are more directly concerned than others: but it is not the farmer alone who is interested in this matter. Agriculture is the foundation of all other human pursuits. When agriculture languishes there is a depression in every branch of legitimate business. This being the case, it is to the interest of men engaged in every line of business to join hands with the farmer in this matter. We are firmly of the opinion that by proper effort a rigorous anti-option law can be secured during the next session of Congress.

In the Empire State.

On Thursday, Sept. 20, I left the Crescent City via the Southern Pacific for the Empire of Texas. Contrary to my usual custom when traveling, I neither read nor wrote the live-long day. Needing a brief respite from toil, and traveling through a region famous for the beauty of its scenery, I could not resist the temptation to spend the day in feasting my eyes upon the magnificent panorama that unfolded itself as the train rattled along with the speed of an eagle in pursuit of his prey. So far as my unpracticed eye is capable of judging, the rice crop of South Louisiana is excellent. The cane is luxuriant. On the vast Texas-like prairies of Southwest Louisiana the crop of cattle, ponies and other live stock seems about the same from year to year since my first visit to that region, nearly fifteen years ago. The Attakapas pony does not seem to have changed his characteristics in the least since I used to try his speed in my boyhood days. I crossed the Sabine about nightfall and reached Houston—362 miles from home—at about ten o'clock at night.

Although I had frequently passed Houston en route to Austin and San Antonio, I had seen nothing of it except what can be seen from the windows of a moving train. Desiring to see more of the city, I had arranged to remain over Friday, which I did, leaving for Center on Saturday morning. Some surprises awaited me. I was surprised to learn that Houston is situated on a navigable stream, and has on that account some, at least, of the benefits that accrue from maritime commerce. I was not unaware of the fact that Galveston Bay is near by, and I knew from observation that a small stream — Buffalo Bayou — runs through the city; but it had not occurred to me that this sluggish, turbid stream is sufficiently deep to be navigable by any except the very smallest craft—fishing smacks and the like. I was quite surprised, therefore, to see a number of very respectable sized boats loading and unloading at its wharves. This navigable stream, giving, as it does, advantages in the way of freight rates, has doubtless contributed largely to the rapid growth of the city within the last few years. The recent growth of the city has been very remarkable. In 1870 the population was only a little over 9,000. Ten years later the population had not reached 19,000. In 1890 it had less than thirty thousand. During the brief period since the last census it has grown at such a rate that it claims a population of more than sixty thousand. As there is a well-known tendency among American towns to overestimate their population, this claim should, perhaps, be abated somewhat. Yet, after spending a day in the city and after talking with many of its citizens, and also with drummers who know something of its volume of business, I think it safe to say that its population is not less than fifty thousand. At its present rate of growth it will take only a few years for it to pass the hundred thousand line. Its facilities for railroad transportation are unsurpassed, so far as I know, by any town of its size in the South. It has thirteen railroads branching out in every direction. Its manufacturing interests are large and diversified. In the number and capacity of its compresses and oil mills it claims to be unequaled by any city of anything like equal dimensions in the world. It has many specimens of architecture that would be quite creditable to a much larger city. It has a hotel that is said to have cost more than a hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and a very extensive addition to this building is now in process of erection. There are other hotels that approximate this. A six-story business building is now going up at a cost of a hundred thousand dollars; and it is being built by a man who has the reputation of having never made a financial mistake. Work has been commenced on a public school building which is to cost a hundred thousand dollars. Many other fine specimens of modern architecture greet the eye as the ubiquitous electric cars whirl you rapidly along the crowded streets—such as the court-house, the opera house, the Cotton Exchange, the armory, the Masonic Temple, the Postoffice, several bank buildings and private residences. Several of its private residences would attract attention even in New Orleans.

I spent a delightful hour in the office of Dr. G. C. Rankin, pastor of Shearn Memorial Church, the leading Southern Methodist Church of the city. Dr. Rankin was just giving the finishing touches to a five-thousand-dollar addition to his church. This church was built a few years since at a cost of $25,000 under the pastorate of Rev. S. H. Werlein, now of the St. Louis Conference. With a seating capacity of five hundred, it was at that time amply sufficient to meet the wants of the congregation. With the growth of the city, however, the congregation has grown to such an extent that it became absolutely necessary either to enlarge the present building or erect a new one. Fortunately the building is so constructed as to be susceptible of enlargement without marring its symmetry in the least. Hence enlargement was decided upon. It is estimated that the extension gives a total seating capacity of eight hundred. A rededication service was to be held last Sabbath conducted by Bishop Key. The Sabbath-school is domiciled in a separate building, having class rooms, pastor's office, and a number of other apartments essential to a modern city church.

Dr. Rankin is having a very successful pastorate. He preaches regularly to a crowded house. The church is growing in numerical strength, is well organized, and is doing good work along many lines. I attended a meeting of the Epworth League on Friday night, at which nearly two hundred persons were present. The programme consisting of music, recitations etc., was of a character likely to be attractive to young people. About midway of the programme there was an intermission of about ten or fifteen minutes in the interest of sociability. Shearn Church has a strong hold not only upon the masses, but also upon the wealth and culture of Houston. It comprises in its membership quite a goodly proportion of the leading men of the city both in business and professional circles. There are eight Southern Methodist Churches in Houston—five English and three German. With the exception of the German churches, all these are swarms from the Shearn hive. Shearn keeps her eye open, and when she sees a need for it, she plants a mission church and sustains it until it becomes self-sustaining, or until the Conference Board of Missions is willing to take it in hand.

Had time permitted, I should have visited the spot near by where the battle of San Jacinto was fought—a battle that won imperishable renown for its hero, Gen. Houston, and laid the foundation for the glorious destiny which the "Lone Star Republic" has since wrought out. I had the pleasure of spending a night in the hospitable home of Judge E. P. Hamblen and his excellent wife—both ex-Mississippians. Judge Hamblen graduated at the University of Mississippi in the same class with Bishop Galloway. Soon afterward he married, came to Houston and hung out his shingle as an attorney-at-law. He has built up a large and lucrative practice. He was on the bench for some years, and displayed such eminent fitness for judicial position that his voluntary retirement was a cause of regret to the best citizens of his district. I also enjoyed the hospitalities of Bro. A. G. Howell, formerly of Marion, Ala., to whom and to his charming wife (also an Alabamian) I am under many obligations. I called at the parsonage home of Rev. John Green, formerly of Selma, Ala. I did not find him in, but had the pleasure of exchanging greetings with his better half and also with his aged father and mother who were enjoying a visit to their preacher boy. Bro. Green is immensely popular in Houston; and his popularity is not confined to Methodist circles. He is beloved by Christians of all denominations and by men of the world as well. Sister Green enjoys the reputation of being a model preacher's wife. I called at the Presbyterian parsonage and had a delightful confab with its occupants, my old friends, Dr. William Hayne Leavell and his accomplished wife, a daughter of Senator George. Dr. Leavell is having a very successful pastorate in Houston. He has been in Houston twenty months, and during that time has had a hundred and seventy accessions to his church. He has commenced a $75,000 stone church, which when completed will be one of the handsomest that I know of in the South, ranking along with the Second Presbyterian Church in Memphis and the First Methodist Church in the same place. I had the pleasure of meeting other Mississippians, among them Miss Annie Williams, formerly of Meridian, Miss., who now holds a fine position in the Houston High School.

Saturday morning, at eight o'clock, I boarded a train on the Houston East and West railroad for Tenaha—one hundred and seventy-six miles distant. The principal town on this road is Nagodoches, said to be the oldest town in the State. It is a place of, perhaps, two thousand inhabitants. East Texas is very different from other parts of the State which I have visited. Instead of prairies, you find a hill country covered with pine forests. An immense lumber business is done along this line of railroad. Crops in this section are generally good. Cotton has suffered somewhat from excessive rains, but peas and potatoes have been benefited thereby. Arriving at Tenaha late in the afternoon, I was met at the depot by Rev. A. J. Weeks, pastor of Center Station, ten miles distant. Behind a pair of spirited Texas ponies we made the trip in good time. I was domiciled with Bro. W. Runnels, a big-hearted, thoroughly consecrated native Texan, who has an unbounded love for the church, and never grows weary in doing whatsoever his hands find to do to advance her interests. To him and his good wife I am indebted for many courtesies during my stay in Center. Sunday morning dawned bright and beautiful. The new church is quite a handsome edifice, built according to one of Uncle David Morton's plans. It has a Sunday-school room separated from the auditorium by a movable partition, so that the two rooms can be made one when there is a demand for an increase of seating capacity. The demand came on this dedicatory occasion. Both rooms were filled with an audience apparently eager to catch every word of the sermon. It was evident that the deft hand of woman had been utilized in preparing for the occasion. Floral decorations, tastefully arranged, abounded. A good choir was on hand with an exceedingly appropriate service of song. After the sermon the beautiful building, free from debt, was solemnly set apart from all unhallowed and common uses to the worship of Almighty God. There was an Epworth League service in the afternoon which I did not attend, as I was to fill the pulpit again at night. Bro. Weeks, the pastor, has his work well in hand. He is beloved of his flock and is striving diligently to lead them onward and upward.

I was much pleased to meet at Center the presiding elder of the district, Rev. Charles F. Smith, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, and his wife—also a Mississippian. Bro. Smith was among friends in Center, he having closed a three-years' pastorate here last Winter when the powers that be said to him, "Come up higher." Bro. Smith has become a thorough Texan, but still has a love for his native land. I heard good reports of his work on the district. This church was built during his pastorate. I was pleased also to meet Bro. Wagnon, pastor of Timpson; Bro. Burke, of Center circuit, and Bro. McKnight, a local preacher resident at Center. Methodism is far in the lead in Center. I was much pleased with the people I met in this region. They understand the art of welcoming a strange preacher. When the service closes everybody seem anxious to get acquainted with him and shake his hand. Consequently he does not feel as preachers sometimes feel when they occupy a strange pulpit—as if he had got into an ice box.

Monday morning early I rolled out for home, enjoying part of the way the pleasant companionship of Bros. Weeks and Wagnon. Tuesday, at noon, I was again in the ADVOCATE office fresh and vigorous after my little jaunt of eleven hundred miles.

W. C. BLACK.

An Important Judicial Decision.

Some time since the New Orleans City Council, during an investigation of the management of the Leper Hospital, summoned Dr. J. C. Beard, lessee of the institution, to appear before them. In his statement he affirmed that there are lepers running at large in the city, and gave the names of some persons of this class. The Times-Democrat published the proceedings of the Council, including this statement of Dr. Beard. Thereupon, one of the alleged roving lepers of the city, E. E. Meteye, brought a libel suit against the Times-Democrat, claiming damages in the sum of $25,000. The case was tried before Judge Monroe, who promulgated his decision on Friday, Sept. 28. The Judge holds that the proceedings of a legislative body, or a committee appointed by such body, are proper matter for newspaper publication, and, therefore, that no liability for damages is incurred by such publication. The decision is a very lucid one, and we think will commend itself to the public as embodying the principles of equity and common sense.

More Villainy Unearthed.

Enough corruption among the officials of this city has already been made public to give the city a very unenviable notoriety throughout the civilized world. It seems certain, however, that the half has not been told. More and more of deep-dyed villainy is being brought to light continually. A new trail was struck last week, and big game was soon brought to bay. The nine councilmen under indictment will doubtless soon have their number considerably increased. Meanwhile impeachment proceedings are still in progress. Notwithstanding the proverbial delays of the law, we think that not many weeks will elapse before several municipal offices will be vacated and the people will have an opportunity to elevate clean-handed men to positions of power.

The New Orleans Preachers' Association held its first meeting since the Summer vacation on Monday last. The reports are encouraging. While most of the churches have had a diminished attendance during the Summer, as was to be expected, some of them have had a much larger attendance than usual in the Summer months. The spiritual state of the church, though not what it should be, is regarded in most of the charges as decidedly full of promise. Revival services will be held in some of the charges at an early day.

It has been demonstrated of late that New Orleans has a number of men in judicial position who are doing all in their power to make the law a terror to evil doers. A pity it is that all do not belong to that class. Recently the police of the city raided a gambling den, arrested a number of professionals, and captured the paraphernalia of their infamous business. When brought before the court having jurisdiction, the judge not only summarily released the offenders, but, it is said, actually apologized to them on account of their having been disturbed by the police. The matter will go before the Grand Jury.

We are in receipt of a circular calling upon all Christian people to observe Sunday and Monday, Oct. 21 and 22, as a season of special prayer for the Sunday-schools of the world. The circular bears the following signatures:

John E. Tresidder, Edward Towe, W. H. Miller, Charles Waters, J. E. Edmunds, W. H. Groser, Honorable Secretaries.

56, Old Bailey,
57 and 59, Ludgate Hill, E. C.

The name of the organization to which these persons are secretaries does not appear on the circular. Prayer in behalf of Sunday-schools is certainly desirable. If Christian people everywhere will pray earnestly that the Sunday-schools of the Christian world may become more powerful instrumentalities for the conversion of souls, and then will go to work to help the Lord to answer their prayers, much good will no doubt be accomplished.

The Brooks Memorial Home.

Millsaps College campus is alive with students, and still they come. No college ever had brighter prospects. Every room in our six cottages is occupied, and the demand is for more. We need the Brooks Cottage at once. We really need two or three more. Who will help us? Is there not some friend who will send us $700 to build a cottage in memory of some loved one? If the friends of the sainted Bro. Brooks will send their subscriptions at once to Bro. J. D. Calhoott, of Coldwater, Miss., in six weeks we will have a cottage for twelve boys. Brethren of the ministry, help us! Sincerely yours,

PERSONALS.

Rev. Dr. R. A. Young has returned from his trip abroad.

Bishop Wilson had a very sharp attack some days ago which greatly prostrated him. He is now much improved.

R. R. Gwyn, who recently died at his home in Elkin, N. C., left by will a bequest of $1,000 to our Foreign Missionary Board.

Bishop Keener has returned from Ocean Springs, where he has been spending the Summer, as is his custom. He is in his usual health.

Rev. E. M. Bounds, D. D., late assistant editor of the Christian Advocate at Nashville, was located by the Missouri Conference at his own request.

Several brethren have honored the ADVOCATE sanctum with their presence recently, viz., Dr. J. W. Harmon, Rev. H. J. Harris, Rev. J. A. Parker.

Rev. S. S. Kesner spent a few days in the city recently. He is in fine health and spirits. He reports forty-five accessions to the church in Baton Rouge station this year.

Rev. J. G. Cammack, of the Mississippi Conference, is spending a few days in the city upon the mission of bringing his wife here for medical treatment. We hope she will be speedily restored to perfect health.

Charles Olson, a railroad fireman of Lacrosse, Wis., one of the Debs' strikers, has brought suit against the Burlington and Northern railroad for having blacklisted him, thus preventing him from obtaining employment on other lines of road. This is a sensible method of procedure. If the railroad has violated any statute, then the plaintiff will obtain redress in a peaceable, legal way. If there is no statute covering such a case, then this suit will direct public attention to the defect, and it will be only a question of time when the defect will be remedied. Whenever a peaceable and equitable way of solving disputes between capital and labor shall have been provided, then one of the greatest problems of nineteenth century civilization will have been solved.

A Call.

To the Citizens of the State of Mississippi, who are in favor of maintaining the Christian Sabbath, or Weekly Rest Day:

The American Sabbath Union—a national, undenominational, non-partisan, and Christian society, having for its only object the preservation of the American Sabbath as a day of rest and worship—is endeavoring to organize State Sabbath Associations in all parts of the country. This union received the hearty and unanimous endorsement of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Memphis, and of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, at Nashville, Tenn., last May.

In furtherance of this purpose the undersigned citizens of the State of Mississippi unite with the officers of this union in extending a cordial invitation to all churches, Sunday-schools, Young Men's Christian Associations, and to all persons throughout the State who believe in the preservation of the Christian Sabbath, or Lord's Day, to meet in convention at Jackson, Wednesday, Oct. 24, A. D. 1894, at 10 A. M.

Kobe Industrial School.

MR. EDITOR: The following letter from Bishop Galloway, recently received, was not intended for publication, but we take this liberty because we know all our brethren will share our joy in hearing from our beloved Bishop, and because we believe it will "stir up the pure minds" of brethren and people to hasten the subscription of the one thousand dollars necessary for the building of the Kobe Industrial and Training-school for Japanese Women. Already (thanks to the recent labors of Bro. Masao) six hundred dollars of this amount are in sight. Yours in hope,

J. P. DRAKE.

Kobe, Japan, Aug. 27, 1894.

Dear Bro. Drake:

In the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of July 26, I have just read a note from you reporting another contribution to the "Kobe Industrial School for Girls." I was gratified at the announcement, and most heartily approve your earnest efforts in that behalf. It was my pleasure three weeks ago to attend the closing exercises of that school and witness the graduation of six young ladies. The scene was quite impressive, though I understood not one word of the essays read or the address delivered—only the few remarks I had the honor to make. The girls were neatly dressed, were elaborately polite, and evidenced careful training. Several of them are Christians, and I had the pleasure to see them commune at our church the following Sabbath. They are taught various industrial arts, all intended to make them keepers of Christian homes. One has only to spend a few hours in any Japanese city to appreciate the importance of such training, and the grand missionary field to be occupied by such a school. At the close of the exercises we were served with tea and cakes, and then invited down stairs to examine the display of work wrought by the hands of these girls. I am sure you would have commended it as worthy any school in our Christian America. For the opportunities afforded and the training given, they have done remarkably well. But the school is conducted in a small Japanese house, with meager equipments, and at comparatively little cost. We ought to enlarge, and provide better facilities, for the school will certainly grow.

The hope of Mrs. Lambuth's return cheers teachers and pupils and, for that matter, the whole Conference. A rarely gifted and consecrated missionary she has been. Returning to the United States once from China, she was six months on board a sailing vessel. With another missionary lady she organized a school composed of a few boy sailors and passengers, and conducted it during the voyage—a six months' school on the sea. What a blessing to those boys! what a joy to their teachers! Thus she has seized every opportunity to serve her Lord. She has entered every open door, and economized every half-hour to speed the coming of his kingdom. Such a heroic and consecrated missionary should be helped, and I am glad this school of her planting is on your heart.

Not many blocks away from the school is the grave of Dr. J. W. Lambuth. As I stood uncovered before his modest tomb, and recalled the years of his apostolic labors, I was grateful that my named appeared with his on the roll of the same Annual Conference. Brethren of our noble old Conference ought to feel special joy in the privilege of aiding the cause for which he toiled and gloriously died.

But I did not intend a homily—only a word of personal appreciation for your sympathy with this great work. As I travel through the country, visit old temples and then new churches, my heart is stirred to the depths, and I long for scores of men and women to come and take this land for our Lord. Christianity has already become a power in the Empire, and must sooner or later become the dominant faith. Just now the hostile currents are strong and determined, but our native Christians are standing firm, and every day marks some advance.

My health has been excellent, though the mercury is high, the heat oppressive and labors have been exacting. On Sept. 11 I sail for China. This country and Cathay are in the throes of war, but there is little or no danger in traveling. In China one could not well venture far from the leading ports.

I leave China the last of October or first of November. A letter addressed to me at Columbo, Ceylon, or Calcutta, India, will be received. Bro. Henry Hawkins transfers to the Mississippi Conference.

Truly and fraternally,

CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

Natchez, Miss.

We are in the midst of a great meeting in Natchez, the results of which will be given you later. Dr. Carradine has been doing some of the best preaching I ever heard. We have the house nearly full at the morning service, and at night we can not seat all the people who come to hear him. His sermons are clear, logical, Wesleyan, and biblical. He is free from fanaticism and full of faith and the Holy Ghost. He will be a genuine blessing to any church that secures his services. We would not take a house-full of gold for the good he has done us, and still the work goes on. He is misrepresented by some; but, calm and sweet in spirit, he heeds it not, and he presses on to do the Master's bidding, pronouncing only blessings on the heads of those who traduce him. The Lord is with him, and he greatly honors the ministry of his faithful servant.

HOME CIRCLE.

I think that the first glad sound I shall hear
When I enter heaven, will be,
The musical patter of little feet,
On the golden streets toward me;
And peeping out between angel's wings,
At the pearly gates I shall see,
The dear little child who with flying feet
Will be coming to welcome me.

Parental Dereliction.

It is a common thing for parents to request their friends, and especially their pastor, to assist them with their advice and prayers in the guidance of their children.

This is all right; but parents have duties to perform in these premises that are more observed in the breach than in the performance. One of the most lamentable facts in the whole catalogue of human frailty is the tendency of many parents to shift responsibility, and saddle it on the school teacher and the preacher, and, then, what is still worse, it often happens that a censorious criticism of both these human builders neutralizes their influence with the children whom they are employed to influence and guide. Many parents let their children choose their own school, books, boarding-places, etc., and when matters turn out badly they appeal to others, whose help then comes too late. Some send their children to a godless school, where their religious intruction is not only neglected, but where the trend of circumstances and influence is calculated to overcome and destroy the good already wrought in them at other places and under other circumstances. When, therefore, the children return home irreligious, and in some cases positively skeptical, with habits of mind and body unfriendly to their best interest firmly fixed, it is then that the preacher and the religious community are besought to rectify the wrong parental dereliction has brought about. These pictures are not overdrawn; these facts are not colored. It is the experience of every pastor, and it is occurring every day in the year. And it will never cease until parents come to have a conscience in the matter of controlling their children, and in aiding and assisting those who are helping in the edification of human character. To criticise the pastor and thus ruin his influence; to oppose the teacher and thus neutralize his efforts; to side with the children in their half-formed—malformed—notions of what is best for them, and to allow them to suggest their own course before they are able to properly appreciate the interests, is to simply stab them in the surest place to kill their future prospects, and prepare an untimely grave for gray-headed sorrow and mistaken parental providence.—Texas Advocate.

How He Won Success.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew tells the story of his visit to the mechanical department of Cornell University. He found at the head of it Prof. Morris, who claimed him as a superior officer, giving as a reason that he was an old-time worker on the New York Central railroad. "How did you get here?" asked Depew. "I fired on the New York Central. I stood on the footboard as an engineer on the Central. While a locomotive engineer I made up my mind to get an education. I studied at night, and fitted myself for Union College, running all the time with my locomotive. I procured books, and attended as far as possible the lectnre and recitations. I kept up with my class, and on the day of graduation I left my locomotive, washed up, put on the gown and cap, delivered my thesis, and received my diploma. I then put away my diploma, put the gown and cap in the closet, put on my working-shirt, got on my engine, and made my usual run that day." "Then," says Depew, "I knew how he became Prof. Morris." That spirit will cause a man to rise anywhere and in any calling. It is ambition, but it is ambition wisely directed, aiming, not at the goal—for such an ambition produces envy, scheming, discontent, and weakness—but bravely and cheerily aiming at one's self, seeking to make one's self fitted for higher work. When this is accomplished the opportunity for higher work is sure to come.—Golden Rule.

A Warning.

The devil is a cunning angler; if he can not land his trout by hook, he will take to tickling. As the sensation is grateful, comforting, he seldom fails. Who does not like to be sought after? Who does not appreciate the golden opinions of his fellows? A young man, rather than be considered strait-laced, accepts an invitation into questionable society. A compliment has been paid him, and he does not quite like to say "No;" but when it is borne in mind that his presence at one midnight carnival, besides jeopardizing his earthly prospects and putting his own soul in peril, will label the whole proceedings as respectable, and be referred to with pride as a precedent for others equally respectable, the profound importance of the step will be at once apparent.

There is current to-day a devilish maxim that every young man must have his fling. No stone will be left unturned to convert you to the same opinion. You will be urged to add to your knowledge by seeing life in all its phases at theatres, music-halls, dancing-saloons, gambling hells, and gin palaces. You will be wheedled into these white-washed charnel-houses, these gilded soul-traps, these vile manufactories where the raw and loathsome material of vice is worked up into captivating and marketable shape. For God's sake, beware! Give heed to the warnings of Scripture, and the danger-signals standing at every inch of the way. These pure-minded, high-principled young men—these young men who tell you they know what's what—only just go in to see, that's all—go in pure, come out corrupted—go in rich, come out beggared—go in in the prime of health and manhood, come out sapped of their vigor, shorn of all nobility, bearing away the undying germs of death. Then the old home, once a place of joy, becomes the abode of lamentation.

Get, then, where the heavenly voices can reach you, and be swift to act upon their blest communications. Wait but a little while, and the other voices will all be hushed. In a few short years these flash young men will be no more. They tread a path bestrewed with fading flowers, but which is but a short cut to the grave. Not many years since, I knew a young fellow, respectably connected, who heartily subscribed to this maxim that every young man must have his fling. He was very consistent, and practised what he preached. He swore well, drank well, was a good hand at cards and billiards. He could crack a foul joke, and boast most truthfully of his numerous excesses. Yea, he was a very hero, a kind of planet, round which large clusters of minor satellites revolved. His light burned brilliantly, evoked applause; but, lacking power of continuity, suddenly went out. A virulent disease, with bull-dog ferocity, fastened upon his body, seized his very vitals, and would not leave go till its fangs had met; then it flung its mangled victim into a dishonored grave, and left it there for decent folks to bury. Yet he was deemed a good-natured, generous-hearted young man, and a jolly good sort of fellow; but he cracked his last joke at thirty?—The Quiver.

Didn't I Do It Well?

A proud scion of the aristocracy one day taunted one of the most influental members of the House of Commons, by saying, "I remember your origin, when you blacked my father's boots." "Well, sir," was the reply, "and didn't I do it well?"

A fitting reply. The humblest vocation is no digrace. Let there be fidelity in it, and it puts honor upon the brow. What the hand findeth to do let it be done well, and there will be no cause to be ashamed.—Intelligencer.

Tribute of Respect.

At a meeting of the people of Verona, held in the M. E. Church, South, on Sunday, Sept. 9, 1894, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, We have learned with profound sorrow and regret of the contemplated removal of Rev. J. B. Stone and his family to the city of Holly Springs, as their future home; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deeply regret the loss to us of a favorite, zealous, useful and able minister, a true Christian gentleman, a devoted friend and brother, a good citizen without blame and above reproach.

Resolved, That during his long residence of twenty-four years among us as pastor and presiding elder he has faithfully and efficiently discharged all the duties pertaining to these exalted stations and greatly endeared himself to us as a devoted, zealous man of God.

Resolved, That we will sadly miss his ministrations in the pulpit, his loving counsels in the sick-room, his cheering words of comfort and consolation in the death-chamber, his tender, sympathizing appeals to the sorrow-stricken and bereft at the funeral services of loved ones departed.

Resolved, That we recognize in his beloved wife a noble Christian woman, whose rare gifts and unselfish labors in the missionary cause, in the Sabbath-school, the ladies' and prayer meeting—indeed, all the enterprises of the church—command our highest admiration and esteem. We have the testimony of R. L. Trice, superintendent of our Sabbath-school for fifteen or twenty years, that Sister Stone has been the most efficient, the most punctual, and altogether the best Sabbath-school teacher he has ever known.

Resolved, That in the removal of his lovely and accomplished daughter (Miss Mary) the church loses a splendid organist, and society one of its brightest ornaments.

Resolved, That in the removal of our dear brother and his family from our midst Verona society and this whole community has sustained a loss which will long be felt and deplored and which we deem irreparable.

Resolved, That our best wishes and most earnest prayers for the happiness and well-being of our beloved brother and his dear family will steadily follow them wherever their lot in life may be cast.

Resolved, That we cherish the hope that our separation will not be permanent; but that in a few years our friend and brother and his esteemed family will return to their home in Verona to remain with us for life. But if in the providence of God this hope should not be realized, we trust to be reunited in another and brighter clime, the "home of the unclouded day."

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SUNSHINE CAKE.—Cream one cupful of butter; add two cupfuls of sugar, and beat to a cream; then add one cupful of milk, the yolks of eleven eggs beaten very light, and three cupfuls of flour which have been sifted three times; beat until light and smooth, add two tablespoonfuls of baking powder.

BAKED TOMATOES.—Select large specimens, cut around the stem end, remove part of the inside; make a stuffing of any kind of cold cooked meat chopped fine, bread-crumbs, green corn, minced onions, a well-beaten egg, butter, salt and pepper; fill the tomatoes with this dressing, put a piece of butter on top of each, and bake in a quick oven for forty-five minutes.

SNOW PUDDING.—Dissolve four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch in a little cold water, then stir into one pint of boiling water quickly, until quite clear. Remove from the stove; put the whites of four eggs, beaten to a stiff froth, into the boiling starch and stir thoroughly. Pour into a deep dish and set in the refrigerator until ice cold.

Sauce.—One cupful of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of milk, and the beaten yolks of four eggs. Heat the milk, then stir in the eggs and sugar, but do not allow the milk to curdle. Flavor with vanilla and pour over the pudding before eating.—Gene and Jo Boyce.

HYGIENE.

The Medicinal Value of Hot Water.

One of the best remedies for biliousness, dyspepsia, and loss of appetite is to be found in the contents of the steaming tea-kettle. Many, like Naaman, will undoubtedly turn away from this simple, inexpensive, easily-to-be-obtained medicine with distrust. It would be exceedingly difficult to induce them to give it a trial. The very fact that it is free to all, "without money and without price," makes it seem of no value to them; and instead of using a medicine that has been frequently proved to be both safe and effectual, they prefer to go on dosing themselves with doubtful and injurious drugs.

The testimony of one lady for whom a goblet of hot water, an hour before eating, was prescribed by her physician, is to the effect that it acts as a gentle cathartic, promotes healthy action of the liver and kidneys, and, as a natural consequence, cleanses the tongue and creates an appetite.

Another lady, for whom three cups of hot water an hour and a half before each meal, and one hour before retiring, were prescribed, asserts having noted that a little while after drinking it she finds herself so hungry she can scarcely wait the hour that must elapse before her meal. This lady states that for fifteen years previous to the time when she began drinking hot water, she had rarely known what it was to feel hungry or to relish her food. She had also observed that when away from home where she could not obtain hot water before meals, her appetite departed in spite of the fact that various delicacies to tempt it were provided for her. She also testifies to the efficacy of hot water as a cleanser of the system, as a cure and prevention of gravel and similar diseases, and to its favorable action upon all the digestive organs. In common with another experimenter, she further affirms that it is decidedly stimulating; that after drinking it one feels decidedly refreshed and strengthened.

Others have proved hot water to be an effectual remedy for sick headache and pains in the stomach or bowels, caused by indigestion.—Christian at Work.

Does Fruit Cause Diarrheal Diseases?

The popular opinion which has so long prevailed that fruit is a chief cause of diarrheal diseases in children and others has never been admitted by the hygienist further than that decaying or bad fruit, or fruit eaten at improper times, may produce such results. To settle the matter scientifically, an English physician has collected over 600 cases of diarrheal diseases, in children in Summer, making careful inquiries as to whether fruit had been eaten. The result showed that in a majority of cases it had not been. What, then, was found to be the most probable cause, if not fruit? The investigation showed that bad air had probably been the most active cause. The moist, hot air of Summer, loaded, no doubt, with products of decay and bacteria, are far more dangerous foes to the young than fresh, wholesome fruit. As the most important requisite to health pure air is now more and more believed to be of the greatest importance.—Journal of Hygiene.

There is a vast amount of needless and artificial trouble in the world, which, so far from producing any good result, merely irritates the nerves and fritters away the powers, and unfits the victim for his duties in life. There is much sickness in the world which ought to have been prevented. Some persons urge patience and submission in ill-health with much more earnestness and zeal than they ever use in exhorting men to avoid it. Yet surely the illness that springs from over-indulgence of the appetites, from culpable overwork, from careless neglect of hygienic laws that demand the study and obedience of every intelligent man and woman, should not be welcomed as a means for cherishing fortitude, but rather condemned as a needless distress which the sufferer has brought upon himself by wrong-doing! The wise physician who teaches men to avoid pain and disease is far more widely serviceable than he who merely essays their cure as they appear.

Truth always travels in the middle of the road, no matter whom it meets.

REDUCED TO A SKELETON.

MRS. MIRA MILLS, of Sardis, Big Stone Co., Minn., writes: "One year ago I was given up by my family physician and friends; all said I must die. It was not long before I became well enough to take charge of my household duties again.

CORLEY—JAMES CORLEY was born March 17, 1821, and died at his home near Gallman, Copiah county, Miss., July 29, 1894.

A great and good man has fallen. He was one of the oldest and most respected citizens of this county, and a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He gave his heart to God in his eighteenth year, and was faithful till death. A man of unblemished and beautiful character has been gathered to his fathers. He was modest and unassuming; one of the most unostentatious Christians I ever knew. He was never known to speak a word that was calculated to harm a living being. His life was a constant comment on his religion. He was a great friend to the ministry; his death comes to me as a sore, personal bereavement; and many a tired preacher has met a hearty welcome and found a pleasant place to rest at his comfortable home. He was a good neighbor. Very few men have lived so long in one community and had the good will of all. The great company of people who attended his funeral and followed him to the grave bore testimony to the esteem in which he was held, and to his worth. He was a perfect and upright man—one that feared God and hated evil. He loved the church and was untiring in his efforts to advance its interest. His place will be hard to fill. But our loss is his gain. With grief-torn hearts and tender tears we bade farewell to his pure and gentle spirit, when in the quiet of the Sabbath evening God, with infinite love, called him to the heavenly home.

It would be difficult for anyone to exemplify more beautifully the Christian grace than did Bro. Corley. He was so gentle, so charitable, so kind, and so sweet spirited, that all recognised him as a man full of the Holy Ghost and faith. His last illness was protracted, but he bore it with characteristic patience and fortitude. His sickness was of such a nature as to prevent him from talking much, but this was not necessary; we have his life.

He leaves a wife, nine children, thirty-seven grandchildren to mourn their loss. A modest Christian, a devoted husband, fond father and a pure man has gone from us. Let us cherish his memory and emulate his spirit. We laid him away in the Gallman Cemetery in full hope of the resurrection. W. W. MORSE.

HUDGINS—On Aug. 14 death called at the home of dear Bro. Hudgins and claimed as its subject DAISY, a sweet, precious Christian daughter. She was born Aug. 27, 1879, and professed faith in Christ at the age of eight years.

Daisy was quite young when she received a consciousness of her pardon. Her daily conduct at home and abroad testified to her profession. She loved her parents and little brothers and sisters. She proved her love to them by obeying them. Her love to her brothers and sisters was shown often by reading the Holy Bible to them and kneeling and invoking God's blessings upon them. She loved and was loved by her school-mates and associates. She loved her pastors, and seemed to be perfectly free with them. This, I suppose was owing to the fact that her grandfather, J. E. Hudgins, who preceded her to rest about six months, was a preacher in our church. She had been principally raised under his care.

Daisy's life on earth was short, but it is full of precious fruit. Her sweet voice has hushed on earth in singing the sweet songs she so much delighted to sing. She has crossed the river and joined with the redeemed in ascribing praise to God, the Father.

Weep not, parents, as those who have no hope. Daisy has only crossed the river and is resting under the shade of the tree.

MILES—HEZEKIAH MILES was born in Georgia about the year 1809, moved to this country with his father when quite a boy. About the year 1852 he married Mary Batson (who died four years ago), and died June 21, 1894.

He was a very remarkable man in several particulars. In his early days this was a frontier country, filled with Indians, wild animals and game, with but few settlers and no schools. He was, therefore, deprived of the benefits of an early education; but God had endowed him with an almost iron constitution, a clear mind and good common sense and judgment. His views on business matters and the affairs of this life generally proved to be correct. He was the father of fourteen children, had ninety-eight grandchildren, sixty-five great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild—in all, one hundred and seventy-eight. Out of this large number only ten are dead, viz: three children, four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. All of his offspring who have reached years of maturity are members of some evangelical church. He and his wife were strong Methodists, he being for many years a steward of the church in North Harrison county, which was then missionary ground; and as the missionaries—Applewhite, Willis, Bond, Gregory, Sample, Lewis, Young, and others—would make their long rounds on the circuit, preaching six days each week, they would spend their "rest day" in his home.

He was a great lover of preachers and the preached word and seeing faith, and claimed a full and free salvation through Jesus. No one who saw him stand up in class or testimony meeting, with an honest face, tearful eyes and a beaming countenance, ever doubted that he was saved.

He was widely known and loved in this county and a very charitable man. A neighbor remarked to the writer, a few days ago, that he must have left away a fortune to other people.

His last illness lasted but twenty days, and when it was known that Uncle Kieb (as he was called), the oldest man in the county, was sick unto death, people of all classes, some from great distances, would come to see and talk with him. Even the colored people loved him, and a short time before his death, one of the most influential colored men in the county came and asked permission to see him, and as he stood over his dying form wept bitterly. In his last sickness his mind was perfectly clear, and, conscious of his condition, he was cheerful, ready to talk to anyone, and not in the least excited; so much so that all noticed it. In his last moments he gave directions concerning his business, spoke words with those around him and died in great peace, full of hope of the "glory of God" and the life that is to come.

WILLIAMS—Sister MARTHA JANE WILLIAMS, (nee Lindsey) was born Dec. 11, 1836; was twice married, and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus at her home near Clarksburg, Miss., July 21, 1894. On Sunday, July 22, amid the mourns of a large concourse of almost heart-broken friends and relatives, we laid her to rest to await the resurrection of the just. Sister Williams joined the M. E. Church, South, when about twenty years of age, and lived a consistent Christian until death. Her faith in her blessed Savior was steadfast, her devotion to her church was true.

For several years preceding her death she was a constant sufferer, almost an invalid, but she bore her pain with Christian resignation, and lived in daily readiness for the Master's summons to "come up higher." Her death was a triumphant one. She sent for me only a few days before her departure. Never will I forget what I witnessed at the bedside of that dying saint. So resigned to God's will! So willing—yea, almost anxious to go! She said she was going to heaven, and carried with her the promise of her loved ones to meet her there. She leaves a husband and nine children; but, thank God, the separation won't be long, for they are all, except one (the youngest child) members of the church, earnest, happy Christians and on their way to heaven to join their loved one where parting will be no more.

PAUL D. HARDIN, Pastor.

LIPSCOMB—GRADY LIPSCOMB, infant son of Mr. J. E. and Mrs. S. V. Lipscomb, was born in East Feliciana parish, La., Dec. 15, 1893, and died Sept 12, 1894.

Little Grady took his flight forever from this world to a brighter one—this sweet little babe, the joy and pride of a mother's love, and of a father's affections. Little Grady lacked only three days of being nine months old. For ten days this little darling suffered intense pain. Oh! how hard it is to give up our loved ones, but how sweet to know that some bright day that we will meet this sweet little babe nevermore to part!

Weep not, dear parents, for the loss of your darling one; one less on earth, but one more bright angel in heaven. Little Grady is waiting and watching for mama and papa, brothers and loved ones on the other shore. To-day little Grady is around the throne of God in heaven. May God help the dear parents to sorrow not for their darling one; that they will some day meet their darling little Grady in the sweet by-and-by.

Father! forgive the heart that clings
Thus trembling to the things of time,
And bid my soul, on angels' wings,
Ascend into a purer clime.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

"If ye love me ye will keep my commandments." This is the very best test in the world. It's scientific too.

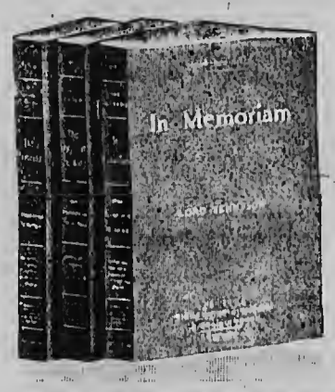
LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,
IN MEMORIAM,
IDYLLS OF THE KING,
THE PRINCESS.



Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.
The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the youth mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to the Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the art motive of giving utterance, in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.
"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by much imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.
Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.
Publisher's price, twenty-five cents each. Given as a premium to every new subscriber. Also to every old subscriber who pays to January '96. Hon. H. Dudley Coleman is the candidate of the Republicans and sugar planters in the Second Congressional District.

The Southern Female College, a Cumberland Presbyterian institution, just established at West Point, Miss., opened a few days since with an enrollment of about two hundred.

Gen. A. M. West, a prominent figure in Mississippi politics for fifty years, died at Holly Springs on the thirtieth. He was a man of ability and of unblemished reputation. He was a thorough Methodist.

Dr. Rudolph Matas has been appointed to succeed Dr. Miles, deceased, as professor of surgery in the Tulane College. The faculty elected him for the coming session only, but it is generally believed that he will eventually secure the permanent appointment.

Florida suffered severely last week on account of the cyclone which raged in that State. Tampa, Fernandina, Palatka, St. Augustine, Key West and other places suffered much damage. Many vessels were sunk, houses wrecked and crops destroyed, but no lives are reported lost. The storm has cost Florida over $1,000,000.

The Tradesman, in its quarterly report for three months ending Sept. 20, 1894, of new industries established in the Southern States, reports that 520 industries were incorporated and organized in the South in the period named, against 454 in the third quarter of 1893, 597 in the third quarter of 1892, and 759 in the third quarter of 1891.

The Chinese government, after a delay of more than a month, has finally ratified the treaty with the United States providing for the deporting of Chinese laborers from this country, and recognizing the validity of the Geary law. Official announcement of this action has been withheld under circumstances mystifying to the State Department.

At Pineapple, Ark., Sept. 16, a negro convention was held to discuss the question of migrating to Liberia. The result was a committee of reputable colored ministers was appointed to go to that country and investigate its advantages and draw up a contract with its ruler. Word was also received from the president of the International Migration Society of Birmingham that the society has chartered a steamship, which will sail from Mobile and New Orleans early in October for Liberia.

FOREIGN.

Mr. Gladstone is out in a letter, affirming his adhesion to local option, though he says he hoped further steps might have been taken to cope with the frightful evils of drink. This letter from the ex-premier has restored the equanimity of the temperance party, the organs of which advocated the issuance of an ultimatum by the government on the subject.

The Chinese naval officers at Port Arthur and Tien Tsin are squabbling among themselves as to the responsibility of the terrible Chinese losses in the naval battle off the Yalu. A court of inquiry is sitting and has already found Captain Ting, of the warship Ting Yuen, guilty of cowardice. He was condemned to be beheaded, and it is believed that other officers will lose their heads.

Fighting has broken out again in the province of Rio Grande do Sul between the rebels and government troops at four different points, and the insurgents are getting the better of it. They have arms and ammunition, and declare that they will fight to the bitter end. In all the frontier towns the people are joining the revolters, and the affair seems to be a reopening of the war.

At the present moment the health of the Czar of Russia is the leading matter of interest in Europe. Although there is no reliable information as to the exact character of the Czar's illness, it is generally believed in most of the European capitals that the Emperor has but a short time to live and that the nature of his malady is such that he might be carried off suddenly.

Real Faith never grows weak by having to wait. Sufferers taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for chronic complaints should be patient and the result will be satisfactory. Hood's Cures.

A dispatch from Shanghai says it is reported that the Japanese have succeeded in entering the Chinese province of Manchuria, and that they are advancing upon the capital Monkden. It is also said that fighting has also taken place between the invaders and the Chinese at a town between that city and the frontier. The engagement is said to have ended in a decisive victory for the Japanese.

For Debility

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. W. H. HOLCOMBE, New Orleans, La., says: "I have found it particularly serviceable in treatment of women and children, for debility and loss of appetite."

The imperial generosity of the Chinese Emperor was characteristically displayed last month. It was deemed politic to reward the extraordinary valor of General Teh and his army, who, it is stated, slew no less than 5,000 Japanese from July 25 to the end of August. The general received accordingly gifts consisting of a gem peacock feather holder and a pair of large purses. The common soldiers were by no means overlooked.

You'll Miss It,

if you try to get along without Pearline. The work of washing will be harder, there'll be more of it, and it won't be as well done. You'll lose money in the time that's wasted, and the things that are worn out in the wretched rub, rub, rub, over the washboard. Easy washing with Pearline doesn't cost any more than hard and ruinous washing without it. But it saves a good deal, all the way through.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 376 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

How to Get Good Teachers.

School Boards, College Trustees, or anyone else desiring competent teachers for any department of school or college work, can obtain the names of such teachers free by addressing Prof. J. M. Dewberry, Manager of the School Agency, Montgomery, Ala., stating what position is to be filled, the kind of teacher desired, and the pay. It deals with white teachers and white schools only. No teacher is enrolled who does not show scholarship, teaching ability and good character. This agency recommends teachers to schools, colleges and families, in every Southern and Southwestern State. Competent first grade white teachers, desiring the aid of such an agency, are invited to write for circulars.

Not "What," But "How."

Is the suggestive motto of "METHOD," the most unique and valuable magazine for Christian Workers published. It is the only periodical on earth devoted exclusively to the discussion of "METHODS OF CHURCH WORK." Leaving others to discuss what is needed and why, "METHOD" tells HOW THE WORK IS TO BE DONE. October number, Vol. 2, No. 1, now in press, will be conveniently arranged in "Departments:" (1) "How to Make a Working Church," (2) "Sabbath Services, Prayer Meetings, Socials, etc.," (3) "Revivals," (4) "The Children," (5) "The 'How' of Sunday-school Work," (6) "The Epworth League, Methods and Plans," (7) "Woman's Work," (8) "How to Raise Church Funds," (9) "Bible Study," etc., etc. Our space forbids more than this general outline of contents. In each department there will be valuable articles, all having to do with the "How;" giving the best methods and plans, with illustrations, plates of printed forms, programs, special services, etc. Published quarterly, 60 cents per year. Edited by Rev. W. F. Cook, D. D., and Rev. Ellison R. Cook, assisted by a corps of successful workers.

Special offers to readers of this paper:

(1) For 60 cents we will send "METHOD" one year, and a copy of "PERSONAL WORK HOW ORGANIZED AND ACCOMPLISHED." Revised and enlarged edition, 64 pages of method and studies. Worth its weight in gold to anyone who wishes to do personal work.

(2) For 89 cents we will send "METHOD" one year, and a copy of that wonderful book, "TOUCHING INCIDENTS AND REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER." Theme for Prayer Meeting.

GOD'S GIFTS TO BELIEVERS.

(Job xxxv, 10; Ps. cxix, 130; John xiv, 27; 1. Tim. vi, 17.)

Songs in the night! One song in the night was the sweetest of all. 'Twas that of the angels, announcing the incarnation of Christ, charmingly chanting: "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, and good-will to men." It is because of this song that God gives songs in the night.

1. God gives songs in the night of repentance. Dark the head and heart. Dark the past, present, future. Outer darkness in waiting. Nameless sorrow fills the bosom. Incipient despair knocks at the heart's door. Wretched man that I am! But, hark: Behold the Lamb of God. He looks. Sees at first "men as trees walking." Soon the Sun of Righteousness arises with healing in his wings. He is comforted. Sins forgiven. Renewed in spirit—a new creature. Hallelujah! Praise the Lord!

2. God gives songs in the night of afflictions. It may be poverty, dire want oppressing. It may be sickness. Like Lazarus, suffering much. It may be waywardness of children. Offspring forging nails for the parent's coffin. It may be betrayal of friends. Confidence abused. But God is not like them, untrue. He simply means to wean us away from the world. These comparatively light afflictions prove beneficial to us. God comforts and cheers. The Master is with us in the ship. It will not go to wreck. Soon he will bid the wind and sea to be still.

3. God gives songs in the night of death. Said Tell, while lying in wait for Gessler: "Through this hollow way he'll surely come." The hollow way to the grave none can avoid. It is appointed unto men once to die. Our fathers, where are they? Of us it will soon be said, that we had died. When vision fails, the pulse grows weaker, extremities cold, the chilled waters of the river of death filling our loved ones with terror, grief expressed in the countenance of all friends at the bedside—hark! the dying saint is singing:

"..... Welcome the tomb!
Since Jesus had lain there, I mind not its gloom."

Good Men Profitably Employed.

"Yes, sir, we have a number of grand, good men working for us, and they are making money, too, doing better for themselves than they could in any other line." That is about the way Mr. B. F. Johnson of the firm of B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., stated the case in referring to their advertisement for representatives to devote all or part of their time in the interest of their business.

BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

y last letter was from Arima, in the ntains. This is from Kobe, the nd shipping port of Japan, and the quarters of our Southern Method- Mission. What a joy to see scales fall lind eyes, and to hear dumb lips to praise the Great Healer and ner! A happier company I have n outside a Methodist Annual ence down South.

otioing a Japanese carpenter at e other day, I was reminded by brother of the many things eople do just the opposite from ans. To give a few may inter- readers of the Advocate. They e plane and push the drawing-knife; they build the roof of a house first, and count cattle by their tails—so many tails, not head, of cattle; they put a horse's head to the opening of the stall; they write up and down, and from right to left; on the roads they turn to the left; they hang up fish by the tail, and chickens by the head; they laugh at funerals, and take a lantern to a fire; they put a man's title after his name, and the given name always follows the surname, etc. The list could be extended indefinitely. What contrary people we Americans must be!

The intense nationalism of the Japanese—or patriotism, as they prefer to call it—is finding ample and ardent expression in the war now raging. Indeed, there are outcroppings, some think, of an aggressive "jingoism." This national pride takes the form of anti-foreignism also, more or less positive and prominent throughout the empire. It finds easy way into the churches, and assumes control of ecclesiastical affairs. To the great credit of our brethren and our church polity, by far the best for pioneer and missionary fields, we have had no difficulty. But from quite a number, including a member of the body, I heard of a very suggestive incident at the recent Presbyterian Synod of Japan. A native preacher of ability and culture wrote a book. Some statements of fact therein, though not controverted, were considered as reflections upon his own people; so the Synod, by a large majority-vote, formally deposed him from the ministry. There were no complaints against his moral character, no charges of heresy, no offending against church law. The head and front of his offending was publishing to foreigners facts which would undervalue his people.

I came down from Arima early Wednesday morning, in order to attend the closing exercises of the "Young Ladies' Industrial School"—an institution projected and conducted by Mrs. M. I. Lambuth until her return to America last year. Not specially desiring another ride in a ka-go, I returned by jinriksha on another road, with two coolies working tandem. When the descent was steep, the one in the lead stepped to the shafts and assisted in holding back. The fifteen miles of picturesque road along the banks of beautiful streams and by green rice fields, with wooded mountains on either side, was traversed in a little over three hours. We made short stops at two or three tea stands, and the men came trotting into Kobe as fresh and frisky as "a two-year-old" Kentucky thoroughbred. Wonderful endurance have these coolies, and as happy always as the merry-hearted children in their narrow streets.

The school exercises were well under way when I arrived, and Bro. Yoshioko was delivering the annual address. I left my shoes at the door with many other pairs of curious footwear, and joined the audience in the upper room. There were six graduates—nice-looking girls, tastefully and modestly dressed. I am promised a translation of the valedictory essay for the Advocate. The ceremony of awarding the diplomas was rather elaborate, but to me very attractive and beautiful. The faces and manners of those girls told more eloquently than words the blessed influence of Christian training upon them. In response to invitation, I made a short address, and when Mrs. Lambuth's name was mentioned, and the fact that I had recently seen her, and that she purposed soon to return, there were many bright smiles and happy hearts. After tea and cakes—barley tea and cakes that look and taste like candy—we went down into other rooms to inspect specimens of work done by the girls. All kinds of practical and fancy needlework were displayed, and other things that indicated they were being fitted for home-keepers—the greatest need of the Japanese. I was much delighted with the school, and felt assured it was filling a felt want. How much we need a building to meet its growing demands! I most heartily second any appeal Mrs. Lambuth may make in its behalf.

In the early afternoon I went to our church to attend a Japanese Quarterly Conference. The building is a neat frame structure, 30x48 feet, lighted with electricity, and tastefully, but plainly furnished. The walls bore traces of the earthquake, which shook this section a year or two ago. In a frame, hung against the wall near the front door, I noticed a number of small wooden pieces, with Japanese hieroglyphics on them. They contain the names of the church members; that was the church register, the class book, in full view of all who chose to enter or worship. It meant something to me—they are not ashamed to be recorded among God's people, and they want to see the names of all those to whom they sustain the new filial relation. Another curious little device interested me, called the Sunday-school thermometer. I wondered that a certain Sunday-school friend in Memphis, Tenn., had not anticipated it. By pulling a string the red fluid rises or falls, thus indicating the attendance or other sign of progress each Sabbath.

The business of the Quarterly Conference was in every respect like one at home, except the unknown tongues of the talkers and the peculiar features of some of the members. The reports of the pastors, as interpreted to me, were most cheering. One reported a revival—a genuine revival—with over twenty conversions. Eight had been received on profession of faith in the Kobe Church. The meetings held in the neighboring villages have been largely attended lately and accompanied by the power of the Holy Ghost. One town, some seven miles away, is served by a resident local preacher, who is also the postmaster and telegraphic operator. It was thrilling to hear his story of Buddhist opposition, and how it had turned out to the furtherance of the gospel. With unquestioning faith and undimmed hope he looks for the Lord Christ to take that town and the whole Empire. Of certain difficulties in the way of speedy progress at present and different phases of church work as brought out there and in the Annual Conference, I shall write later and more at length.

Just as we were coming out of the church a Japanese funeral procession passed by. It was somewhat gorgeous, but utterly lacking in solemnity. Possibly a dozen men walked in double column bearing great trees of evergreen; these were followed by as many more carrying flowers and cakes; then came the Buddhist priest in a jinriksha; he was followed by four men carrying the coffin, covered with gay-colored cloth, on their shoulders; behind the coffin came a double jinriksha with a woman and two children, and she was followed by a company of pedestrians. Whether the body was being borne to a cemetery or crematory I did not learn. There were no signs of grief on any face. The Buddhist religion crucifies the feelings, but never changes a heart. Poor, poor mother! following her child to the tomb or the oven without a hope for the future or a balm for present sorrow!

The Conference met this morning in our college building, the Kwansei Gakuin, near Kobe, with a full attendance of foreign and native preachers and several lay delegates. Of its proceedings, and the work of the mission in general, I will write in my next letter. I hope to get mail from America within the next two days. Have heard not a word since we sailed from Vancouver, July 16.

Correspondence.

Georgia Letter.

Dr. J. O. A. Clarke, presiding elder of the Macon district, has passed from us. He died last week, aged sixty-eight years. I could not think he was so old. There had been no decline in his mental energies, and he had planned for years of hard work. The terrible grippe seized him last Winter, as it had done the Winter before, and he was not the same after it left him. He had other troubles, and at our last District Conference we urged him to take a vacation. He, however, refused, and said he would soon rally; but he grew worse, and after being stricken twice with paralysis, he passed away. Guileless as a child, confiding, transparent, he was as pure a man, in the main, as I ever knew. He was the most erudite man among us. He graduated at Brown University, studied law, and was genuinely converted in a great revival in Savannah in 1854. He laid aside his law books and entered the ministry, and never abated his zeal from the beginning. He was one of the most enterprising men among us, always planning something ahead. He has left as many monuments of self-denying toil behind him as any man I know.

No one has been in the North Georgia Conference for the last sixty years who has not known Bro. Walter R. Branham. He was our Nestor, a man of the most saintly character, and the best-loved man I ever knew. A graduate of the State University, the heir of a large property, he had nothing to lead him into the Methodist ministry but a desire to do good. He was very unambitious, very meek, and withal a really strong man intellectually. He lived among us eighty-one years, and passed from us the other day. A few weeks ago I met him at a District Conference, and we had a pleasant interview. Thus my old friends drop from my side. I have never yet felt as if I was an old man, and I am a little amused when I hear myself alluded to as "the old gentleman;" but of those who began their ministry with me, there are not many now left—only one—in regular work of my class.

I am glad to tell the editor that his old charge in Macon is still vigorous. The question of changing the location of the church has been settled, and the Mulberry Street Church will remain where it has been for sixty years, and more. The new Sunday-school room will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks.

I have just passed through the press my new story for young folks, "The Boy in Gray—a Story of the War." It is a 12 mo. of 275 pages, and is full of incidents. I think our boys and girls will like it. I hope to have it ready for delivery Oct. 1. I should be glad to have some of the bright girls and boys among your readers to act as agents for it, and will give them a good commission. I will send it to any of your readers for one dollar, post free; and the old soldiers like myself, who want their boys to know something of what we endured, will, I think, enjoy this simple recital.

There is little church news in Georgia. We are having a political campaign, but the strife between Judge Hines, the Populist, and Mr. Atkinson, the Democrat, is far less bitter than it was between the two Democrats, Evans and Atkinson. There is, however, a want of religious fervor in our meetings, in sad contrast with the earnestness of past years. I am afraid discussions of the second blessing are not calculated to advance the piety of either party, and we are suffering somewhat from the result of them. I see you took no part in the fight about orders and offices. It was the most striking exhibit of the contest of the old knights about the gold and silver shield I have ever known. "Massa and I had a great spatiation. Massa say squashes and pumpkins grow best on sandy ground, and I say sandy ground is best for squashes and pumpkins, and we sputes and sputes." The idea of a Methodist who has no other basis for his orders than the will of his church expressed a hundred years ago, and who ought to be as little concerned about whose hands were laid on his head, as a Baptist or a Quaker posing as a High Churchman; like a Roman Catholic, who traces his orders back to St. Peter, and fully believes without the Bishop there is no priest, and without the priest there is no sacraments, and without the sacraments there is no salvation, is sufficiently ridiculous for any demand. I am sure there are no High-Church Methodists among us when we find out what is meant by the term. There are those of us who believe that Bishop Asbury would have been a genuine Bishop after he was elected by his brethren, even though Thomas Coke had not put foot in America, and there had been neither elder nor deacon to ordain him. They believe that these preachers had a right to make deacons and elders and Bishops, and that these elect ones were as veritably in orders as though all the Popes in Christendom ordained them.

One thing, however, amazes me. It is to see how tamely the preachers in the Conferences submit to having their rights ignored in theory, if not in fact. From the tone of certain leading men in the councils, the Conferences are simply courts. In the North, as far as I can see, the individual Conference is about the most insignificant thing in church councils. The General Conference and the Official Board are the only ruling powers. The Bishops are ministed, the Annual Conferences ignored, and the presiding elder is nowhere. We are moving in the same direction, and a few leading men will be the oligarchy who control, unless the Annual Conferences wake up. There is always a sentiment created before an innovation is made, and the effort on the part of some of the brightest young men in the church to centralize everything bodes no good. Methodism is connectional all over, but a good government can not be secured when the delegations from Conferences with a few thousand constituents can out-vote the representatives of such Conferences as the North Georgia or Virginia.

Home rule is absolutely demanded to secure good government. Too much is left to those who are in control. We must have a break against the power of the General Conference, and one based on other grounds than unconstitutionality, or we are going to have trouble. I know very well that any man who raises the red flag will flood himself in disfavor. I do not like the trend, and I honestly say so. It is painful for me to differ with some I love much, but I can not do otherwise. It is not jealousy of the Bishops. They are generally as considerate as they can be. It is, in fact, nothing now but a sentiment that I am combatting, and that sentiment has grown in the North to almost the wiping out of Conference lines, and is growing among us, until we, too, will be powerless. If the Conferences had known the character of the concession, they would never have put it in the power of the General Conference to change the ratio of representation as they did; but it has now gone too far, and a Conference of 100 working members can only have two clerical members, while one of six members can have one. In the North it has gone farther, and the representation is one in 60. When the delegated Conference was provided for, it was one in 5. We must have, as the rank and file demand, from the General Conference a larger liberty in making laws to guard our special interests. We are sacrificing real interests to an abstraction, and that is, that Methodism is a unit.

GEO G. SMITH.

To the Methodists of Louisiana.

Being at the head of the only college for boys which you have in the State, I deem it a duty and esteem it a privilege to inform you of the condition of things in and about the school. Though we have been at work only about a month, the register shows a larger number of matriculates than at any time during the last session. This ought to be both gratifying and encouraging. Our students, in the main, are representative of the very best families of the State. So far the progress in work has been good, and the deportment generally satisfactory. Nearly or quite one-half of our boys are members of the church, and the larger number of church members belong to our church. The Young Men's Christian Association is in a flourishing condition, doing fine work along its special lines. There has been some few cases of malarial fever, but, as a rule, they have yielded to the physician's remedies.

Our grounds and buildings do not present the appearance they ought and they will not unless you give us assistance in that direction. The college is yours, and you must keep it in order. If each one of you will help us by even a small contribution, when you come to see us next commencement we will show you grounds and buildings that will both delight and astonish you.

I wish to commend to you the agent of the college, Prof. C. C. Wier, who is engaged in active work in the field for the purpose of building up your school. He is your agent and has a right to expect your hearty co-operation. When he comes to your town or neighborhood, show him that you know what Christian hospitality means. Give him all the assistance possible, and do it with a cheerful spirit. Prof. Wier is also the financial agent of the college, and is authorized to collect the interest on our endowment notes and other money for the benefit of the college. I hope that you will not forget that the living of our professors depends upon the payment of the interest of the endowment notes. Those of you who have given these notes ought not to wait until Prof. Wier comes round, but send the interest right away to Prof. Wiley, the treasurer. Much of this interest is now overdue and is much needed. If you put off attending to this matter, you will cripple your only school for your boys. That is a thing you can not afford to do. I beseech you, in the name of the young men of our church, not to think of such a course for one minute. Now, brethren and sisters, right now we need what is due us.

Thanking you for the interest you are manifesting in us and our work for your sons, I am your servant in the Lord's work of Christian education.

C. W. CARTER, President.

Missions.

The missionary operations of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, cover five distinct fields under control of the connectional Board of Missions. These fields are China, Japan, Mexico, Brazil and various points within the limits of the United States. The four foreign fields are served by fifty-eight men sent out by our Board, besides thirty-three women supported by the Woman's Board. In the home field are thirty-seven men maintained by the Board, and four women by the Woman's Board. Here there are 132 men and women who have given their lives and labors to bring salvation to the destitute regions beyond. They are trying to fulfill the great commission. They move under the order of Christ. They are our own kin and fellow-countrymen. Our church has accepted and sent them. The divine author for this is as distinct as the civil authority for building railroads or collecting taxes or coining money.

Will anyone say how else than to send these missionaries we are to give this gospel to the world? They, then, are our representatives. Every member of the church is embraced in this act of the church. The missionaries speak not only for themselves, but for us also. Each one of us—man, woman and child—who is a voluntary member of the church, has bound himself to God and man to support missions; that is, to endorse the work itself; to send out those who are suitable and will go to occupy the chosen field, and to give all the time and money needed to support these workers. I know of no other view to take of our relations to Christ and his church. An anti-mission Methodist is a contradiction.

Now, here are 133 crying to us from the dense darkness, and the sweeping death around them, to give them the material help they need to prosecute the work we ourselves have sent them to do. Can any man or woman in the church withhold his part, however small? Can anyone fail to see that if he does not give to missions his part, he has turned his back upon the one great enterprise which Christ has committed to the care of his people? Can any one afford to be lacking here? It is a test of his sincerity, his faith, his love. Southern Methodism ought to contribute $500,000 a year—this year—to foreign missions. That would be less than fifty cents a member. Very few are so poor that they can not give that mite to give the world the light of the gospel. The great majority can give much more. It is not lack of means, but of a willing mind, that keeps our missionary treasury so low and operations so cramped.

In the Living Present.

Principle! Yes, a word mostly for parade purposes. As a matter of fact, self interest dominates. Because our new tariff injures our sugar planters pecuniarily, they forthwith turn their backs on former party associations and join the ranks of the opposition—from principle, you know. From principle the governor of Louisiana dismissed one of those recalcitrant planters from an office which he had satisfactorily filled. Principle!

What shall we do with the anarchists? A conservative anarchist is on a par with a rampant socialist. France has recourse to the guillotine; Italy transports them to Isobea; Russia, to Siberia. The United States and a few other governments tolerate them, punishing only overt infractions of the law. The recent riots in Illinois, California, etc., prove that we have a large number of social revolutionists in our midst. When on the eve of the battle of Borodina the prefect of Rouen informed Napoleon that anarchistic elements were creating disturbances in his city, the Corsican replied: "Arrest and ship them as reinforcement to my army. I need men who are eager for carnage."

The postmaster of Chicago, Washington Hesing, desirous to carry out postoffice regulations, determined to inspect the letter carriers. He appointed a Sunday for said inspection. But to this the preachers of the Windy City objected, and applied to the authorities in Washington for relief. It would be flagrant Sabbath desecration to hold such inspection on Sunday. The postoffice authorities replied by permitting the inspection to be held on a Sunday evening. Wanamaker would not have permitted this insult of a Christian community.

The radicals in England are anxious to abolish the House of Lords. They threaten to abandon the Liberal party, thus politically decapitating Lord Rosebery as premier, if their design is not placed on the party program. We presume that their design will miscarry. British affairs require the breakwater afforded by the House of Lords. Just as we in our country need the United States Senate to curb the turbulent measures of the hotspurs in the House of Representatives. In Germany the House of Lords (Reichsrath) refused to consent to the increase of the House of Representatives (Reichstag), which permitted the Jesuits to return to Germany. ICH DIEN.

WHY FRET?

Why fret if to-day is not as bright
As some days have been before?
If the sno be hidden and rain clouds pour,
And the wind is heavy with frost and blight?
To-morrow, perhaps, will be fair and warm,
With never a thought of cloud or storm.

Why fret if to-night the sky is black
And the hours watch over a starless waste?
That the moon went down in sullen haste?
That the wind is walking its ghostly track?
Other nights shall come when this is gone,
That shall be as sweet as a Summer's dawn.

Why fret if the garden you sowed and tilled,
Shall lack some flower you loved the best?
When living and thriving blooms all the rest?
And prophecies fair were each fulfilled?
Why fret for this one? Next year or next
It may be forgotten; then why be vexed?

Why fret if a friend forget a trust?
Or fret though another be false and base,
Or fret if under a saintly face
Is hidden the secret of greed and lust?
Why fret—aside from the wrong in life,
The world with a gracious good is rife.

Why fret if you have done your best,
With steady hand and upright heart
To DO YOUR BEST in life your part?
Leave, then, to God the unfolshed rest,
Why fret we now for things we miss,
When heaven is wailing crowned with bliss?

How It Strikes a Stranger.

MY TRIP TO MONTEAGLE.

MR. EDITOR: I paused to give myself and your readers breath at Chattanooga. Lookout Mountain having a softer view and more breeze, I ascended it by the zigzag railroad. The train, with two hundred, or more, excursionists, climbed the mountain like a goat, or circled round like a bird, approaching the summit in an opposite direction from its basal starting-point. So much has been written of "Lookout," its war history—"battle among the clouds," etc.—its unrivalled prospect, overlooking six States (and in very clear weather seven—old Kentucky at Cumberland Gap), its splendidly kept "inn," etc., that I forbear to linger here. The descent on an "incline" at forty-five degrees was quite exhilarating. Seated in a finely equipped vestibuled train of the M. C. and St. L. railway on that bright and warm Summer afternoon, we sped away among the Cumberlands for some time, following the valley separating Lookout from Sand Mountain, and then into unknown depths of mountain gorge and under towering steeps. For thirty miles, or more, the bright Tennessee lay to our right, northeastward. Often the train ran for miles near its brink. The valleys covered over with corn in full flower and fruitage, the green meadow, the close-knit foliage of the mountain-sides, feasted the eye on every side. At one point, looking across the river toward South Pittsburg, the reach of vision up the narrow vale is bounded only by the power of sight. The Sequachie Valley is far-famed for its beautiful extension. I ceased not to wonder at the great variety of forest growth covering these mountains like a mantle; in appearance soft as velvet and green as emerald. Now and then a bold crag juts out to reconnoiter, while spread widely over the surface lie around, in boulders and slabs, the limestone and granite which seem to make up the solid foundation of these "everlasting hills." Mostly covered with lichen, they present a purplish gray surface, giving forth at a little distance an indescribable fascination to the eye. Our roadbed begins to cut through some of the spurs of the mighty monarchs of the Cumberland range. Presently a tunnel of two miles length brings us out on the northwestern slope of Sewanee Mountain. Then "all out for Monteagle," at the little town of Cowan. The mountain-road hence to Tracy City (a mining town at the north end of Sewanee) climbs the mountain in a most artistic style. A mixed train of thirty, or more, cars is propelled by one of those mighty engines of eight driving-wheel power, popularly known as "Mountain Goats." As we swept around from one spur to another, we could often see the full length of the train in horse-shoe form still climbing to higher heights at a heavy grade. The views from these heights down the valley toward Nashville are superb. We pass the town of Sewanee without time to see its university buildings and other chief attractions. We are now about 2,200 feet above sea level. Six miles further northward and Monteagle is reached. The assembly grounds are large, extending from the "Depot Village" to Warren's Point, more than half a mile, and embracing some hundreds of acres. Of this about one hundred acres are well enclosed. The amphitheater will seat two thousand, or more. It is well located for acoustic effect, and attractive to the eye, on a sloping hillside by "Jacob's Well." From this point the streets and cottages are ranged in something near fan-shape. On the crest of the slope is to be built very shortly the fine new hotel. This is not to encroach on the beautiful "mall" for tennis-playing, nor on the "Children's Temple," where "prayer is wont to be made." You have well told your readers of the Summer schools, and many of the recreations afforded here. I think you omitted the famous swimming-pool and bowling-alley. With nothing akin to betting allowed, these healthful and exhilarating sports can be indulged in at trifling cost and in perfect safety. The purpose is to make them more perfectly adapted to best results. The lectures continued interesting to the close of the assembly. Dr. Gilbert threw much light on Bible study. Dr. Shearer, of Birmingham, gave a striking talk on the need of reform in our English alphabet. He would have all the consonants named according to the sound they are to convey—e. g., the letter "F" has its sound reversed. It should be Fe in name as well as sound. On "W" he agrees with Sam Weller's father: "Spell it with a we, Samivel." (I wish his scheme abundant success, because sensible.) His system of diacritic notation is admirable.

The closing hour of the assembly was "a feast of reason and a flow of soul." Everybody seemed in love with Monteagle. I do not wonder. Here you can have the highest type of rustic-urban life. With all the conveniences of civilization and the benefits of best society, you still feel the inspiration of the forest primeval, and that you are worshiping in "God's first temples." The houses all nestle among the overhanging branches of trees of natural, but beautiful and ancient growth. In several ways this spot seems nearer heaven than common ground. Here the physical, mental and moral nature have amplest opportunity for development. The fellowship of Christians of every name is sweet and abiding, as little interrupted as anywhere in this world.

Such men as our noble J. R. Pepper, of Sunday-school celebrity, have planned a great addition for next year. They hope to complete a suitable building and inaugurate a Summer school for the better study of the Bible. May this succeed, and supply the only serious lack in this remarkable assembly—by pre-eminence "The Southern Chautauqua!" The sights and scenes within easy reach of these grounds, such as "Bragg's and Forrest's Points," "Cooley's Rift," "Fern Cave," "Bridal Veil Falls," are all worthy of going far to see. A visit to the convict camp, coal mines and coke furnaces at Tracy City was an experience much more than worth the trifling cost, especially in such choice company as this and other excursions were taken. If you doubt it, ask Bros. J. W. McLaurin and Henry Carre. When I tell of the wonderful scene we beheld from Forrest Point, let it not invalidate my other faithful records. Loyalty to truth requires me to say that we beheld a wondrous mirage. Near sunset, as Apollo was driving rapidly toward his nightly repose, we saw, scattered all over the western horizon, many pictures in negative of the full-orbed sun. They were exact counterparts in apparent size, but dark purple, or gray, in color. We did not count the pictures, but they must have numbered thirty, or more, and spread away round to the northwestern horizon, some of them at an elevation of thirty-five degrees.

Aside from this phenomenon, utterly new to me, the views from this and other points near by are enough to kindle poetic fire in the most prosaic breast. The rugged cliffs and smoothlying vales beneath are beautiful enough; but when the gaze is fixed on similar sights thirty or forty miles away—all bathed in the radiant glow of golden sunset and purple-rimmed cloud where these unequal peaks seem to mix and melt into the horizon—one can realize the oft-quoted lines,

"Distance lends enchantment to the view,
And robes the mountain in its azure hue."

You can almost hear the voice of angels singing "from the bright world far away." I did not intend to "drop into poetry," but 'tis hard to hold in the muses on such a Parnassus.

I failed in my desire to hold conversation with a genuine mountaineer; but I heard from the lowlanders occasionally. These supply marketing to the assembly folk. Some of them have quaint and patriotic reminiscences of the war, specially of the famous retreat of Bragg from Tullahoma, the battle of Elk River, the ascent of the mountainside, and blowing up the road to check Rosecrans' advance, while Forrest "played on him" from his exalted point. These memories will live longer than the beautiful growth of Sweet Fern Cave, which lies in peace where war's rude thunder once reverberated.

But to return to the assembly. It is matter of satisfaction that since the presidency of our Mississippi brother, R. W. Millsaps, the organization has freed itself from debt, and is now on the highway of prosperity. All its profits go back into improvements. No individual is to be enriched, but a whole people to be blessed with the beneficent influences of a really Christian summer resort. J. P. DRAKE.

Goodness expands the heart, and makes it humble. The larger, the better, the nobler your heart is, the more you will be inclined to make allowance for others, and the more you will say and feel, "God be merciful to me, a sinner!"—Robertson.

The Carradine Meeting at Natchez, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Carradine closed a two weeks' holiness meeting at the Jefferson Street Church last Friday night. From a second-blessing standpoint the meeting was a success. That some good was done, I believe; but whether the good will countervail the damage or not, God alone knows. That some souls were converted and some backsliders reclaimed, I also believe. That anyone of them experienced a different blessing from that felt by every truly regenerate heart, I know is not true. The only difference is in the name selected for the child. In fact, I asked two or three of them to tell me the difference between the sensations in regeneration and sanctification (so called), and none of them could define it, while Dr. Carradine insists that sensation is entirely different—no similarity between them!

Now, there is something wrong somewhere! Either these people are not sanctified, and may go astray, or else Bro. Carradine is in error in his statement of the effect of complete sanctification. In my opinion, both are mistaken; Bro. Carradine in supposing that God Almighty does his work by halves, and his converts in supposing that they have got something outside of regeneration. I attended almost every service, and with a mind unprejudiced, for I loved, and still love, Bro. Carradine most dearly, and gave the closest attention to all he had to say, but came out at the end untouched by his eloquence and firm in the belief that my God does his work thoroughly and well and at one time.

That evil will result from Bro. Carradine's peculiar teachings is too apparent for anyone not to see it, and see it plainly. In one of his sermons he took the position that the hundred and forty and four thousand who stood with the Lamb upon the Mount Zion were the sanctified; that they sang a new song, unknown to the innumerable multitudes of the regenerate, who were assigned a back seat in the Golden City; and to crown all, he left the impression in the minds of his converts that the sanctified, and they alone, would have part in the first resurrection. You can readily imagine the evil likely to result from such teaching, in the shape of spiritual pride, self-righteousness, and Phariseeism. That that will be the result is apparent on every hand, and only God knows the inestimable injury to the church, the cause of God and human souls that will follow a spiritual aristocracy below and a House of Lords in heaven. Our nature is essentially prone to hanker after preferment in all things desirable; and, while the religion of our Lord, the true article, is conspicuous for its humility and meekness, these distinguishing characteristics are entirely absent in the converts to the new theory.

There are a thousand other features of the movement that cause a sense of fear and dread in the hearts of old timers, and a fearful looking forward to the inevitable consequences to the church and to the cause of God, particularly Methodism. God can save, and he alone, and to him we commend his cause and church.

There can be no doubt of the sincerity, honesty and religious zeal of Bro. Carradine; but while this is true, it is equally true that his teachings are doing great harm to the church. What I regret most in Dr. Carradine's preaching is his belittling of the divine work in regeneration, and his evident intolerance of the opinions of others on this subject, particularly the Bishops and some of the preachers of his own church. The first is apt to mislead, and thus do an injury to the cause of God and his church—a result that no one would deplore more than would our brother. The last is calculated to antagonize where perfect concord should reign. His claim that a sinner has nothing to consecrate, that he is a rebel, with no rights and nothing to offer to God in contradistinction to a regenerated seeker after holiness, is unhappy and calculated to deceive. No man was ever regenerated who did not do all that he claims as necessary to secure the second blessing, and as fully as in the latter case. The question naturally arises: If, as a sinner, he had nothing to consecrate, what addition to his ability, in that direction, does he secure by his adoption into the family of God, where, as a minor, he has absolutely nothing but his sonship more than he had before?—and Bro. Carradine would hardly ask him to lay that on the altar. Then his reference to the mustard tree, and the character of the unclean birds that alight on its branches, meaning the regenerate and the sinner alike, is rather presumptuous, to say the least one can. This leaves such birds as myself and others no chance except to accept the title and obloquy of buzzards, crows, hawks and owls, and leaves us generally in a bad box. I do not believe that our good brother realizes the logical sequence of such teaching, or he would not do it. There are several other points equally objectionable in his deliverances, but the above is sufficient to show the general trend.

I wish he would devote his remarkable talents, his magnetism and his control of the human heart to calling sinners, not the righteous, to repentance. That is what his Master came for, and he certainly has no higher mission. "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem."

Yours truly, REX B.

Jackson, La.

Centenary College has opened well, and is doing good work. Everything has taken on new life. Dr. Hunnicutt and faculty did some work that will stand the test of time. The endowment which Dr. Hunnicutt was the chief instrument in raising will sustain to some extent and help greatly the dear old college. Would that we had a few more Pharrs, Jameses and Werlein! The new president is in great favor with the boys and everybody else. We certainly have as good a faculty, if not better, at Centenary as we have had since the war. Progressiveness is the watchword of Methodism; hence we are progressing and doing better at Centenary than for the past few years. Prof. Wier is certainly in favor with the people, as through his agency more new boys are here than for a number of years. The college, I think wisely, has concluded to keep him in the field. This is emphatically a drumming age.

The district is moving on well. The pastor is planning for a revival at Jackson. It is a pleasure to see so many young people at prayer meeting. A boy will stand a better chance to be converted at Jackson than he would at home. This last sentence reminds me that our home life in many families is not what it ought to be. The family altar is neglected. I have been even in some preachers' homes where they had prayers only at night, and in two preachers' homes where they did not have prayers at all. A word to the preachers of the Woodville district: The time is short between this and Conference. Go into every home pastorally between this and Conference, if possible. Plead with the people to bring up every collection ordered by the church. Every fund that the church ordered is a sacred one and every dollar ought to be raised. Let the people respond with a hearty goodwill. If it is hard times at your homes, what must it be in the homes of our superannuates, widows and orphans, and our missionaries? Let us all, preachers and people, live nearer our God, and he will bless us.

P. A. JOHNSTON.

What Is the Issue?

MR. EDITOR: My article on "The Residue Theory," recently published in the ADVOCATE, has provoked criticism among the "second-blessing" champions. It will be observed, however, that my critics do not meet, nor attempt to meet, the real issue. I urged some objections against the notion of sin, in the proper sense of that word, remaining in justified and regenerated believers. My reviewers have not condescended to mention these objections, and I claim to be master of the situation. I can afford to wait serenely undisturbed while these blank cartridges are firing, the noise of which is mistaken by the gunners for execution. Not a drop of blood has been drawn.

Now, I serve notice upon my critics, one and all, that I am not going to be so extravagant as to fire a forty-pounder at a snow-bird. Give me something to shoot at, brethren, and I will fire away without having to regret a waste of ammunition. D. G. W. ELLIS.

Selections.

"The New Birth."

[A highly-esteemed brother requests us to publish the following extract from one of John Wesley's sermons, giving particulars as to where the extract can be found. The sermon is entitled, "The New Birth," and is numbered 45 in the first volume of Wesley's Sermons, edition of 1836, published by B. Waugh and T. Mason for the Methodist Episcopal Church, at the Conference office, 200 Mulberry street, New York.]

"A third inference which we may draw from what has been observed, is that the new birth is not the same with sanctification. This is, indeed, taken for granted by many, particularly by an eminent writer, in his late treatise on 'The Nature and Grounds of Christian Regeneration.' To waive several other weighty objections which might be made to that tract, this is a palpable one; it all along speaks of regeneration as a progressive work, carried on in the soul by slow degrees, from the time of our first turning to God. This is undeniably true of sanctification; but of regeneration, the new birth, it is not true. This is a part of sanctification, not the whole; it is the gate to it, the entrance into it. When we are born again, then our sanctification, our inward and outward holiness, begins, and thence forward we are gradually to 'grow up in him who is our Head.' This expression of the apostle admirably illustrates the difference between one and the other, and further points out the exact analogy there is between natural and spiritual things. A child is born of a woman in a moment, or, at least, in a very short time; afterwards he gradually and slowly grows, till he attains to the stature of a man. In like manner a child is born of God in a short time, if not in a moment. But it is by slow degrees that he afterwards grows up to the measure of the full stature of Christ. The same relation, therefore, which is between our natural birth and our growth there is also between our new birth and our sanctification."

Keep Growing.

Life ought to be, for every healthy nature, one quenchless thirst for achievement, experience, and expansion. No limits are set to the human soul, although time keeps a strong registry against the human form. In this century some of the greatest things have been done by old men—men who have declined to stop and step out of the ranks, and who have gone on adding strength to strength and service to service until old age has become the fruitful harvest of October, and not the bleak barrenness of December. Physical infirmities are not to be warded off by an effort of will, but no man need decline because his body diminishes in force. Growth takes on many forms, and it can still persist when the senses have begun to fail. It is a great gain to banish from our thoughts the ideal of life which fixes its best period at the beginning. It is a great thing to look forward to ever-increasing gain, to think always of leading and advancing, never of retiring and retreating. The charming old woman who began to study painting after she was sixty years old is a capital illustration of the spirit in which we ought all to take hold of life. There are few who, like the great Doge of Venice, can climb the wall of a besieged city at the head of an attacking force beyond the age of ninety; but there is no one who needs settle down to decline and decay because youth is past. Life has no limits for those who know how to live, and the joy of it lies in moving with the tide and keeping at the front until the time comes when there is a greater and a higher opportunity elsewhere.—Christian Union.

The Value of a Church Paper.

It is astounding that some pastors, and the people generally, are so little interested in the circulation of a worthy denominational paper. Pastors stand sadly in their own light when they fail to encourage the members of their churches to take a good denominational paper. It is simply impossible for church people to be in the largest degree useful to their churches, to their denomination, and to the cause of Christ at large if they do not take a religious paper. There is no investment of money which will bring larger returns for the church, for the denomination, and for Christianity than what is expected in procuring good religious papers. Four cents a week for the year will secure the weekly visits of a great, strong, wholesome, and altogether superior religious paper. The general circulation of such a paper in a church is worth as much to a pastor as is an assistant in pastoral work. Church members can not intelligently give to or work for denominational societies and other objects of benevolence except they be familiar with the scope and manner of their operations, and such familiarity can come only from the weekly visits of a religious newspaper. In all our churches there are many young members who were brought up outside of our denomination; there is also a considerable proportion of such who are more advanced in years. How can they know what our contemporary enterprises are, and how can they come into touch, either with the living present or with the hopeful future, except they take a weekly denominational paper? Men of wealth could not do better with hundreds, or even thousands, of dollars than to aid the pastor in introducing a worthy denominational paper into churches and missions. A pastor in this city a few weeks ago paid for twenty copies of such a paper to be sent to as many families connected with a mission of his church. Could he have made a better investment of the amount?—Christian Intelligencer.

Stick to Your Work.

That's it! That's the secret of success. Patient, faithful, persevering work. Have a purpose, work to that purpose and stick to it. Don't speculate too much; don't go at things aimlessly; don't be too easily diverted. Work, and stick to your work till you accomplish something. The Sunday-school Times illustrates the point aptly: 'Sticking to one's own work, and not troubling one's self about the doings of others, is a good way of getting on in the world. Commenting on a skilled lawn-tennis player, a companion said of him: 'His way is just to give his whole attention to the one ball he's playing for the time. It don't make any difference to him whether he's way ahead of the other fellow or way behind. He just does the very best he can with that ball. He's never flustered because he's got a big score to make up, or upset because he thinks he's all right now. He isn't a brilliant player, but he's a sure one. He does his best every time.' There is philosophy in that method of playing lawn-tennis. We should do well if we shaped our lives according to it. When Peter was exercised over the question whether John was going to have a longer term of service than the other disciples, Jesus said to him: 'What is that to thee? Follow thou me.' Our duty is to our own special work, whether we are ahead of others or behind them."

A Better Way.

Encouragement is just as cheap as fault-finding, and it makes business run smoother and home hours more restful and refreshing. How often we fail to remember this, and give way to petulance, and harass those whom we should cheer by thoughtless or illspirited remarks, or greet their homecoming with an outburst of complaint. "You'll be in your grave before you accomplish that," one says to another whose energy and foresight have been self-sacrificingly employed in a worthy cause, and whose patience and perseverance demand sympathy and help instead of such an avowal of unfaith. If in this grave, will it not be more because of your withheld sympathy and lack of encouragement than because of overwork? Tears, then, will not atone for unproffered sympathy now.—Exchange.

Faithful on Conditions.

There are quite a good many professed Christians who are willing to be faithful to God on conditions, especially such ones as they may make. They will faithfully pray if they can have their prayers answered according to their wishes. If they have a sick child they pray God to restore it to health. If God do so, they will keep on praying. If he will not, then they will not. Some parents have promised God that if he would heal their ill child, they would serve him faithfully. The child died, and perhaps the reason that God did not spare it was because he knew that the parents would not keep the promise. Some Christians will faithfully attend the prayer meeting on the condition that they shall have the pre-eminence in praying, speaking and singing. Alas!—Zion's Herald.

Have You Read It?

It is told of Franklin that at one time in Paris he was greatly ridiculed for his love of the Bible, and that he made up his mind to find out how many of the scoffers had read it. He informed one of the learned societies, of which he was a member, that he had come across a story in pastoral life in ancient times that appeared to him very beautiful, but he would like the judgment of the society upon it. On the evening appointed, Franklin had a reader of finely modulated voice read to the end the book of Ruth. They were in ecstacies over it, and one after another rose to express gratification and admiration, and the desire that the manuscript should be printed. "It is printed," said Franklin, "and is part of the Bible."—Ram's Horn.

Keep Them at the Front.

We mean the young people. Don't put a middle-aged man or woman in office if you can get a young man or young woman. Let the preacher "call the power, if necessary, "behind the throne," suggesting, prompting, helping in every way, but let him keep "behind the throne." On public occasions, let them preside and have the honours. You stand by and cheer. Many a time, as a pastor, we have yielded a place to a young man who for many reasons we might naturally have taken, and it encouraged him, gratified all his friends; and more than one good worker was discovered and developed by the policy. Keep the young people at the front.—Epworth Era.

If you would show yourself a man in the truest and noblest sense, go not to yonder tented field, where death hovers, and the vulture feeds his fill on human victims! Go not where men are carving monuments of marble to perpetuate names which will not live in our own grateful memory! Go not to the dwellings of the rich! Go not to the palaces of kings! Go not to the halls of merriment and pleasure! Go rather, to the widow and relieve her woe! Go to the orphans and speak words of comfort! Go to the lost and save him! Go to the fallen and raise him up! Go to the wanderer and bring him back to virtue! Go to the sinner and whisper in his ear words of salvation and eternal life.—D. C. Eddy.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. G. Cammack, Fanuin charge, Brandon district, Mississippi Conference, Oct. 1: "We have received 18 members, baptised 8 infants, and organized one church this year on this pastoral charge."

Rev. J. C. Woodruff, P. C., Lehrton, Miss., Sept. 28: "We have closed our meetings. We have had fifty-six accessions to our church, with more to follow. We are preparing to build two churches. The work is improved generally. The Lord is blessing the Delta as well as other parts of the vineyard. Pray for us."

Rev. Tatum M. Wafer, P. C., Knox Point, La., Sept. 22: "We have had our protracted meeting at Campo Bello Church. The meeting began on the fourth Sunday night in August. Bro. Jno. F. Foster, of Delhi, came to our help on the following Tuesday night, preaching two soul-stirring sermons each day until the close of the meeting, Friday night, with the following results: four accessions to the church, and the membership considerably revived, for which we give God the praise. We are very much pleased with the appearance of the ADVOCATE each week."

Rev. G. D. Anders, P. C., East Feliciana circuit, Mississippi Conference: "This is my third year on this charge, and I am happy to say that it has been by far the most successful of the three. I am sure that I am safe in reporting as many as 100 bright conversions, counting the number converted at camp meeting. We have had about 70 accessions. Finances are a little behind this time last year, but still we hope to report everything in full. Bros. R. W. Tucker, Skipper and Harvell assisted me in my meeting and preached to the delight of the people. Bro. Skipper has held three children's services for me, and they resulted in 7 accessions to the church. The children on my work call him the big-mouth children's preacher. Praise the Lord for what he has done for East Feliciana circuit."

Mrs. C. V. Smith, Olive Branch, Miss., Sept. 27: "While others of God's workmen are giving items of interest in regard to the Master's vineyard, my husband, Rev. J. H. Smith, has been suffering his Father's will. He has been confined to his bed nearly seven weeks with typhoid fever; but, all praise to the 'One who doeth all things well,' he is now able to be about his room some, but he is very feeble. Anxiety about his work was quite a disadvantage to him while he was struggling between life and death. For three weeks we sat by his couch, watching, almost breathlessly; his life seemed to be suspended by a slender cord, but by his strong constitution, the skilled physician and God's goodness he is being restored to us. Pray for him and his work, that his affliction may accomplish what his labors could! The people of this work have most certainly endeared themselves to us by their kindness. There is nothing left undone by friends or physician that would lead to his recovery. May God's blessings rest on them, one and all!"

Rev. H. M. Young, P. C., Ripley circuit, Miss., Sept. 21: "We have just closed our meetings, with some good results. We are indebted to Bro. M. Honnoll, of New Albany circuit, for efficient work he did for us at Dumas. He came in a time of need, and gave timely of his administration. The first Campbellite who had ever visited this place as a preacher had been here ten years, and had infused into the minds and hearts of the people the immersion theory, until they were confused to such an extent that some church members were in the act of asking for immersion; but when they had heard the clear and pointed expositions of the scriptures on the Holy Ghost and water baptism, by Bro. Honnoll, the fire in the camp ceased, and the trouble subsided. Our third Quarterly Conference was a time of refreshing. Our presiding elder, Bro. T. W. Lewis, was on hand, and preached us three stirring sermons, which did much good. Bro. Lewis is gaining more and more favor with our people. He does us good every time he comes. He is the right man in the right place. We have received 24 members, and others will join. We expect to close a good year."

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg, Walnut Grove, Miss., Sept. 25: "We have held three protracted meetings on this charge. The Holy Spirit accompanied the preached Word unto the salvation of many who believed. Rev. J. C. Long did all the preaching at Beech Springs Church. Five persons joined our church there, and the membership of the church revived. But the greatest victory for the Lord was in our Walnut Grove meeting. Rev. J. L. Morrill, of Cartersville, Ga., conducted the meeting, preaching three times daily for six days. This was indeed a Holy Ghost meeting. The gospel was preached in all its purity. Sin was fearlessly denounced, and yet Bro. Morrill is a man of clean lips, using no 'slang.' About 60 conversions and 25 or 30 sanctifications, 12 accessions, and many new family altars erected. In several instances young ladies came forward and promised to conduct family prayer. Glory to God for salvation that saves now! Mr. Editor, I have no fight to make against others; but I know what it has done for me and mine, and if sanctification be a doctrine of the Bible, and the preaching of it be attended with such outpouring of the Holy Spirit, as was manifested in our meeting here, let us preach it, and I verily believe that preachers will have less cause for complaint about churches devoid of spiritual life. We have under way a new church in Walnut Grove, which when completed will be a neat and commodious house."

Rev. J. H. Foreman, Neshoba circuit, Mississippi Conference, Sept. 18: "We have closed our last protracted meeting on Neshoba charge. Our first meeting was held at North Bend, the fourth Sunday in July. About 25 conversions, 3 accessions, and the church wonderfully revived. Our second meeting was held at Mar's Hill, the fifth Sunday in July and week following. Our third meeting was held at Hester's Chapel, the second Sunday in August and week following. Rev. J. C. Long assisted. We had a good meeting at Hester's Chapel. Backsliders reclaimed and the church graciously blessed. Only one accession, as nearly everybody is a member of some church. Our fourth meeting was at Cook's Chapel. Rev. R. A. Breland assisted. Many thanks to Bro. Breland for his valuable services. Our fifth meeting was at Sand Town, commencing fourth Sunday in August. Bros. M. and John McDonald assisted. We had a glorious revival at this place. Sinners convicted, mourners converted, backsliders reclaimed, and the church wonderfully revived and built up. Glory to God for such a meeting! At the last service of the meeting there were about two hundred persons in the house. Out of that number about one hundred were praising God at one time. Our sixth, and last, meeting was held at Philadelphia in connection with our third Quarterly Conference. Our beloved presiding elder, C. McDonald, was with us and preached five very delightful sermons, which were appreciated by all that heard them. We all look forward with delight to the coming of our presiding elder. He left us Tuesday morning. Bro. W. W. Cammack came to our relief Wednesday evening, and stayed with us until the close of the meeting. It is said by some to be the best meeting they have had at Philadelphia for twenty years. To God be all the praise! Many thanks to the brethren for their services."

Mrs. Emma Hopkins Porter, Marthaville, La.: "How I do enjoy the weekly visit of your (dear old ADVOCATE) bright familiar face! I have no recollection of the first time we met. Think, however, it must have been during the halcyon days of childhood when you were wont to brighten the hearthstone of the old homestead, while my father sat in his 'corner' and my mother in hers, and they in turn devoured the contents of your esteemed pages. And you were coming to my husband's bachelor home before that home was made mine, eighteen years ago, and have been coming to us ever since. Is it any wonder I should call your face 'familiar?' Well, you must feel a deep interest in our welfare after all these years of amicable association, so I thought I would send you some short notes from our work. The first thing I wish to tell you is this: On Sept. 3 the men of our ward held an election on the prohibition question, which resulted in a victory for the prohibitionists. The ward went dry by a majority of one hundred and twenty-three. So after the first of January, next, our town will be free from that monster evil—the open saloon—for which we praise the Lord. Our W. C. T. U. is steadily gaining ground. Men who laughed at us when we were organized by Miss Kearney, two years ago, are right with us now. We are holding Demorest medal contests monthly; and we find they serve to educate the people on the temperance question more successfully and thoroughly than any other method of procedure we can devise. I know you will rejoice with me when I tell you the church at this point is growing, not in number, but in grace. Our pastor, Rev. S. H. Whatley, got Bro. McKnight, of Marshal, Tex., to assist him in a meeting here in August. We found him to be the right man in the right place. He preached the grand old Wesleyan doctrines straight out; made no compromise with the world, the flesh or the devil. The meeting was a grand victory for the Lord. It resulted in quite a number of conversions and sanctifications. On the last night of the meeting a call was made to all who were in the experience of sanctification, and all who believed in and were seeking it, to come forward and form themselves into a 'Holiness Band.' Immediately forty-one had their names enrolled, as expressing a desire to live pure, unadulterated Christian lives, free from sin, which they believed to be their grand privilege. This band meets every Thursday night in a prayer and experience meeting. No 'come-outism' or 'fanaticism' in it; just simply the 'old-time religion.' Praise the Lord! We love Bro. Whatley very much, and would be glad to have him with us another year if the Lord wills it so."

WILSON'S SPRINGS CAMP MEETING.

This camp ground is the third established by Rev. G. R. Ellis in an itinerancy of five or six years. The location is in Jackson county, Miss., about four miles north of Moss Point, and eight from Scranton station, L. and N. railroad. F. K. Wilson, an elder in the Presbyterian Church, has possession of a series of bold, clear, cool medicinal springs. He kindly donated ten acres of land to the M. E. Church, South, near these springs, for a camp ground, and erected a public tent and acted as its host during the meeting. Thursday night, Sept. 27, the writer preached the first sermon to an audience of some 250 persons under a tabernacle shed, 40x75, supplied with comfortable benches, having back rests. Camp fires of pitch pine wood illuminated the grounds, reminding of "ye olden times." Five large tents were erected and occupied in time for this meeting; others will be added by the next meeting. About four months ago Bro. Ellis cast his eyes upon this spot of ground and coveted it for the Lord's use. Kneeling down alone on the spot where the prophets of this meeting slept, he lifted up his petition to God to give favor from the mill men to furnish the lumber, the land owner for the land, and the people to build tents and attend the meetings. God answered all his prayers to the full and overflowing, for on Sunday some 700 or 1,000 people were in attendance, and cheerfully contributed $125 to clear the financial indebtedness, and at the close of the meeting the trustees and friends surprised Bro. Ellis with a purse of twenty dollars as a free-will offering. Revs. Howell, E. T. Breland, G. W. Huff, Lyman Roberts, and the Nestor of camp meetings in East Mississippi, Jacob Holland, and the writer supplied the demands of the pulpit. Sermons from the Revs. Howell and Huff stirred the camp of the enemy. Sinners were stricken and cried for mercy. Other ministers made plain the old paths blazed by our fathers, and some entered into the rest of perfect love. Four of the itinerant preachers there enjoy the blessing of entire sanctification, as taught in the standards of our theology. The music was excellent—organ and cornet; the choir did well; but the major part of the congregation left their sung books at home, and came to the meetings to praise the Lord by proxy. Quite a large number of negroes were attracted to the meeting Sunday night, and, seated on the outskirts of the shed, listened attentively to the dispensed Word. By request they sang some standard hymns, and as their unified, melodious voices swept out upon the night air, we realized the mighty power in song, and for the first time at this meeting that the Holy Spirit held the baton.

The visible results of the meeting I could not fully ascertain; but know of 13 additions; many were converted and reclaimed. The hallowed impressions of this meeting I feel sure will develop fruit every day.

O, ye city people, searching for the waters of life, go to Wilson's Springs Camp Meeting next year. Healing waters for the body and soul flow there most abundantly. Mr. Wilson has a new two-story frame building now ready to accommodate Summer or Winter boarders, only two squares distance from tabernacle shed. Daily mail gives touch with the outer world. Postoffice is Wilson Springs, Miss.

I spent trying to find cure for Salt Rheum which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the humor. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"When my adopted son was seven years of age, he had as severe a cough as I ever knew anyone to suffer from. He coughed incessantly, and spit up blood. I tried everything I could think of, but he constantly grew worse, and I feared the poor little fellow would surely die. At last, I gave him Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, being recommended to do so by the physician. This medicine gave the child speedy relief and effected a permanent cure."—Mrs. M. E. DEBAT, Liberty, Texas.

A Judicial Wrong Righted.

Some time since the Northern Pacific railroad, becoming financially embarrassed, went into the hands of a receiver appointed by a United States Court. Soon afterward a strike took place among the employees of the road, whereupon the receiver petitioned the aforesaid court to compel the employees of the road to go on with their work. Strange to say, an individual wearing the judicial ermine of "the best government the world ever saw"—Jenkins by name—promulgated a decree requiring the aforesaid employees to continue their accustomed work, nolens volens. The case was appealed to the United States Court of Appeals under the presidency of Justice Harlan, of the Supreme Court of the United States. At Chicago, a few days since, a decision was rendered to the effect that, in the absence of a specific contract, both employer and employee have the right to put an end to the existing relation. An employer can not be compelled to employ men whose services he desires to dispense with; neither can an employee be compelled to continue in the service of any individual or corporation against his will. The justice of this is so apparent that it seems to us utterly absurd that one of the highest judicatories of the world should be called upon at this late day to decide such a question. The decree of Judge Jenkins compelling men, in the absence of a contract, to continue in the service of an employer against their will, is one of the most grotesque anachronisms in the annals of nineteenth century jurisprudence. Had such a decision been allowed to become law, then the star-spangled banner would no longer have been the emblem of justice and liberty; America could no longer have been characterized as "the land of the free." The decision also emphasizes the fact that men who quit the service of an employer have no right to prevent others from taking their places. If the right to quit work is sacred, the right to work is no less so.

When the end of life's journey comes, what will be your feelings as you review the past? Will you be able to contemplate with inexpressible joy a life consecrated to the service of God, and the uplifting of humanity? or will you look back on obligations ignored, talents perverted and golden opportunities unimproved? What are you doing for him who purchased you with his own blood?

"I gave my life for thee:
What hast thou done for me?"

Rome's Idea of Religious Liberty.

It is a fact well known to the reading public that several of the South American Republics, especially Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia, are dominated by Catholicism, and that Rome, in accordance with her time-honored policy, rules with a rod of iron. Protestanism is tolerated after a fashion—i. e., its adherents are not sent to the stake. But religious liberty, according to the American standard, does not exist. Protestants can not be legally married, unless they are willing to stultify and perjure themselves by a profession of Catholicism; and many other oppressive disabilities are imposed upon them.

In view of these facts, the Chicago Methodist Preachers' Association, in a meeting held on April 2, adopted resolutions requesting Archbishop Ireland to call the attention of the papal representative, Satolli, to this matter, in order that he might induce His Holiness, the Pope, to use his power as the head of the great hierarchy to put an end to this tyranny. The resolutions ask that Protestants in these South American countries be accorded the same religious liberty that Catholics enjoy in the United States. Although several different letters were addressed to him on the subject, Archbishop Ireland did not condescend to reply. At last, the committee representing the Preachers' Association addressed a communication to Satolli himself. The first communication His Highness did not notice. A second one brought an answer; but the answer was anything else but satisfactory. Thereupon the Preachers' Association, in a meeting held Sept. 3, adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That this meeting endorses the plan of our committee to forward copies of the resolution, adopted April 2, 1894, regarding religious liberty in certain countries of South America, the reply of Mgr. Satolli, and selected extracts from the press to the various Conferences, Assemblies and Conventions of the Protestant Churches of the land, in order that intelligent action on the matter may be taken.

This action of the Chicago Preachers' Association is now being discussed by the Northern press; and the comments, so far as they have come under our eye, are highly commendatory. The Standard, one of the ablest Baptist papers in the country, gives the movement hearty endorsement, and expresses the opinion that it will meet the approval of Christian people of all denominations. The Interior, a leading organ of Presbyterianism, speaks in the same strain, and characterizes the action of the Chicago Preachers' Association as "a stroke of ecclesiastical statesmanship." The New York Independent expresses itself with equal vigor in favor of the movement. The Texas Advocate, always wide-awake, leads the Southern Methodist press in hearty advocacy of the movement. Though later in speaking than the Texas, the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE does not yield the palm to the Texas or any other Advocate in the heartiness of its support of this movement. In the United States, where Protestantism is dominant, Rome is an ardent advocate of religious liberty; but in South America, where Rome sways the sceptre, she plays the tyrant as of old. We hope to see every Protestant Church in the land utter its protest against this tyranny on the part of the great hierarchy. United action on the part of all Protestant Churches, we believe, will have some effect even upon His Holiness, the Pope of Rome, and will in the near future prove a great boon to our missionaries in papal lands, and will prepare the way for the spread of the gospel of Christ in its purity. If not, then it will open the eyes of the American people to the true character of the Romish Church. It will give them a foretaste of the doom that awaits this country should Catholicism ever become the dominant form of religion.

A New Book.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, A Prohibition Church, Established by a Critical and Complete Examination of Methodist History from 1743 to 1894. By the Rev. T. A. Kerley, of the Tennessee Annual Conference, M. E. Church, South. Edited by John J. Tigert, D. D., LL.D. Printed for the Author. Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South. Barbee & Smith, Agents, Nashville, Tenn. 1894. Ten cents per copy; $1 per dozen.

The genesis of this pamphlet was on this wise. In the Pilot of April 19, 1894, Rev. Thomas Dixon made the declaration that the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, forty years ago, "rejected a resolution declaring it to be inconsistent for a minister of the gospel to be engaged in the selling of liquor." A later issue of the same periodical contains the statement that "the General Conference of 1796 removed from the Discipline the rule of Wesley against the handling of spirituous liquors, and substituted for it one that teaches that a Methodist minister might engage in the retailing of liquor, provided that nothing disorderly should happen in his house in connection with it." To correct these erroneous statements is the aim of the book; and faithfully and thoroughly has the author executed his task. He shows conclusively that Methodism has given forth no uncertain sound in opposition to both the use and the sale of intoxicants from the beginning, although her opposition has been more pronounced in recent years. In behalf of Methodism we thank Bro. Kerley for writing the book. When slanders like those above quoted are propagated through the press, it becomes necessary for somebody to correct them, else they will go down to posterity as the facts of history.

We desire to call the attention of the author and our Book Editor to the following errors in the report of the General Conference Committee on Temperance, as given in this book. Where the Temperance Committee wrote, "The church can not cease her divine antagonism," Bro. Kerley, following the Daily Advocate, has substituted "erase" for "cease"—certainly a very infelicitous change. "While waging war against a business" has been changed into "while waging war against a measure." Two or three other inaccuracies occur, but as they are of minor importance, we pass them by.

Method.

METHOD: A Magazine for Christian Workers, Devoted Exclusively to the Discussion of Methods of Church Work. Religious, Social, Financial. Rev. W. F. Cook, D. D., and Rev. Ellison R. Cook, Editors. Published quarterly. Sixty cents per annum. By the Christian Giver Co., Atlanta, Ga.

The above named magazine is one of the marvels of the periodical literature of our day. It is the only periodical in the world devoted exclusively to the discussion of methods of church work; and its subscription list is sufficient evidence that it meets a felt want on the part of Christian workers. Although it has been in existence only a little over a year (the fourth number having made its appearance in July last), it has reached a circulation of twenty thousand. The annals of religious journalism afford no parallel to this so far as our information goes. We unhesitatingly recommend the work to all wide-awake, progressive pastors, stewards, League workers, mission workers and all others who desire to find the best methods of doing work that looks to the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom.

One of the strange things connected with the history of this new venture in religious journalism is the frigid reception which it has met at the hands of the Southern Methodist press. Leading Northern papers, such as the New York Advocate, the Western, the Protestant Methodist, the Independent, and others too numerous to mention, have given it the most flattering notices. In the South as well as the North Baptist and Presbyterian papers have made kindly mention of it; while, wonderful to tell, Southern Methodist papers have, with a few exceptions, been either as mum as an oyster or exceedingly stinted in their words of praise. We dislike to say it, but we believe it to be true that if this periodical had had its birth beyond Mason and Dixon's line, our Southern Methodist papers would almost have exhausted the vocabulary of panegyric in sounding its praises. Our reason for saying this is that we frequently see in their columns extravagant praises of Northern periodicals of far less merit. We write this hoping to stir up our brethren of the tripod to give proper recognition to this laudable home enterprise. The senior editor of Method is an honored leader in the North Georgia Conference, having been one of its representatives in the last General Conference. The junior editor is his son, a brilliant young man, who is rapidly taking high rank in his Conference.

Important.

To the Members of the North Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: I have spent the greater part of this year in the bounds of your Conference. Your kindness and courtesy have only been equaled by the brotherly love shown me. I shall always think of you with tenderness and love. Listen to this appeal in my distress. Our boys are here in force—about 190—and still they come. Sixteen noble boys are now waiting for a cottage where they can do their own cooking. We must furnish the cottage. As our subscription to the Brooks Cottage is the largest, we have decided to ask you to help us build it at once. Let each circuit and station in your Conference send me from $5 to $10. You can do this. Let individual subscriptions come in by first mail. We are out of room. Help us, brethren beloved.

The severe drought which has prevailed throughout a number of the Western States has had the effect to turn the attention of the farmers of this drought-stricken region to the South as an agricultural region. They are beginning to see that climate and other conditions are more favorable to agriculture here than in any other section. An exodus South has already commenced, and the indications are that it is likely to grow to vast proportions. "Southward the star of empire takes its way."

***

A recent issue of Harper's Weekly contains an able article from the pen of J. K. Upton concerning the material progress of the South since the war. By carefully prepared statistical tables compiled from official sources it shows that during the twenty years between 1870 and 1890 the taxable value of real estate in the eleven States of the Southern Confederacy increased in value no less than eighty-two per cent. The increase of personal property during the same period was one hundred and fifty-four per cent. Where can a parallel to this be found?

Dr. M. R. Chapman, editor of the St. Louis Advocate, has been transferred to the Baltimore Conference to the pastorate of Trinity Church, made vacant by the transfer of Dr. Hill to Kansas City. Dr. Chapman's place on the tripod will be filled by Dr. W. B. Palmore, who is already well and favorably known throughout the connection as associate editor and also as publisher of the paper. The genial, facile, scholarly pen of Dr. Chapman will be greatly missed in the editorial sanctum of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. We rejoice, however, that an Elisha has been found to wear the mantle of Elijah.

Centenary Church (M. E. Church), Portland, Or., is reported by the secular press as in a state of rebellion. The church had petitioned for one of its prominent preachers—one in Minnesota, the other in San Francisco. The presiding Bishop saw fit to send some one else. The new appointee on his arrival found the door of the church closed in his face. This is rebellion pure and simple. Churches have an unquestionable right to make requests of the appointing power, but this is as far as they can legally go. The Bishop may grant these requests or not, as his judgment may dictate. The making of pastoral appointments is one of the inalienable prerogatives of the episcopacy. These Oregon recalcitrants have the right to withdraw from the Church of their fathers and form an independent congregation, or go into some other ecclesiastical establishment; but they have no right to reject a duly appointed pastor and still claim to be Episcopal Methodists.

J. L. COOPER, D. D., COURTLAND, Miss., [Photographed '94]

PRINCIPAL OF COOPER INSTITUTE FOR TWENTY-TWO YEARS.

For It Takes a Shadow Off My Path, and Makes the Future Brighter.

COURTLAND, Miss., March 12, 1894.—Drs. Reynolds, Nashville, Tenn.: Dear Sirs—Your Oil Cure has proven a perfect success in my case. Nearly five years ago a small ulcer or sore appeared on my left cheek and refused to heal. After using many remedies it continued to grow larger, and began to give me pain. About five weeks ago I began your oil treatment. I did not find the white oil entirely painless, which I only used six days. The black oil gave me no pain. It is entirely healed, and but a small scar remains to show that it ever existed. I am grateful to God that you have been led to such a discovery (Prov. viii, 12), and I shall spare no pains to direct suffering humanity to you.

If you desire to use this as a testimonial to my friends and the world you can do so, as I shall be more than glad for them to have the information. I am, sirs, gratefully yours,

J. L. COOPER.

One of Tennessee's Purest and Best Known Sons. Ex-Treasurer Athe Thomas. Saved by Drs. Reynolds.

Franklin, Tenn., Sept. 11, 1894.—In the Spring of the present year there was developed upon my chest just above the breastbone a very vicious, depraved ulcer, of what character I know not, but pronounced lupus. It had extended inwardly near to the vital organs, and there was danger of immediate consequence. My family physician, a man of age and experience, had treated it without any improvement. I applied to Drs. Reynolds, of Nashville. Their remedies at once arrested the further progress of the disease, soon the sore began to heal, and in six weeks it was entirely healed, and all effected without pain. I most cheerfully bear witness to the skill and successful treatment of myself and others by Drs. Reynolds, and give to the public my belief that they are reliable and skillful in their profession.

Respectfully, ATHA THOMAS.

Six years ago there appeared a small pimple on my cheek, which continued to grow until it became as large as my thumb. It was then removed by Dr. Briggs. It healed at first, but returned again in a couple of months and steadily grew until it was the size of a hen's egg. Becoming anxious, I immediately placed my case in the hands of Drs. Reynolds, who removed the tumor by applying painless oils, after which my face healed, leaving only a small scar.

From now until Nov. 1 we will present a copy of Dr. Sawyer's book, "The World in the Church," to every new subscriber and also to every old subscriber who will renew for one year in advance, i.e., up to October, 1895. This work has been highly commended by our church papers and many of the leading men of Southern Methodism, including most, if not all, our Bishops. Here is an opportunity to get the book as a present for doing something which you ought to do anyway—subscribe for the ADVOCATE. This offer is made only to those who send cash with the order at the rate of $2 per annum.

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

PERIODICALS.

The Review of Reviews, for October, is out in good time with a rich table of contents. This is one of the few periodicals of our day that has no competitor, there being no journal that attempts to occupy its special field. Its success is the best evidence of its merit. With very little advertising, and with no advertitious aid, it has in the very infancy of its existence reached a circulation of mammoth proportions.

The October number of the Review of Missions is out in good time with an inviting table of contents. The leading place is occupied by an interesting sketch of Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, founder of the Inland China Mission. "Medical Mission Work in Mexico," by L. B. Salmans, M. D., comes next. Miss Maria L. Gibson makes a strong plea in behalf of Missionary Training-schools. Rev. A. Rowbotham writes interestingly of "Congo Missions." The facile pen of Miss Lucinda B. Helm treats of "Home Missions" in her own unique and sprightly way. Rev. H. Loomis has a readable article on "Touring in Bible Work in Japan." Bishop Galloway presents just such an account as one would expect from his brilliant pen of the recent session of the Japan Mission Conference, over which he presided. There is also much editorial and miscellaneous matter of excellent quality. The circulation of "The Review of Missions" will disseminate among our people the information which they need in order to put them into hearty sympathy with the great missionary movement which the Son of God came into the world to project.

"Aid Wanted."

Under the above caption, a brother calls for aid, stating at the latter end of his note that he has "ten churches under headway." This last statement is bound to be wrong either with the author or printer. To my certain knowledge, he has no church-building started; he has part of the lumber on the ground in Springfield to build. Provided the Church Extension Board gives them aid, they will proceed. The church in Ponchatoula is finished, but is a little in debt. Anything contributed for that church would relieve a needy place. I trust all who read this note and the one referred to will send the dime asked for. I shall forward my mite at once.

A Startling Portrayal.

The Drink Habit and Its Cure.

BY PETER M. HAWKINS.

The following graphic and eloquent address was delivered by Mr. Peter M. Hawkins, of Baton Rouge, before that excellent charitable organization, the Keeley Help Club—Bro. David Zable in the chair—at the club parlors, corner Prytania and Clio streets, on Thursday evening last:

There are in the United States one hundred and forty thousand licensed liquor saloons. If formed into a street, with saloons on each side, allowing twenty feet to each saloon, they would make a street 265 miles long. Let us imagine them brought together into such a street, and let us suppose that the moderate drinkers and their families are marching into it at the upper end, and let us see what that street turns out in one year.

What army is that which comes marching down the street in solid columns, five abreast, extending 570 miles? It is the army of five million men and women who daily and constantly go to saloons for intoxicating drinks as a beverage. Marching twenty miles a day, it will take them more than twenty-eight days to go by.

Now they are gone, and close in their rear comes another army, marching five abreast, and sixty miles in length. In it there are 530,000 confirmed drunkards. They are men and women who have lost control of their appetites, who are in the regular habit of getting drunk and making beasts of themselves. Marching two abreast, the army is 150 miles in length. Scan them closely. There are grey-haired men and fair-headed boys. There are, alas! many women in that army, sunk to deeper depths than the men, because of the greater heights from which they fell. It will take them seven days to go by. It is a sad and sickening sight; but do not turn away yet, for here comes another army—100,000 criminals. From jails and prisons and penitentiaries they come. At the head of the army comes a long line of persons whose hands are besmeared with human blood. With ropes around their necks, they are on their way to the gallows. Others are going to prison for life. Every crime known to our laws has been committed by these persons while under the influence of drink.

But, hark! whence comes those yells, and who are those bound with strong chains, and guarded by strong men, that go raging by? They are raving maniacs, made such by drink. Their eyes are tormented with awful sights, and their ears ring with awful sounds. Slimy reptiles crawl over their bodies, and fiends from hell torment them before their time. They are gone now, and we breathe more freely.

But what gloom is this that pervades the air, and what is that long line of black coming slowly down the street? It is the line of funeral processions. One hundred thousand who have died the drunkard's death are being carried to their graves. Drunkards do not have many friends to mourn their loss, and we can put thirty of their funeral processions into a mile. We have thus a procession 3,333 miles in length. It will take a good share of the year for them to go by, for funeral processions move slowly. Look into the coffins as they go by; see the dead drunkards. Some died of delirium tremens, and the lines of terror are still plainly marked on their faces; some froze to death by the roadside, too drunk to reach their homes; some stumbled from the wharf and were drowned; some wandered into the woods and died; some blew their own brains out; some were fearfully stabbed in drunken brawls; some were roasted in burning buildings; some were crushed to shapeless masses under the cars. They died in various ways, but strong drink killed them all; and on their tombstones—if they have any—may be fitly inscribed, "He died a drunkard's death."

Close behind them comes another long line of funeral processions; we know not how many; but they are more numerously attended by mourning friends. They contain the remains of those who have met death through carelessness and cruelty of drunken men. Some died of broken hearts; some were foully murdered; some were burnt to death in buildings set on fire by drunken men; some were horribly mangled on the railroad, because of drunken engineers or flagmen; some were blown up on a steamboat, because a drunken captain ran a race with a rival boat.

But here come another army—the children—innocent ones, upon whom has been visited the iniquities of their fathers. How many are there? Two hundred thousand. Marching two abreast, they extend up the street thirty miles. Each one must bear through life the stigma of being a drunkard's child. They are reduced to poverty, want and beggary. They live in ignorance and vice. Some of the children are moaning with hunger, and some are shivering with the cold, for they have not enough rags to keep them warm. A large number of them are idiots, made so before they were born, by brutal drunken fathers, and, worse than all the rest, many of them have inherited a love for liquor, and are growing up to take the places and do the deeds of their fathers. They will fill the ranks of the awful army of drunkards that moves in unbroken columns down to death. It has taken nearly a year for the street to empty itself of its year's work, and close in the rear come the vanguard of the next year supply. And if this is what liquor does in our land in one year, what must be its results in the world through the long century?

Thus far we have listened to the story that the figures tell; but they can not tell all. They can not picture to us the wretched squalor of a drunkard's home. They can not tell us how many unkind and cruel words strong drink has caused otherwise kind and tender-hearted husbands and fathers to utter to their dear ones. They can not tell how many heavy blows have fallen from the husband's hand upon those whom it is his duty to love and cherish and protect. They can not tell how many fond expectations and bright hopes which the fair young bride had of the future have been blasted and turned to bitterest gall. They can not number the long, weary hours of night, during which she has anxiously awaited, and yet fearfully dreaded the heavy footfall at the door. Figures can not tell how many scalding tears the wives have shed, nor how many prayers of bitter anguish and cries of agony God has heard them utter. They can not tell how many mothers have worn out soul and body in providing the necessities of life for children whom a drunken father has left destitute. They can not tell us how many mothers' hearts have broken with grief as they saw a darling son becoming a drunkard. They can not tell us how many white hairs have gone down in sorrow to the grave, mourning over drunken children. They can not tell us how many hard-fought battles the drunkard, in his sober moments, has fought with the terrible appetite; how many times he has walked his room in despair, tempted to commit suicide, because he could not conquer the demon, and, finally, we can not search the records of the other world and tell how many souls have been shut out from that holy place, where no drunkards enter, and banished to the regions of eternal despair by the demon of drink.

What man, what woman, what child would not vote to have that whole street, with its awful traffic in the infernal stuff, sunk to the lowest depths of perdition, and covered ten thousand fathoms deep under the curses of the universe. You have always believed that all this whisky drinking is a crime, a sinful crime. It is nothing of the sort; it is a disease; and I can say to you, without fear of successful contradiction, that it is curable, and that Dr. Leslie E. Keeley's Double Chloride of Gold is the remedy that will cure you. Dr. Keeley claims that five per cent. is all he loses out of 100. I know of men who have taken the treatment five, six and seven years ago, who have never had any desire for drink; and I myself have never felt the moment, no matter what stress I was placed under—and I am not free from the ordinary cares of mankind—when I had a semblance of a desire for it; and I have never yet seen the day when it occurred to me that a drink of whisky would be of the least benefit in elevating my spirit. It has passed from my life, and I told a brother the other day that I could not recall the distinctive tastes between the different liquors. If you were to put a glass of whisky or soap-suds before me, I could not imagine how one could elevate my spirits more than the other.

The question is often asked me: Why men, who have suffered as drunkards, do return to drink after being cured? Some for one cause; some for another. I never knew a man who after being cured and returned to drink, say he craved the first drink. Many drink in self defense to keep their spirits on a level with the old crowd they associate with. Generally, a man trains with a whisky crowd for the whisky there is in it, and when he gets well of the whisky he gets well of the crowd. Some drink in fits of desperation, as they do other desperate things. I have known some to drink to spite their families, but they are few and far between. But it is hard to account for the actions of men. At least eight men out of every one hundred are cranks. They can not account themselves for what they will do; nor can others. There is something peculiarly weak in human nature which is inexplicable. If a man performs a good deed, his next-door neighbor never hears of it. If he does something scandalous, it is bruited over the town in a marvelously short space of time; and so I find it in this Keeley work. If I go to a town where twenty-one men have been treated, and one has fallen, and twenty are walking upright, leading sober lives and doing their duty to God and man, I only hear of the poor fellow who has fallen, and never a word about the others. Men who would object to, or criticise, the Keeley Treatment because some returned to drink, would impeach the panel of apostles, because it contained a Judas Iscariot. No remedy known to man has ever cured a larger per cent. There is another objection urged: That Keeley Institutes are "money traps." I know, of my own knowledge, that they are not the best investments in the States. I have read that Keeley was a millionaire, made so by the sales of his remedies. I wish he were worth a hundred millions made this way, for then I would know that my own cure was more valuable, and that I had a sure, good thing; but I don't see, if it were true, how this should deter a man from seeking relief from inebriety any more than a man paying higher prices to famously skillful physicians for other ailments. When a man goes into a store to purchase an article, he does not care to know whether the owner of the store is rich or not. All he wants to know is, is the article he buys worth the price he pays; and that is all about it. It costs about $100 to take the Keeley Treatment at New Orleans, and any drinking man would spend much more than that in a year or so, or on one spree, besides neglecting his business and losing money in other ways; and then, too, there is no poison, strychnine, or atrophine in the Keeley Medicine, and a man could drink his eight-ounce bottle at a single dose without perceptible bad effect; and no man ever left the Keeley Institute without a vast improvement in his health. His moral health is also improved. For my personal gratification I have kept track of several men who sustained church relations before they took the treatment, but had resigned, or were kicked out, or were thorns in the flesh of their pastors, and stumbling-blocks to others, resume their church relations within a short time after their cure, and become better members than ever.

Many States are moving in the matter of having inebriates sent to curative hospitals instead of prisons. I understand several have such statutes. A cured inebriate becomes a wage earner and tax payer, a family supporter, and it is cheaper for the country to have him cured than to support him and his family. Patients during treatment, and after cure, are the most fraternal set in the world, and the most zealous to get other men relieved who are afflicted as they once were. Every man who helps to get a fellow-man cured has no idea of what a vast relief he has given to that man, himself, his family, and friends. He has helped make him what he once was, and an example to the rising generation. He has done something which ought to make men rise up and call him blessed. The man who has this disease is indeed handicapped. He has lost the confidence of his friends and himself. What chance does he stand in the race of life? Nobody will risk a man of that sort. Employers will take advantage of his skill in business, and not pay him near as much as he is worth. They will tell him he is unreliable.

I never saw a man that was ashamed he had been at a Keeley Institute. He may go in the back door, but he comes out the front door, and does not care how many bands meet him with banners flying, proclaiming to the world that he was a diseased man, but now he is cured of the treble-accursed demon, Alcohol.

In picturing the life of the inebriate, I am reminded of the lines of Sir Edwin Arnold, when he dolefully sings in the "Light of Asia:"

"We are the voice of the wandering wind,
Which mourns for rest, and rest can never find;
So as the wind is, so is mortal life,
A moan, a sigh, a storm, a strife."

But when he emerges from his terrible condition, he feels as one projected from the foul vapors of a noisome dungeon into the bright and beautiful sunshine of heaven. The life that was to him a sepulcher, full of dead men's bones, has become a wedding march. It is a soul rhapsody, a prose poem, the glad, sweet cry of the soul's awakening. It is not like the morning glory, which blooms for a day; it is the myrrh, whose odor is perpetual. Life becomes for him a school for the development of human character, a field for usefulness, a drill ground for heaven; and, in conclusion, let me recall the lines that were written in an album:

"Our lives are albums, written through
With good or bad, with false or true;
And as the blessed angels turn the pages of our years,
God grant they greet the good with smiles, and blot the bad with tears."

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

LEMON TAPIOCA.—Two tablespoonfuls of tapioca soaked over night in one-half cup of cold water. In the morning, add one half cup of cold water and the peeled rind of one lemon Set on the stove and boil until clear. Take out the rind, add the juice of the lemon and one teaspoonful of lemon-extract, one-half cup of boiling water, a little salt, and boil up. Put in a mold to cool, and serve with sugar and cream. —Ledger.

ICE FOR DESSERT FRUITS.—Any stewed, canned, preserved, or fresh fruit may be iced for a birthday affair at a small cost. Dip the pieces in beaten white of egg, and then in pulverized sugar. Cherries, berries, small pears and plums are iced with their stems on; peaches and apricots are divided; oranges and pineapples are sliced, and the slices quartered, and bananas and lemons are sliced; chestnuts are boiled tender and the skins removed, and almonds may be blanched or iced whole. A sponge cake hollowed out, filled with whipped cream, and "nailed" with iced fruits is very fine.—Exchange.

TOMATO SAUCE.—Skin, halve and remove the seeds from one peck of large, ripe tomatoes; then slice, put in a crock with four teaspoonfuls of salt sprinkled between and let them stand four hours. Put the tomatoes in a porcelain kettle, add three sliced onions, and four green peppers, and boil soft enough to strain. Return the pulp to the kettle, boil slowly, stirring almost constantly until it is reduced one-third; then add one tablespoonful each of ginger, cloves and salt (if the latter is needed), one-half a teaspoonful of cayenne and six tablespoonfuls of tarragon vinegar. Let boil five minutes, bottle and seal.

ASSIST NATURE a little now and then, with a gentle, cleansing laxative, thereby removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels, and toning up and invigorating the liver and quickening its tardy action, and you thereby remove the cause of a multitude of distressing diseases, such as headaches, indigestion, biliousness, skin diseases, boils, carbuncles, piles, fistulas and maladies too numerous to mention.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctor's services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases.

That, of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequalled, is proven by the fact that once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and indigestion.

Rev. Richard Thomas Hennington.

HENNINGTON—RICHARD THOMAS HENNINGTON was born near Crystal Springs, Copiah county, Miss., May 19, 1830. He was the son of Rev. Henry Hennington, one of the pioneer local preachers of that section of the State. His mother was a woman of fervent piety—a typical Methodist of the olden time. Reared by such parents, he grew to manhood with the impress of Methodism upon him. He professed religion and united with the church at an early age. He was married Oct. 23, 1851, to Miss Mary E. Black. He was licensed to exhort Oct. 12, 1855. The year following he became a licensed preacher, and at the close of that year was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference. He served the following charges: Bayon Pierre, '57; Georgetown, '58; Brookhaven, '59; China Grove, '60; Georgetown, '61. In '62 he was local. At the close of the year he was readmitted to the Conference and appointed to Georgetown. He afterwards served Brandon, Monticello, Georgetown and Burtonton. In December, '67, he located and emigrated with his family to Brazil, where he remained until his death, which occurred June 24, 94

From his youth up he was a man of the utmost probity of character. Nothing could swerve him from what he conceived to be the pathway of duty. He was of such a genial, sunny disposition that his friends were legion wherever he was known. He was exceedingly kind and affectionate in his family. As a preacher he was clear and practical. He did not have the benefits of a collegiate training, but obtained an excellent English education and imbibed in early life a fondness for reading which was of great service to him all through life. Although he wrote very little for the press, he was master of a very clear, vigorous, forceful style.

He was an industrious, energetic, thrifty man. During most of his life since early manhood he kept a diary. His manner of keeping it was far from uniform. Sometimes the record of a day is only a line or two, with reference to outward events; at other times it is a vivid photograph of his mental and spiritual state covering many pages—in some instances, as many as ten or twelve. If he is bright and cheerful, his cheeriness shows itself in every line of the record. If he is gloomy and sad, that mood is reflected from the time-stained manuscript. If he is conscious of some neglect of duty, or lacks a clear knowledge of his acceptance with God, a full, frank confession stares you in the face as you scan the record. Many pages of this diary are worthy of publication. We select, as a fair specimen of his style, and as throwing light upon his character, the following which was penned Tuesday, Aug. 13, 1867, on board a ship during a trip to Brazil preparatory to the removal of his family. The record for this day consists of eleven pages. After recording reminiscences of the day of his marriage, he thus continues: "We commenced our life of union in the full enjoyment of mutual affection; yet we did not and could not know each other's hearts as we have since learned them by many repeated acts of self-sacrifice on the part of each for the other." * * * "If there was a joy allowed me in this life which could not be shared by my wife, it would detract from the satisfaction I would have from it; and I know that every happiness which can be extended to me by my true-hearted, loving wife affords an increase of happiness to her." * * * "How precious is the thought of again returning to enjoy the association of my beloved wife and children. There is no sentiment of the human heart that is more elevating and refining in its tendency than the love which the husband feels for his wife and the affection he has welling up in his heart and breast for his children. In the heart of him who has a sincere regard for his family, love is as delicate as the aroma of the sweetest flower" * * * "If I seek exemption from the cares and vexations of the world it is to shield my loved ones from annoyance. If I seek the good things of this life, it is that my family may enjoy them with me. If I seek preferment among my fellow-men, it is with the desire that these loved ones may be brought into more desirable and honorable associations. If I seek social enjoyment, the most exquisite gratification is found in the interchange of cordial sentiments with my own loved ones at home. It is with the anticipation of such happiness in future days that I now seek a place of refuge from the troubles of my native land." (This was written during the stormy days of reconstruction).

During his residence in Brazil he never learned to speak Portuguese with sufficient fluency to make an attempt at preaching; hence his ministerial life came to an end with his departure from the United States. As there was no public worship in Santarem, where he lived, except in Catholic Churches, and as he was too intensely Protestant in his views to receive any benefit from worshiping at Catholic altars, he had very few opportunities of attending public worship during the whole twenty-six years of his residence in Brazil. His Sabbaths were usually spent for the most part in reading. During the first few months of his residence in Brazil, the record for Sunday usually contains this entry: "Read the Bible and Wesley's Works." A little later you can see from the diary that his Sunday reading is much interfered with by callers. Then you come upon this entry, "Went to the woods and read all day."

He had long cherished a hope of spending the evening of his days in his native land. He was just on the eve of the fulfillment of this pleasing hope when the messenger came to summon him from his labors on earth to his reward on high. He had disposed of his affairs in Brazil preparatory to returning to the United States, and had brought his family as far as Para on the way. Death came so suddenly that there was no time for any parting message. There can be no doubt, however, that he died as he lived, trusting in Christ for salvation. While his mortal dust sleeps among strangers in a strange land his spirit, robed in white, basks in the sunshine of God's presence in heaven.

SMITH—LAURA EUGENIA SMITH (nee Wood) died June 25, 1894, after an illness of nine months. Sister Laura Eugenia Smith was the wife of James M. Smith, of Lawrence county, Miss.

She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1879, at Lenoir's Church, under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Givens. She was twice married. By her first husband (Mr. Guyton) she had five children—one of these, a girl, died at ten years of age.

She lived a devoted and consistent member of the church up to her death. She was a kind and devoted wife and mother and a great worker in the Sunday-school. The writer visited her twice in company with her pastor, L. J. Jones. On the first visit Bro. Jones preached an able sermon, and it did us all a great deal of good to hear Sister Smith shouting praises to her God. On the second visit we held a prayer meeting which was a great spiritual feast to her. At the close of the meeting, Bro. Jones made a proposition to the persons present that all who would promise to meet Sister Smith in heaven should go up and give her their hand, which everyone to the house did. Mourn not, Bro. Smith and children, if you hold out faithful, you will surely meet her in heaven. J. D. M. MAY.

BROWN—MARIE LOUISE BROWN, only child of H. Terrell and Lelia C. Brown, was born at Attalaville, Miss., Oct. 1, 1887; peacefully fell asleep in Jesus, at Sallis, Miss., Aug. 27, 1894, after months of great, though patient suffering.

She was the idol of her parents, the pet of her relatives, and was beloved by all who knew her, for she truly loved all, and won all hearts to her by her kind and sympathetic feelings and attractive, fascinating manners—all of which was testified in the nutiring kindness and attention shown her while sick. The light has gone from our homes, but will be a beacon light to those who are now so desolate. Although a sufferer for about eight months, she clung to life with great tenacity. She had become inured to confinement, enjoyed and appreciated the society and companionship of her friends and relatives.

She was looking to her approaching birthday with great expectation, as quite a number of her friends and relatives had promised rare gifts on that occasion. So being asked during her sickness if the Father should see proper to take her home to live with him, "Would you be willing to go?" she said "Yes." But God was pleased to have her spend her birthday in "the city which hath foundations." "Whatsoever the Lord pleaseth that doeth he, in heaven and in earth, in the seas and all deep places." GRANDMA.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

If you love your enemies and do good to those who despitefully use you, you are on the right road to heaven.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hafflefinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

When people get to quarreling about their creeds, the devil stops being anxious about their deeds.

LORD TENNYSON'S THREE FAMOUS POEMS,

IN MEMORIAM,

IDYLLS OF THE KING,

THE PRINCESS.

Three Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large clear type on good paper, and substantially bound by a new process.

The "In Memoriam" of Tennyson is one of the grandest and loftiest elegiac poems in all literature. Like the "Lycidas" of Milton, it was written to commemorate the untimely death of a bosom friend. In the case of Tennyson's masterpiece, the friend mourned was Arthur Hallam, son of Henry Hallam, the distinguished historian, who was engaged to Laureate's sister, but who died in Austria in 1833. The elegy was published in 1850. It is a long and passionate outburst of song, written to assuage the poet's grief at the loss of his friend and with the motive of giving utterance in the saddest but most musical lines, to reflections on life, death and immortality.

"The Idylls of the King" have won for themselves an abiding place in the political literature of the age. The work is a series of connected poems reviving the legend of King Arthur, Merlin, and the Knights of the Round Table, in which the poet not only restores the age of chivalry, purified and elevated, but gives noble expression to the aspirations of man, the hopes of religion, and the harmonies of nature. It is distinguished by much imaginative passion, elevated thought, and wonderful poetic art. The work has taken high rank among the classics of our English tongue.

Hardly has a lovelier story than this of Tennyson's "The Princess" ever been written. Though cast in semi-heroic verse, it enshrines one of the loveliest lyrics and snatches of exquisite songs in the language. The extreme advocates in our day for the emancipation of women no doubt quarrel with the poet for the conclusions reached in the poem; but the Laureate was conservative in all things, and could hardly be otherwise in treating of that vexed problem of the age—"the woman question." This, in brief, is the purpose and motive of the poem—to illustrate woman's struggles, aspirations, and proper sphere in relation to man and her own intellectual life.

Publisher's price, twenty-five cents each. Given as a premium to every new subscriber. Also to every old subscriber who pays to January '96. This offer not available to those who have had the benefit of other premium offers. Those who desire a cloth-bound edition are referred to our advertisement headed, "15 Poets in Library Cloth—Poet's Popular Edition." Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The new Grand Jury, in this city returned indictments against three councilmen for attempted bribery.

The National Convention of the nonpartisan W. C. T. U. will be held in Washington, Pa., Nov. 13 to 16, inclusive.

A hurricane from the Gulf on Monday stretched across Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida, doing much damage.

Rev. D. G. Whittingill, the new pastor of the Coliseum Place Baptist Church, this city, was formally installed on Oct. 7, and conducted the services at 11 A M.

Councilman Callahan, of this city, who was convicted of bribery, was sentenced by Judge Moise, on Oct. 8, to five years of hard labor in the State Penitentiary and to pay a fine of $50.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has entered upon a crusade against objectionable theatrical billboards and the exposure before the footlights of scantily clothed women.

The primary election between Col. S. M. Robertson and Col. John M. Stone, in the Sixth Louisiana District, passed off quietly on Oct. 6. Robertson was elected with a good majority.

A movement is on foot among the Presbyterian Churches looking to a "federal union" between the Cumberland Presbyterian, the United Presbyterians, the Associated Reformed Synod of the South, the German Reformed Church, the Dutch Reformed and the Presbyterian Church.

The United States government, being satisfied with the concession made by President Zelaya, of Nicaragua, allowing the exiles to settle their affairs in Bluefields, will do nothing more for its citizens in Nicaragua. The reserve ruler is also engaged in making laws which will make Greytown no longer a free port, and bar foreigners from office.

In order to find out the true sentiment of the Louisiana sugar planters on the movement inaugurated by a number of them recently, which has developed into a secession from Democracy, the Picayune sent out a circular letter to each one of the 888 planters listed in Boncherean's sugar report for the past year. Two hundred and thirty-seven replies were received, or little more than 26 per cent. Of those received, 54 per cent. are in favor of the movement unequivocally, 26 per cent. are opposed to it, and 20 per cent. are non-committal.

The November election in New York State will not only be a very eventful one to the Democracy, but it will be an occasion of much importance to the people at large. They will have to vote for State officers, members of the General Assembly and Congressmen, as well as on the question of the acceptance or rejection of the thirty-three amendments to the Constitution adopted by the recent convention, two of them being submitted separately and the rest in a lump. Also in the question whether the cities of New York and Brooklyn and adjacent territory shall be consolidated, and, finally, on the question whether the city shall lend its credit to the building of an underground railroad.

FOREIGN.

The first general meeting of the new Panama Canal Company was held on Oct. 4. Eight hundred persons were present and the proceedings were very noisy. A committee was appointed to examine into the project and to effect an organization.

Since the holding of the English Cabinet council instructions have been cabled to the British minister at Pekin and the British consuls at all the treaty ports to send to the mission stations in the interior imperative instructions for the withdrawal of all the missionaries to the protected coast districts.

The Charleston has arrived at Yokohama, Japan. There are now five United States warships in the East, the Charleston, Baltimore, Monacacy, Concord and Petrel, and this force will be increased to eight vessels by the addition of the Detroit, Machias and Yorktown as soon as they can be made ready.

The negotiations of the powers with the United States with a view to a joint protection of their subjects in China are said to be much advanced by the Anglo-American agreement on the subject and a general entente may shortly be expected. A dispatch further says that Austria has intrusted the protection of her subjects in China to Germany.

The meeting of the British Cabinet on Oct 4, which occasioned so much anxiety in Europe on the day previous, turned out to have been called, not on account of the position of France in Madagascar, but to consider the situation in China. It is reported that the Cabinet decided to greatly re-enforce the British squadron in Chinese waters, and to send British troops to the treaty ports of China for the protection of British interests.

A Wonderful Conquerer.

No disease is more common among the people than scrofula. Handed down from generation to generation, it is found in nearly every family, in some form. It may make its appearance in dreadful running sores, in swellings in the neck or goitre, or in eruptions of varied forms. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may be known as catarrh, or developing in the lungs, it may be, and often is the prime cause of consumption.

In whatever form scrofula may manifest itself, Hood's Sarsaparilla is its inveterate foe and conquerer.

The Japanese are pursuing the campaign towards Monkden cautiously, and are avoiding any dashing enterprises. Their cruisers are closely watching the Chinese fleet in the gulf of Pe Chi Li. A dispatch adds that fugitives from Ping Yang describe the Japanese tactics as most scientific, while their weapons are perfect. On the other hand, the Chinese operations are said to be conducted in an antiquated fashion, and there is considerable disagreement among the Chinese generals.

Union Gospel Mission.

The mission wardrobe is and has been for some time depleted of under clothing, hats and shoes. Now is the time to send along bundles of these articles, which are so greatly needed. The Winter season is approaching. Anyone who has any clothing of any kind to spare should send a postal card to C. A. Vail or Mr. H. We are touching our fellow-beings on all sides. They are affected for good or evil by what we are, by what we say and do, even by what we think and feel. We are each of us as silently saturating the atmosphere about us with the subtle aroma of our character. In the family circle, besides and beyond all the teaching, the daily life of each parent and child mysteriously modifies the life of every person in the household. The same process on a wider scale is going on through the community. No man liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. Others are built up and straightened by our unconscious deeds; and others wrenched out of their places by our unconscious influence.—Congregationalist.

Cheap Criticism

There is a good deal of cheap criticism of the Bible in circulation nowadays. The precious old Book can stand criticism, but the critic should be sure of his ground before he utters his objections. A speaker at a London Bible Society meeting said he was talking with a gentleman who said, apropos to the Bible, it is quite impossible in these days to believe in any book whose authorship is unknown. He was a mathematician, so the speaker asked him if the compiler of the multiplication table was known. "No," he said. "Then," replied the speaker, "of course you don't believe it." "Oh, yes," said the gentleman, "because it works well." "And so does the Bible," was the rejoinder.—Exchange.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

TEMPTATION.

(Matt. xxvi, 41; Luke viii, 13; James i, 2, 12, 13; II. Peter ii, 2, 9; I. Cor. x, 13)

The word "temptation" is derived from the Latin tenare—to stretch. When the huntsman and the soldier made use of the bow the string of that bow was stretched, tried before active service.

1. What of temptations? Who are they?

(1) God does not tempt man when his omniscience is aware of any possibility of falling. He tempted—tried—Abraham. Wanted Abraham to know his own strength.

(2) God permits temptations to present themselves. See Job. God was assured that the patriarch would come out as victor.

(3) Temptations are of the devil. He tempted Eve. He tempts us. Hates God and hates us, because we are God's children. Opportunities and means to tempt man in abundance.

(4) Temptations are not sin. Said Krummacher, the great divine: "We can not prevent birds flying over our heads; but we need not permit them to build nests in our hair."

(5) Temptations come to the best Christians. The greatest temptation is that man deems himself beyond the reach of temptations. The Son of God was tempted. Ships have been wrecked in sight of port.

2. The means of successfully battling against temptations are:

(1) Watchfulness. We are in the enemy's country. Satan seeks our discomfiture. Be on the alert, ready at any time to be attacked.

(2) Prayer. When in the Lord's Prayer we say: "Lead us not into temptation," we mean, 'Grant that we may have strength victoriously to overcome the tempter." Pray. God will make a way of escape. "Get thee behind me, Satan," emanated from the lips of Jesus. Pray.

"Satan trembles when he sees
The humblest sinner on his knees."

WHAT I LIVE FOR.

BY O. L. HANKS.

I live for those who love me,
For those I know are true;
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit, too;
For all human ties that bind me,
For the task my God assigned me,
For the bright hopes left behind me,
And the good that I can do.

I live to learn their story,
Who've suffered for my sake,
To emulate their glory,
And follow in their wake;
Bards, martyrs, patriots, sages,
The noble of all ages,
Whose deeds crown history's pages,
And Time's great volume make.

I live to hail that season
By gifted minds foretold,
When men shall live by reason,
And not alone for gold.
When man to man united,
And every wrong thing righted,
The whole world shall be lighted
As Eden was of old.

I live to hold communion
With all that is divine,
To feel that there is union
'Twixt nature's heart and mine;
To profit by affliction,
Reap truth from fields of fiction,
Grow wiser from conviction—
Fulfilling God's design.

I live for those that love me,
For those that know me true;
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit, too;
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the cause that needs assistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do.

A Methodist Conference in the Mikado's Kingdom.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

After a delightful session of six days the Japan Mission Conference has just adjourned, and the brave band of brethren have bidden each other goodby, and to "different climes repaired." To me the occasion will ever be most memorable; to many it was joyous; to all pleasant and helpful. Every brother was happy, every heart beat high with hope, and each appointment was thought to be the best. A more spiritual, inspiring, uplifting Conference session I have not seen in all our Methodist Israel. It was worth a trip over rolling seas to sit in such company and enjoy such comradeship. There was gladness in the greeting, perfect harmony in every meeting, and not a murmur at the parting.

The sessions were held in the chapel of the Kwansei Gakuin, our college, just outside the city limits of Kobe. We were all entertained in the dormitories and professors' houses, eating at the same table, and worshiping at the same family altar. We had a foreign and Japanese secretary, and the proceedings were recorded in two languages. The business was conducted in English, and translated into Japanese by an interpreter, who sat by my side. He interpreted to the native brethren every motion made and paper read before a vote was taken. When there was discussion on any subject he translated each speech before another speaker could get the floor. This necessitated some deliberation in transacting business, but was not without its strangely interesting and entertaining features. The young brother who acted as Conference interpreter, and the one who served as Japanese secretary, have remarkably accurate and ready memories. It is not necessary to stop after every two or three sentences, but one can speak for a half-hour, and with the help of notes he takes he can reproduce the address or sermon with great accuracy. Bro. Usaki, who interpreted for me on Sunday, had me to finish the sermon of forty-two minutes, and he re-preached it to the Japanese in forty-three minutes. The brethren who understand Japanese say his interpretation was unusually clear and accurate, and with an oratorical effect very rare among his people.

There was a Japanese prayer meeting every morning at eight o'clock, and preaching in English every afternoon at five, unless suspended for Conference sessions. The prayer service of the native brethren I enjoyed, though unable to do more than feel the things they sang and prayed. I was impressed with their reverence and their earnestness in prayer, but not their power of song. Music is not native to Japan. They pray often, and a long time. One morning there were four or five prayers offered before we arose from our knees. I am told that the number sometimes reaches ten or twelve. When the benediction is pronounced the whole congregation sits or kneels in silent prayer for a few moments before leaving the house. What an improvement on our American habit, which interprets the minister's request to "receive the benediction" as a command to "reach for hats and overcoats"! In this and some other things we might learn profitable lessons from the yet few children of our Lord in this heathen land.

The reports of pastors evidenced faithful work, and were not without gracious results. There had been many conversions and 147 accessions, but on account of the migratory habits of the people, moving to distant parts of the Empire, the net gain was small—only 37. All missions have the same trouble. These people travel much and move often. Their local attachments seem not to be strong, and family ties are weaker than in Christian lands. And this disposition to move is encouraged by cheap rates of travel.

There has also been a revival of Buddhist aggression, which in some localities is intensely hostile. Instances were given of their stoning houses, and crowding into howling mobs about the places where Christians were holding their little conventicles. The Buddhist priests have begun to preach in order to silence the questionings of the people who will not be content with a drawling, whining repetition of empty, meaningless words before a faded shrine in a dilapidated temple. But few of them, however, are men of ability or scholarship. One old man, at Arima, after finishing his afternoon devotions, accompanied with gong-beating and striking a little anvil with a hammer, told us that he knew nothing about the other six or seven sects of Buddhism. But a determined effort is being made to galvanize it into life in order to resist the growth of Christianity. Foolish and fruitless hostility! This island kingdom is certain, sooner or later, to become a Christian nation, and be a vantage-point for the conquest of Cathay.

Another obstruction to rapid progress just now is the rather acute spirit of anti-foreignism abroad in the land. Christianity is made to feel its force as being a foreign religion. Though political, and with many doubtless demagogical, it is general and very strong. The purpose is to secure such a revision of treaties as will give them absolute control over their own land, and unrestrained right to legislate without foreign dictation or domination. Under present treaty stipulations they can't try a foreigner in their courts for offenses committed on their soil, and are not allowed to levy duties on imports over five per cent. A people of their intense national vanity, if not patriotic loyalty, must feel humiliated at these rather ignoble terms of commercial intercourse. But withal, our brethren, native and foreign, work in perfect harmony, and are full of hope for the near future.

The encouragements are not a few. First, our native brethren seem to be well-grounded in the faith, and are fearless in evangelistic work. They confine not their labors to chapels and schools, but on the streets and through the villages they tell the story of redeeming love.

Another gratifying fact is the unquestioned orthodoxy and earnest Methodist loyalty of our mission. Some of our young native preachers show accurate and discriminating acquaintance with our theology, and are devoted to our polity. The same can not be said of all the churches. One mission, notably, is greatly embarrassed, if not more or less disintegrated, with a dangerous rationalism, and a rather green growth of higher criticism. From almost universal report its condition is lamentable. We have had no such difficulty, and apprehend no such danger. Our young preachers have a sound religious experience, and must have gifts and grace before they are ever intrusted with teaching or pastoral functions. The Methodist insistence on justification by faith and the witness of the Spirit is the need of Japan. At the love-feast on Sunday morning there were many blessed testimonies, and as they were interpreted to me by Bro. Moseley, who sat near, I appreciated more than ever "the language of Zion."

Bishop W. X. Ninde, of the M. E. Church, visited the Conference, and was our honored and delightful guest for two days. His fraternal words cheered all hearts, and his gentle brotherliness won our affections. With the poise of a jurist, the breadth of a statesman, and the fervent piety of an apostle, he has eminent capacity for successful leadership. Too broad to be a bigot, and too great to be a narrow partisan, he finds Christly fellowship in every company of the Lord's anointed. He kindly assisted me in the ordinations, worshiped with us on the Sabbath, and addressed the Conference with eloquence and Methodistic heartiness. We wanted him to preach, but a temporary indisposition compelled him to decline. Rev. D. S. Spencer, of the M. E. Church in Japan, and Rev. Mr. Morgan, of the Methodist Protestant Mission, were also present as fraternal delegates, and delivered stirring addresses. It is well for these several Methodist bodies in this Empire to dwell together in closest sympathy, and so federate their work as to avoid waste of men and money. After awhile—when, we can not yet prophesy—there will, and ought to be, but one Methodism in Japan. Now there are five bands, but we be brethren.

In response to requests from the other Methodist missions a committee was appointed to consider the advisability of unifying our educational work, or of at least reuniting in the conduct of one strong theological institution. The proposition originated with the Canadian brethren who withdrew from the union once established. The committee will meet in Tokio on the twenty-third instant, and it is my purpose to attend its sittings. It is rather late to effect anything for the next scholastic term, and in no event can an arrangement be made which will limit or lower the admirable work being done in our Kwansei Gakuin.

The Sabbath services, held in the Kobe church, were of peculiar interest to a stranger from over the Pacific. There was Sunday-school at eight o'clock, love feast at nine, and preaching at ten, followed by the ordination of deacons. In the love feast there were many and clear testimonies, but lacking the emotional incidents which so frequently characterize such meetings in America. The Japanese rarely show emotion. Buddhism teaches its crucifixion or suppression. Centuries of that teaching has developed a national habit, and crystallized into a rather stolid appearance. They give attention, but show little feeling. We had an impressive exception in the Conference memorial service in honor of one noble young brother who had fallen on sleep. A comrade who had fought by his side, and who, by disease, expected to have anticipated his entrance through the gates into the city, was completely overcome when he arose to pay a tribute to his best-beloved who had gone before. At night Bro. Wadsworth preached, after which we ate the pascal feast together. That was a solemn, helpful service. I noticed that the women came forward and communed first, after which the brethren were served. There was a significant indication of Christianity crowning womanhood in Japan. It was a complete reversal of the traditional idea and order of the Empire. Women have ever been subordinate in these islands; so much so that a wife never walks by the side of her husband—always just behind him. And among the masses of the people the wife serves while her husband eats. There were about forty communicants besides the ministers.

On Sunday afternoon the brethren at the college divided into bands, and went out through the villages to hold evangelistic meetings. Though not so jubilant and romantic as the report of the seventy on their return, they gave incidents suggestive of the sublime and urgent mission of Christianity among the humbler classes of Japan. It is a singular fact that the middle and higher classes are accessible to the gospel, while not "the submerged tenth," but the benighted and degraded eight-tenths, are almost entirely untouched. The singing attracted crowds, who listened to their exhortations, and then plied them with questions about "the new religion." How pitiably ignorant they are of spiritual things! One old man, interrogated about the future life, said he knew nothing about it. Another said he expected to become a dog, or some other animal, and asked what they thought he would be, judging from his looks. Another worshiped the sun as the source of all things. And like sad ignorance all displayed, living without knowledge of God or hope of heaven, or the faintest apprehension of the comforts of true religion.

The Conference took decided and advanced ground on the subject of self-support. A memorial came up from the Kobe District Conference, which was sent to a strong committee, and a report was adopted with genuine enthusiasm looking to gradual independence of foreign help. The native brethren were prominent in the discussion and eloquent in their advocacy of the measure. This was one of the resolutions: "That no church be organized until its members agree to pay all the incidental expenses and two yen (dollars) per month for the support of the pastor out of their own resources."

Of the six brethren received on trial at this session, two are natives and four are young men who first came out to teach government schools. They have been connected with the mission for several years, and now enter fully upon ministerial work. One—Rev. H. G. Hawkins—transfers to the Mississippi Conference. He has rendered excellent service, greatly endeared himself to the Conference, and is given up with many regrets.

I am greatly impressed with the vast field before us, and the immense opportunities now upon us. So aroused are the missionaries, and so anxious are they for more laborers, that several have offered to surrender a part of their salaries in order to secure re-enforcements. While not willing for the church to allow such sacrifice beyond a certain point, I profoundly respect and applaud the eager spirit which prompts the self-surrender. We have a splendid body of young men, consecrated and vigorous, and ready to brave any danger or endure any hardship. Let us strengthen their hands, and speed their enterprises to glorious conquest.

Ventilation.

A gentleman, while attending church one evening, found that his feet were icy cold, so that he had to raise them off the floor. Calling the attention of the sexton to the fact, the latter said, with some perplexity: "Yes, we have a good many complaints of cold feet from others; but I don't understand the reason why we can't keep the church warm—we surely have fires enough." So saying, he pointed to a register in the aisle behind the gentleman in the adjoining pew. Looking around, the latter could see that there was a hot fire in the furnace beneath, and yet no heat came up. When a handkerchief was laid over the register, it scarcely stirred. The visitor asked the sexton, "Have you any means of ventilation?" "No, sir." "Are there no windows open?" "None whatever." "How, then, can you expect the air to come in here if it can't get out somewhere?" There was no response—the man was nonplussed. "Did you ever try to blow into a bottle?" continued the inquirer. "No, sir." "Do you think, if you did, that you could force any more air into the bottle than was in it before?" He couldn't say; never had thought of it. "Well," continued the gentleman, "you would soon find, if you tried, that it is impossible; and neither can you force air into this church through a register if you don't open a window or some other orifice." "But," the sexton demurred, "opening a window would let in the cold air, wouldn't it?" "You just try it," was the response. "Raise some of the windows of the leeward side of the church, and see what will happen." It was done, and instantly the handkerchief lying on the register rose half way to the ceiling with the force of the ascending current. The sexton stood and stared in astonishment.

If air were visible, like water, so that its impurities could be detected by the eye, there are many people who would "stare in astonishment" at the filth and foulness they are inhaling at every breath. It is hard to worship God acceptably while gasping for breath or dying for pure air.—Selected.

Every attempt to make others happy, every sin left behind, every temptation trampled under foot, every step forward in the cause of what is good, is a step nearer to heaven.

An Earnest Appeal.

To the Church in Louisiana and Mississippi—

Dear Brethren: At this writing we have heard from nine of the Conferences already held, and are seriously concerned to find that there is a marked shrinkage of receipts on the assessments for church extension. In view of the smallness of the demands of this work upon the church, and the consequent comparative ease with which, by united effort, the collections could be brought up at least to the usual figures, we feel constrained to make this last urgent appeal to pastors and people in the bounds of the Conferences yet to be held to make another effort, between now and Conference, to relieve us of inevitable embarrassment by increasing their contributions for church extension to at least the average.

At the last Annual Meeting of the General Board we had urgent applications for $125,000 in donations and loans. In response to these the Board promised only about one-third of the amount asked for, adhering to its rule not to appropriate more than it received during the preceding year. If the present rate of decrease is kept up, we will be unable to meet even these moderate promises. More than that, such failure will be the cause of most poignant sorrow and distress to many of our congregations, and result in the almost inevitable loss of property. In many instances the sheriff is now kept from the door only by the promise of help from this Board; and if we are forced, by the inadequacy of our means, to report an empty treasury before these claims are in due course reached and paid, the consequences will be disastrous.

Though the church extension assessment upon the entire church is $100,000, only one-half of it comes to this Board; and for the entire church, with its 1,300,000 members, to give only $25,000 to this great connectional interest when asked for but $50,000, would be a most serious dereliction of duty. Yet such will be the result if the Conferences yet to be heard from do not make better average returns than those that have already reported.

Will not all our pastors make one more earnest effort to bring up their assessments? The case is extreme and urgent. PEARLEY MEGUIAR, Pres.

DAVID MORTON, Sec.

The Carradine Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: This morning, while reading the article written by "Rex," I was reminded of the children observed in the market. "Who would not dance when piped, nor weep with the mourners? At this place, a little while back, the complaint was, no religion in the church; now 'tis full of fanaticism.

If the phenomena which we observed in Dr. Carradine's meeting are not manifestation of genuine Christianity, the ministry had better put away their saddle-bags and grips and go at something else. It is not my purpose to reply to the argument of the paper. I wish simply to state this in conclusion: No reasoning on earth can persuade a regenerate man that he is not born of God; so in the sanctified life the experience becomes part of consciousness. A witness on the other side, in either case, can only state positively that he has no experience, and he is usually believed.

Kobe Industrial and Training-School for Girls.

MR. EDITOR: Out of a recently received letter from Rev. W. E. Towson, in regard to our "Kobe Industrial and Training-school for Girls," I make the following extracts. It will interest any lover of our Master's kingdom. Bro. Towson, who is presiding elder of the Kobe district and intimately connected with this work, promises to send our ADVOCATE a full account of the good work going on there. Now, let the brethren send in the needed funds promptly to Mrs. M. I. Lambuth at Nashville. Yours in the service,

J. P. DRAKE.

I have been very closely connected with this institution of our work here since Sister Lambuth's return to the United States, and so am thoroughly acquainted with its workings and results. My matured opinion is, after having watched it closely for the past several years, both before and since Sister Lambuth left us, that we have nothing in all our mission which has been more fruitful in results for the Master's cause, in proportion to the amount of attention given to it, and money spent for it, than this school. The promise for the future is very great, and if, under the blessing of God, we can only establish the work upon a sure footing, the harvest, I am sure, will be abundant. I have great faith in the Ladies' Industrial School of Kobe. Dr. and Mrs. Lambuth did a grand work when they established it.

Communications.

In the Living Present.

Religious prosecution and persecution differ from each other as day and night. But with all that, many can not see the difference. It was this obtuseness which led to the papal Inquisition. Defend your doctrine manfully, enthusiastically; but do not ill-treat those who, for reasons satisfactory to themselves, conclude to differ with you.

Civilization without Christ moves circularly. There is no actual progress. At given periods the same conditions obtain. Paris witnessed last week a regular bull-fight. Several steers were gored; three actually killed. Many ladies attended. Well, it was a Frenchman, King Joseph, brother of Napoleon Bonaparte, who re-introduced bull-fights in Spain after they had been interdicted during the reign of Charles IV.

In the city of Washington the Roman Catholic Church wields greater influence than in Rome. In the District of Columbia it owns property to the amount of $13,000,000, mostly acquired from the government. The usual Sundry Civil bill requires watching. Here the Jesuits, aided by their official dupes, know how to insert items for their benefit. The sixteen large Catholic Churches in Washington are excelled in size and architectural beauty only by the government buildings.

Poverty does not increase. Vice increases, but not indigence. Socialism has filled pulpit and rostrum with dangerous sentimentalism. A laboring man receives now for eight hours' daily toil higher wages than ten years ago for a daily labor of twelve hours. Besides, the purchasing value of money has increased, whereas the necessaries of life are much cheaper than formerly. How about extravagance among the laboring masses? On the other hand, capital is not as cumulative as formerly. Investments which twenty years ago paid eight or ten per cent. interest now bring half that amount.

Emperor William of Germany dismissed from his body-guard an officer of high rank on account of having fought a duel. The Emperor holds that the so-called "code of honor" is the remains of heathen barbarism. This calls to mind an incident in the life of Czar Nicolaus, grandfather of the present Czar. An officer applied for permission to fight a duel. An antagonist had boxed his ears. The Czar refused to give the permit. "But," said he, "while refusing, I will settle the matter." He forthwith arranged for a grand feast, inviting many high dignitaries, among them the belligerent boxer and party boxed. During this feast the Czar was exuberant in his attentions to the insulted officer, and, finally, in the presence of all, kissed him. This quelled the ire of both, the antagonist and party insulted. Instantly the former lay at the feet of the Czar and insulted party, asking forgiveness. Blessed are the peacemakers!

A Belgian paper, De Gazet, vigorously declares: "Victor Emmanuel dethroned the Pope. Have we not the same right by force to drive his son from the Quirinal?" This is the faint echo of what animates the bosom of the vast majority of Roman Catholics. Is it not absurdly paradoxical for Papists to claim that the Pope is Christ's representative on earth when, as is well known, Christ had not where to lay his head? But with all that, they would go to war to-morrow, if they deemed themselves strong enough, for the Pope's re-establishment as a secular monarch.

ICH DIEN.

WHEN I DEPART.

When faith and patience, hope and love,
Have made me meet for heaven above,
How blessed the privilege to rise,
Snatched in a moment to the skies,
Unconscious to resign our breath,
Nor taste the bitterness of death!
Such be my lot, Lord, if it please,
To die in silence and at ease;
When thou find'st I am prepared,
Oh, seize me quick to my reward!

But if thy wisdom sees it best
To turn thine ear from this request;
If sickness be the appointed way
To waste this frame of human clay;
If, worn with grief and racked with pain,
This earth must turn to earth again,
Then let thine angels round me stand—
Support me by thy powerful hand;
Let not my faith or patience move,
Nor aught abate my hope or love;
But brighter may my graces shine,
Till they're absorbed in light divine!

A Reply to Bro. Parker.

MR. EDITOR: The Philistines are upon me, two "Hiwassee D. D.'s" at once, so give me a little more fighting-room. It would be well for Bro. Parker to learn that it is but just to quote an opponent's sentences correctly. Nowhere in my first article can Bro. Parker find the words, "During the last twelve years," which he professes to quote. The first donations of the Church Extension Board were given in 1884; the Conference Board was organized in January, 1883; hence in my first article the words are, "During the ten years since the organization of the Church Extension Society," for these Boards could not "overlook a district" before they existed. Though Bro. Parker has misquoted me, he has the manliness to say directly what this resolution said indirectly, namely: 'First, it is a fact that neither Bro. Keener, nor other wide-awake men who have been employed within the bounds of the Opelousas district during the last twelve years, have done very much in church building, or otherwise in extending our Zion." In my first article the figures proved that the Opelousas district had not been overlooked by the Church Extension Boards, because that district, in the past ten years, had received three times as much help as any country district in our Conference, and two hundred dollars more than the New Orleans district ($3,300). My second article shows that this was not donated to one or two churches, but seven distinct churches were helped. One-third of the donations by the General Board given to the Conference was expended in that district.

Now, since Bro. Parker asserts that little or nothing has been done either "in church building or otherwise extending our Zion" in the past decade in the Opelousas district, this article is to prove by figures and facts (not circular affirmations) that more churches have been built there, and the ratio of increase has been as great, as in any other part of the Conference. During the past decade fourteen churches have been built in the Opelousas district, namely: at Grand Cheniere, Edgerly, Sulphur Mine; Jackson Street, Lake Charles; West Lake, Keener Chapel, Lake Arthur, Crowley, two on Plaquemine Brulee circuit, Rayne, Abbeville, New Iberia, Patterson; parsonages at West Lake and Morgan City, beside the one thousand dollars expended by Bro. Daves in extending the Broad Street Church, Lake Charles. During the same period Delhi district has built 11 churches, 1 parsonage; Alexandria district, 10 churches, 1 parsonage; Shreveport district, 11 churches; New Orleans, 8 churches and 3 parsonages; the Homer district, 5 churches and 3 parsonages, where Bro. Parker labored six years of the decade, and was in charge when two of these parsonages were acquired. During this decade the Shreveport district has made a net gain in membership of 1,302, increasing at the rate of 50 per cent.; the Homer district has gained 1,272, increasing at the rate of 35 per cent.; the New Orleans 1,114, an increase of 65 per cent.; the Alexandria 1,113, an increase of 54 per cent.; the Delhi 432, an increase of 20 per cent.; the Opelousas 955, but taking into consideration that Sugar Town circuit, having 290 members, was transferred to the Alexandria district in 1885, it makes the increase about 1,100, increasing at the rate of 69 per cent. This was achieved in the face of a vast majority of French Roman Catholic population. This district, by the census report, is composed of 94,654 whites and 69,328 negroes. Fully two-thirds of the whites are French Roman Catholics, leaving a population of not more than 35,000 accessible to our preachers, and with twenty-five churches in the district, we have one church for every 1,500 white inhabitants, which is a very good average for the State of Louisiana.

When Bro. Parker is writing about the parish of Calcasieu, it would be well for him to state that there are sections after sections of pine stump and tree-tops, the logs having been turned into lumber; miles of such places where you can not ride through horseback, and you can travel fifteen miles without seeing a single house.

And, gentle reader, that Cameron parish our brother is mourning over for churches is nine-tenths marsh, the habitat of the siren mosquito. The other tenth is a long neck of land, not over a mile wide at the widest places, and seventy-five miles long. Twenty-five miles of the eastern end is inhabited by French Roman Catholics, and twenty-five miles of the western end is infested with hard shell Baptists, where lately Methodism seems to be making an entrance, and the middle portion is a Methodist circuit.

These facts are unknown to many readers, and Bro. Parker presumes upon this to make an argument. Nearly half of the assessed valuation of Calcasieu parish is in the towns of Jenning, Welch, Lake Arthur, Lake Charles—so the Auditor's office shows, but this proves nothing. The Opelousas district needs two French missionaries, and till we obtain a foothold among these Creoles, it is puerile to talk about building churches among the population, and to say, "Who built all those churches in St. Martin's, Vermilion and Iberia parishes?" may fool Bro. Parker and make him think he is making an overwhelming argument; but no one has really been fool enough to build in the midst of Creoles, expecting them to join the church, who do not understand English; nor in the marshes of Cameron, expecting people to carry a smoking pot to keep off mosquitoes, and bog through the marshes to church; nor even in the desolate and lonely forests of Calcasieu, where the people are moving from log camp to log camp as the timber is cut off.

Since our Bro. Parker has got over there, he may do all these things; there is no telling. As rapidly as there has been a nucleus obtained for a church, churches have been built in that district, though Bro. Parker, in a self-sufficient, magisterial way, says to the contrary.

Bro. Parker's attack upon the Church Extension Board is like a gnat sitting on an oxen horn, buzzing away. If he buzzes long enough, he may finally get this complaint to the ears of the Board. No doubt, things would happen if he was on the Board. Puzzling problem to me, which has given me the "wonders," is, how this Board has run this long and lived without Bro. Parker's counsel. Dr. Morton should forthwith immediately, if not sooner, have a private telephone wire run down into Bro. Parker's office. There may be thousands in it—of sage advice.

My sincere desire is, that these "sons of thunder," with chained lightning, from Hiwassee (the Lake Charles station preacher and presiding elder of the Opelousas district) may accomplish more in this quadrennium than all that has been done in the decade past. Not, however, by discounting what other men, good and true, have done, but by pushing the battle along all lines and accomplishing that which has been made possible by their predecessors' toils. S. S. KEENER.

Standards:
JESUS AND PAUL, OR WESLEY AND WATSON?

MR. EDITOR: This may seem a queer question, but I ask it seriously, and it suggests a point which must be guarded, and guarded well. Bro. A. C. Burt, in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of Sept. 20, dives right into the mud of human standards of faith, and that, too, in palpable contradiction to Article V. of our confession.

There are two well-known facts, which I will here repeat, viz.:

1. The General Conference of 1784 recognized (only) a fragment of Wesley's writings as standards, but no authority of Methodism has, at any time, proclaimed Mr. Wesley a standard, nor any other human being.

2. When the General Conference of 1784 adopted "the Minutes of the Conference," Wesley's Notes on the New Testament, and the first fifty-two sermons, as "Standards," Art. II. of our CONFESSION contained the doctrine of "Eternal Sonship;" and one of those standard sermons contained the doctrine of "Baptismal Regeneration." The former slipped out of the very first revision of the Discipline, and the latter went out some fifty years later!

The rational conclusion to be reached from these two statements is this: If, with these doctrinal provisions, the work, or edicts, of the General Conference of 1784 was to be a standard, the omission of these doctrines was a violation of the compact, and nullified it all.

I verily believe that Dr. West—"Sin and Salvation" (now in the course of study)—is as much a standard as Watson's Institutes, or the sermons referred to by Bro. Burt. Wesley, Watson, Clark, Fletcher, and a thousand others, may preach a doctrine, and prove it by one another, but "whatsoever is not read in the" Holy Scriptures, "nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an article of faith, or thought requisite or necessary to salvation." (Italics my own.) (Discipline ¶ 5.)

I respectfully suggest to those brethren who seem so anxious to read out of the church and ministry all those who differ from them as to doctrine, that they appeal to Jesus and Paul more, and Wesley and Watson less. Jesus says: "That which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." (John iii, 6.) According to Bro. Burt, Wesley says: "That which is born of the Spirit" is carnal. Paul says: "To be carnally minded is death, . . . to be spiritually minded is life and peace;" and that the "carnal mind is not subject to the law of God."

According to the Residue Theory, Watson says: The regenerate is carnal minded—regeneration does not regenerate only in part. Standard we must have. Will we accept Jesus or Wesley? Paul or Watson?

Personally, I do not believe these writers differ from Jesus and Paul at many points when fairly interpreted in the light of the general teaching of the New Testament. Mr. Wesley committed the blunder (and a serious blunder it was) of interpreting doctrinal passages of Scripture by human experience. Mr. Wesley knew, or might have known, that which we call experience comes through the emotional nature, and is as varied as are the characteristics of that nature; and not, therefore, to be relied upon as an exponent of eternal truth.

I want some brother to write on the "Residue Theory" side of this question, relying on Jesus, Paul, John, and other inspired writers, to the exclusion of Wesley, Watson, Godbey, and other uninspired writers.

This cry of "Standards" came with the revival of a corpse which had lain dead for fifty years, or so; and I have not yet seen an intelligent scriptural argument in favor of it. All that I have seen in its support is built up on the bones of modern ecclesiastical heroes.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I want to say plainly that "The Hymn Book" is not a standard. "Watson's Institutes" is not a standard. The decisions of the Bishops are standards only as to the interpretation of law. McTyeire's History, Tigert's History, Fisher's History, Mosheim's History, and all the rest, may be standards in literature, but not in doctrine. Sixty-six books of the Old and New Testaments are standards to which every Methodist must submit, and beyond this the changeless law of our church recognizes none. Respectfully,

J. A. PARKER.

The Neglected District.

As the writer of the resolution which Bro. Keener has so plausibly criticised, I feel called upon to explain my position on the subject. While I was preparing such an explanation, an article was published from the pen of Bro. J. A. Parker, which defended the resolution more ably than I could have done; so I merely refer to his statements as a vindication of the resolution. Bro. Beard intimated that my name was attached to the resolution simply because I was secretary of the Conference. I am not willing for that impression to be made. I was not, indeed, the first to open discussion on the subject; but I did write the resolution with an intelligent appreciation of the facts, and a desire for investigation of the subject. The resolution was written without a thought of the neglect of previous pastors or presiding elders, but solely with reference to the present needs of the district, which no sane man will deny, and the unfair preponderance of appropriations to work that is really less needy, to which Bro. Parker has referred.

Bro. Keener's misconception of the principle of the work of the Board would lead logically to the withdrawal of missionary appropriations to China and Japan, because of the smallness of their contributions to missions. We do not ask for help on the ground that we have paid more than others of equal ability, but because we need more in this Catholic country, where every dollar applied will count in souls reclaimed from sin.

In sending Dr. Morton a copy of the resolution, I made an explanation of the spirit in which it was "unanimously" passed, and the facts considered by the Conference in its passage.

I am glad that Bro. Keener has called attention to the resolution, and I hope that this discussion will set the church to thinking and the Boards to investigating more closely than heretofore.

Fraternally,

W. WINANS DRAKE.

Sanctification.

In order to have a correct knowledge of sanctification, we must search the Scriptures with an unbiased mind and heart. In other words, we must have no knowledge of our own of sanctification only as we get it from the Bible, for just as sure as we search the Scriptures in order to find support for some pet view of the subject we are sure to find it, even if we have to twist them to do it. Indeed, a person may believe most anything that suits him, and then twist and disconnect the Scriptures, and prove it to be true, even if it is, that there is no God; and, therefore, how exceedingly necessary it is for us to search the Bible for doctrine instead of making it prove what suits us, right or wrong.

Now, let us see what the Bible teaches concerning sanctification. The first thing that we find it teaches concerning sanctification is, that it means "set apart for a sacred purpose," and not a "second blessing." This is evident from the following Scriptures, "And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it." (Gen. ii, 3.) This is the first time the word occurs in the Bible, and who will venture to say that it means a second blessing? Can the seventh day, or Sabbath, receive it? Surely not; but it could be, and was, set apart for a sacred purpose or holy use. 'And thou shalt anoint the tabernacle of the congregation therewith, and the ark of the testimony, and the table and all his vessels, and the candlestick and his vessels, and the altar of incense, and the altar of burnt-offering with all his vessels, and the laver on his foot. And thou shalt sanctify them, that they may be most holy." (Ex. xxx, 26, 27, 28, 29.) In these verses learn that the tabernacle and all it contained were sanctified—that is, set apart for a holy use. "And Moses took of the anointing oil, and of the blood which was upon the altar, and sprinkled it upon Aaron and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon his son's garments with him; and sanctified Aaron, and his garments, and his sons and his son's garments with him." (Lev. viii, 30.) Here it is taught that Aaron and his garments, and his sons and their garments, were sanctified. Could their garments receive a second blessing? Of course not; but Aaron, his sons and their garments were set apart for a sacred use—the service of the Lord. "They builded the sheep gate; they sanctified it." (Neh. iii, 1.) This verse informs us that a sheep gate was sanctified—that is, set apart for a holy purpose; no animals to enter it but those devoted to the services of God. "Sanctify ye a fast." (Joel i, 14.) A holy fast. "Sanctify the congregation." (Joel ii, 16.) This congregation which God commanded Joel to sanctify consisted of people who had turned away from God, as is clear from the thirteenth verse preceding the one we have just noted: "Rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the Lord, your God." These people had turned away from God, and were not devoted to his use, but to an unholy use, and, therefore, God required Joel to sanctify them in a sense similar to that in which Moses did when it was said of him, "Moses went down from the mount unto the people and sanctified the people; and they washed their clothes." (Ex. xix, 14.) "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts." (I. Pet. iii, 15.) That is, set apart the Lord, your God, in your heart from everything that is earthly or worldly. So we see from the above Scriptures that a day (the Sabbath), garments, the tabernacle and all its vessels, etc., a fast, people, and even the Lord is sanctified in the sense of being set apart from that which is unholy or worldly.

Work That Nourishes.

One of the secrets of a life of growing power is to be nourished rather than depleted by one's work. Activity is healthful; strain is harmful. Men do not die of overwork, but of maladjustment to the conditions of their work, for under ripe conditions work develops just as truly as exercise, but under wrong conditions it depletes and destroys. The great workers of the world have accumulated force rather than parted with it, and have gathered richness of material and power of action by the putting forth of their energies, so that their lives have moved toward culmination rather than come to an early fruition followed by a long decline. It is easy to detect the difference between the man who is fed by his work and the man who is drained by it. There is an ease, a force, and a zest about the work that nourishes which is never long characteristic of the work that depletes, for the essential of the work which nourishes is its free and unimpeded expression of the personality of the worker. It is the overflow of his own personal energy and not the strenuous putting forth of toilsome effort. It is significant that the great artists, as a rule, are immensely productive. Michael Angelo, Raphael, Rubens, Shakespeare, Balzac, and men of their class, attest their genius not only by the quality of their work, but by its quantity also. This means that they have secured the right adjustment to their conditions, and that work, instead of being a drain, nourishes and develops the worker. The man who works with delight and ease grows by means of his activity, and the first secret to be learned in order to rid work of worry and wear is to take it in a reposeful spirit, to refuse to be hurried, to exchange the sense of being mastered by one's occupation for the consciousness of mastery. To take work easily and quietly, not because one is indifferent to it, but because one is fully equal to it, is to take the first step toward turning work into play.—The London Independent.

A Priceless Charm.

Cultivate sunny-heartedness of temper, and you will find it a priceless charm for brightening existence and hushing troubled waters into happy peace. Form the habit of giving cheer and encouragement to others, never uttering needlessly a disheartening word. Don't quench hope, or throw cold water on reasonable enthusiasm, or chill ardor, or create an atmosphere of censure and fault-finding, but make folks tingle to the finger-tips with the heartiness and spontaneity of your presence and greeting. Make others happy, and you can not help but be benefited. Don't let the black-pinioned raven's croak drown the skylark's roseate note. Don't talk in a series of grunts and growls. Instead of resembling a gruff and surly thunder-cloud, try to be a flood of captivating sunshine. Learn to reflect nature's bright moods when dewdrops and liquid pearls of bird-song and gorgeous pomps of sky and sea and her thousand and one aspects of pure loveliness sweep the cobwebs out of the brain and make the heart sing. Let no wagging of evil tongues, or barbed malice, or frozen sneer, or stroke of misfortune rob you of the cheerful faith that at the core of every hideous experience lies a heart of blessing and goodness.—Messenger.

Sunshiny Christians.

There is no sunshine for those who persist in keeping their shutters barred. Joy is not gained by the asking for it, but only by the acting for it; we have got to walk with Christ if we want to walk in the sunshine. There is a lamentable lot of moping and grumbling and sour-spirited Christians who disgrace the name they bear. If one of this sorry regiment should ask a shrewd man of the world to embrace Christianity, he might well reply: "No, I thank you; I have troubles enough now without being troubled with such a peevish and doleful religion as yours seems to be." What a letter of recommendation some Christians carry in their cheerful countenances! . . . Here are three things which you, the ailing souls, most need—more faith, more vigor, more joy in the Holy Spirit. Your Divine Physician offers them to you, if you will accept them; but you must let him bestow them in his own way and on his own terms. A happy day would it be in all our churches if the fever patients and the emaciated dyspeptics and the restored paralytics would come trooping out of the hospitals and report themselves for duty.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

If any of my readers have an eloquent preacher, and enjoy and rejoice in his attractive sermons, let them remember that privileges always bring responsibilities. If the minister draws crowds to the church, be sure that you try to get acquainted with as many as you can, and deepen by a word of exhortation or encouragement the impression that he has made. No preacher can build up a church without the active co-operation of its members. He is not a champion, like Goliath of Gath, to go forth alone while the army looks on, ready to shout when he wins a victory. He is the leader, under God, of a division of the sacramental host, and more depends upon his generalship—his ability to direct others—than upon his individual prowess.

George Whitefield was a more eloquent preacher than John Wesley. But Whitefield was a preacher only while Wesley was a leader—an organizer. What is the result? Whitefield has many admirers, but no followers; while there are millions of Wesleyans carrying the Bible and the book of discipline around the world. I thank God for eloquent preachers, but I pray that they themselves may realize the importance of securing the earnest co-operation of all.—Rustious.

Appearances.

Respectable selfishness destroys the spiritual nature more quickly and thoroughly than the indulgence of appetite or passion. In other words, the Pharisees are less likely to repent than the harlots. It is an old truth having the sanction of high authority and amply confirmed by experience. But it is doubtful if we more than half believe it after all. We are creatures of sight and sense, easily imposed upon by appearances. That which is gross and revolting disgusts us, and makes a far deeper impression upon us than sleek villainy and well-dressed rascality. Satan should always be conceived of as arrayed in whatever style of fashion is most popular and supplied with plenty of money. The dangers of the rich are much more terrible than those of the poor, and yet it is the latter that receive all our attention and compassion. When will we get the outlook upon life that Jesus had, and penetrate below the surface of things?—Exchange.

Prayer in Small Things.

Many Christians deprive themselves of immeasurable benefits by not praying for God's guidance and help in reference to the small affairs of daily life. It is a great mistake to suppose that God does not deign to hear such praying. The teachings of Christ show that God takes special notice of the minutest things in the temporal as well as spiritual spheres. He notices even the very hairs of our heads. And it is the smallest things of life with which we have the most to do. The little daily duties, the petty cares, the small opportunities, demand wisdom, require prudent dealing, and our own wisdom is not sufficient for them. We ought to habitually and specifically pray God to help us rightly to discharge the little duties, and patiently bear the little trials, and wisely use the little opportunities which come to us.—Herald.

Power of Influence.

That hasty word, that word of pride and scorn, flung from my lips in casual company, produces a momentary depression; and that is all. No, it is not all. It deepened that man's disgust at godliness; and it sharpened the edge of that man's sarcasm; and it shamed that half-converted one out of his penitent misgivings; and it produced an influence, slight but eternal, on the destiny of an immortal life. Oh, it is a terrible power that I have—this power of influence; and it clings to me, I can not shake it off. It is born with me; it has grown with my growth, and strengthened with my strength. It speaks, it walks, it moves; it is powerful in every look of my eye, in every word of my lips, in every act of my life. I can not live to myself.—W. M. Punshon.

Our churches are full of men and women who have been on a spiritual furlough for a long season. If interrogated as to their religious indifference and inactivity, they commence at once to tell a story of neglect, or slight, or something worse, that they have received at the hands of some members of the church; or possibly the minister has not recognized their peculiar gifts and abilities. Usually such statements have no foundation in fact. At the best they furnish no good and sufficient reason why any person should neglect doing work for the Master in his kingdom. "What is that to thee? Follow thou me," is the word of divine obligation which the Lord Jesus would utter to the many persons who seek to justify themselves with such lame excuses.—Zion's Herald.

Be honest with yourself, whatever the temptation; say nothing to others that you do not think, and play no tricks with your own mind. Of all the evil spirits abroad at this hour in this world, insincerity is the most dangerous.—J. A. Froude.

One very hopeful feature of temperance reform is in the fact that thirty-nine out of our forty-five States have now made scientific temperance education mandatory in the public schools.

Dr. Charles Parkhurst wisely says: "I have got past calling my church my field. It is not my field, it is my force."

Prayer is not conquering God's reluctance, but taking hold of God's willingness.—Phillips Brooks.

Do not act as though joy is dead, and hope buried in the sea. There is plenty of both left yet.

Do not grumble about the hard places; pull patiently on and you will get over them.

"The smaller the sin appears, the more foolish to rebel against God in such a little thing."

It will not make you any cleaner to throw mud at another man.

Missionary Bulletin.

We are indebted to Rev. H. C. Tucker, secretary of the recent Annual Session of the Brazil Mission Conference, for a prompt and full report of the proceedings. Rev. J. M. Lander and family, who have been in the United States for much-needed rest and change, have reached Brazil in safety, arriving during the Conference session, and were accorded a hearty welcome.

Bro. Tucker says there has never been witnessed in Brazil such an outpouring of the Holy Spirit as was received on the occasion of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the love-feast and the morning prayer meetings. It is not necessary to say that the business was transacted in the spirit of love.

The net increase during the year was 164, making the entire membership 1,098. In the various pastoral charges there are 266 probations or candidates for church membership; Sunday-school scholars, 692, and in the six day and boarding-schools there are 396 pupils.

Two interests demand special consideration and help from the mother church: the education and development of a native ministry and the preparation of a Methodist religious literature.

This has been a year of much distraction because of the unfortunate political occurrences, but in the midst of it all God has kept the missionaries and blessed their work.

Granbery College, at Juiz de Fora, deserves especial mention as one of the most important agencies of our mission work in Brazil. During the past year it has been under the directorship of Rev. J. W. Tarboux. The size and condition of the school testify to the faithfulness of his work. The attendance has increased from 56 to 72, and of the 53 boarders 17 are members of the church and 13 are candidates for membership. All the boarders attend Sunday-school and church. The duties and obligations toward God have been pressed upon the pupils faithfully, and the religious tone of the school seems to be higher than at the beginning of the year. Bros. Lander and Tarboux will have charge of the school next year, and they bespeak our prayers that the indifference, the skepticism, the open wickedness amidst which they live may only quicken their zeal and kindle their desire "to snatch some brands from the burning."

Dry-Rot in the Pulpit.

Many a minister may date his decline in pulpit power and acceptability to a neglect of his study. Of all professional men he can least afford to degenerate in intellectual vigor. He must keep up the stimulation which comes from contact with the best thinking of the past and present. He must study, and thoroughly, the problems with which he has to deal. His sermon must not be dashed off at hurried intervals, but be the result of careful, deliberate preparation. He must be constantly the man who reads, observes, reflects, writes, absorbs and digests. He who is on fire with a well-prepared discourse will sustain himself as a preacher and impress for good all who listen to him.—The Presbyterian.

The Bright Side.

Think on the best things. The man who loves to dwell in contemplation of the faults and shortcomings of others narrows his spiritual life to the limits of the things he thinks about. Look for the meritorious and the commendable qualities of your fellows. It is not only charity, but it is enlightened self-interest to do so. Your own spirit catches something of the qualities in which your attention is employed. If you see only the mean things in the characters of your friends, it is time to be alarmed about yourself. You may rest assured that there is a growing capacity for such meanness in your own heart.—Methodist Recorder.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, P. E., Arcadia, La., Oct. 3: "Revival power is still in our midst. Since my last Miller, at Ruston, and Harper, at Homer, have had glorious meetings, and it is not infrequent that souls are converted in our prayer meetings, especially those held by the young people. We will report three new churches built this year on the district."

Rev. J. F. Wynn, Pineville, La., Oct. 5: "Have closed a very successful meeting at New Bethel. Twenty-three received into the church, 25 converted, and 5 claimed the experience of entire sanctification. Bro. Arnold did the preaching. Bro. R. M. Walker assisted me in four protracted meetings. At all of these souls were converted, several sanctified, and members received into the church."

Rev. H. S. Johns, Plaquemine, La., Oct. 8: "We are progressing by littles in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Have had two protracted meetings, but with little results. Total accessions this year, 10 or 12. Collections, I fear, will be exceedingly short, as the people will get very little for sugar. Had a fine congregation yesterday in Plaquemine. Our Sunday-schools are good; better than ever before."

Rev. T. G. Freeman, Weir, Miss., Oct. 4: "I have held my round of protracted meetings. The following brethren gave efficient help: J. H. Mitchell (P. E.), R. P. Goar, J. W. Anderson, W. A. Dollar and Winn Hull. Many thanks to the brethren, and all praise to the Lord. We have had 50 accessions to the church; the church greatly revived. I think the collections ordered by the Conference will all be paid in full, though the people cry 'hard times.'"

Rev. H. P. Crowe, Cleveland, Miss., Sept. 27: "We have just closed another fine meeting held at Shelby, Miss. Had good revival in the church. Nine accessions to our church and 1 saloonist converted, gave up the business, and joined the church and erected a family altar. We were well assisted by Bro. Whitehurst, who did us good work, and it was highly appreciated by the people. The good work still goes on in this country. The writer is out in the country holding a meeting this week, where they have no preaching nor Sunday-school. The Lord is blessing us."

Rev. J. M. Beard, P. E., Lafayette, La., Oct. 3: "We are still enjoying times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord on the Opelousas district. Bro. Denson has just closed a fine meeting at Bellevue—some of the results being the conversion and accession to the church of several of the leading citizens of that neighborhood and the sanctification of Rev. W. W. Drake, pastor of the church at Crowley, who assisted him in the meeting; and Bro. Randle and sons are now holding a successful meeting at Rayne, assisted by Bro. Drake. There have been a number of conversions to date."

Rev. R. S. Isbell, Wesley circuit, Louisiana Conference, Oct. 3: "The Lord has wonderfully blessed me and my labors on this circuit. Conversions and accessions from the first round, and have continued during the year at nearly every service. Congregations large, sometimes one thousand present, and give the utmost attention. Have held three protracted meetings, assisted at one by Bro. Rushing, L. D., and at all by Bro. Henry Murphy, L. D., to whom I am profoundly grateful. All these meetings resulted in much good. Numerous conversions in the church and at the family altar. Accessions up to date, 41; children baptized, 37; adults, 7. Stewards say pastor's salary will be paid. Conference collections will be paid largely in excess of former collections. All praise to God for his goodness."

Rev. Geo. W. Huff, P. C., Vanoleave circuit, Mississippi Conference, Sept 28: "Our protracted meetings for this work have come and gone. These meetings resulted in great good. Thirty persons joined the church, 50 were converted and 27 babies baptized. Many precious souls were blessed during these meetings. Vanoleave circuit is on the up-grade; many family altars erected; a nice new church just built and completed at Vanoleave, and its members have paid preacher in charge and presiding elder their full assessment. Bro. S. G. Ramsey, our faithful and efficient steward, is to blame for this. May God bless him and his family! We have one ladies' aid society on this circuit, also a ladies' missionary society. I believe our Conference claims will all be paid, despite the hard times. We have many good people on this work, and our local preachers are as good and nice men as I have ever met. They preach well; they are strong men of God, and are ever ready to assist their pastor in his work. God bless them! I love them with a tender affection. Our camp meeting is to begin Oct. 26. Revs. G. D. Anders and N. J. Roberts are to be with us. We are praying for a glorious old-fashioned, soul-saving, sin-destroying hallelujah camp meeting. I ask the prayers of God's people in behalf of our meeting."

Rev. J. D. Harper, Homer, La., Oct. 2: "We have just closed a meeting of great spiritual power in Homer, La. It was conducted by a Cumberland Presbyterian, Rev. M. M. Norphle, of Texas, and we had with us at times Rev. Mr. Boles, of the Presbyterian Church. Revs. Shoppard, Parvin, Blocker, Collier, May, Jordon and Langston, of the Methodist Church, and Rev. Mireland, of the Baptist Church, was with us from the first to the close. All the churches here were much quickened and revived, and all share in the additions to membership, of which there were sixty. The number of conversions could not be ascertained, but it certainly is more than one hundred. Old feuds were healed, Christians of all denominations worked together as brethren, brotherly love and charity prevailed, and by these united efforts a glorious victory was won for our God. In a ministry of more than twenty years I have never known nearer perfect unity among Christians and greater zeal and activity in seeking to save souls, and I have never seen a meeting of greater spiritual power. No church here would hold the multitudes that came; so we moved into the court-house, and for a season converted the hall of justice into a place of mercy, where spiritual criminals by the score found peace with God. O! it was a glorious time. Our God hath gotten to himself a mighty victory over sin, and for the salvation of souls. Unto him be all the glory!"

$100 for a Bottle.

Mrs. S. B. Winship, 112 Washington St., Providence, R. I., after using one bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, wrote to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, saying she would not take One Hundred Dollars for the benefit received. If you have any form of Rheumatism, and wish to get rid of it, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., and they will send to your express address two bottles of their remedy—enough for a month's treatment. Agents wanted.

Do not keep the boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them. The things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. Appreciation when the heart is stilled has no inspiration for the spirit. Justice comes too late when it is only pronounced in the funeral eulogium. Flowers piled on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary days.—Mission Bulletin.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

HAWTHORNE'S BEST WORKS.

Four Handsome Volumes in Enamel Paper Covers, printed from large type on good paper and substantially bound by a new process.

Mosses from an Old Manse,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

Another delightful companion for idle hours is this collection of magazine papers, which Hawthorne entitled "Mosses from an Old Manse." Like all his works, it is distinguished for its simplicity and truth.

Twice-Told Tales,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

Hawthorne, the most distinctly American and by far the most popular of our writers, has given the world an undying book in "Twice-Told Tales." They have all the felicity of expression, as well as the subtlety of thought and insight, which are the special charm of the author of "The Scarlet Letter."

The House of the Seven Gables,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

This masterpiece of Hawthorne's is full of the imaginative charm of romance. In felicity of touch, its author is unapproached by any writer since his own day. The work is, perhaps, the purest piece of poetic prose in all the range of American literature.

The Scarlet Letter,

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE

A romance of intense interest, exhibiting extraordinary power of mental analysis and graphic description. For an artistic exposition of Puritanism, as modified by New England colonial life, we have nothing like it in our literature.

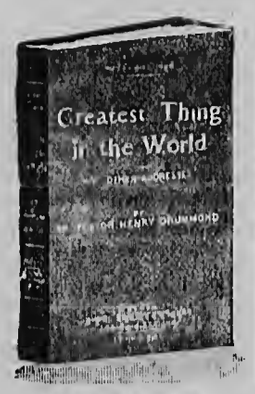
DRUMMOND'S ADDRESSES.



ENAMEL PAPER COVERS.

The Greatest Thing in the World and Other Addresses.

By PROFESSOR HENRY DRUMMOND.

We know of no addresses more suited to the religious spirit of the time than those of the thoughtful author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." They contain no toleration of blind and rash unbelief; on the contrary, the writer is one of the most helpful and suggestive of the modern school of Christian apologists. He takes his stand on a very broad basis and expounds, earnestly yet logically, the great truths of religion.

Shame on Them!

The papers report that a huge political meeting in the interest of the Democratic party was held at Donaldsonville, La., on Sunday, Oct. 14. Among the speakers were Hon. Murphy J. Foster, the governor of the State; Hon. N. C. Blanchard, United State Senator, and Hon. Andrew Price, a member of Congress and a candidate for re-election. We deem it our duty as a journalist to enter our protest against such desecration of the holy Sabbath. Are there not six days in a week in which political meetings can be held? Have our political leaders no regard whatever for morals and religion? Are our youth to be taught by the example of those whom we elevate to positions of power that God's Word is a myth, and his holy day an antiquated superstition on a par with the sacred days of Pagan antiquity? Some of these men, if we are not misinformed, claim to be Methodists. Methodists, indeed! They may "wear the livery of heaven;" but they are nevertheless "serving the devil." May the Lord have mercy upon all such Methodists!

Gambling in Futures.

We desire again to counsel the farmers and all good citizens to organize and go to work to secure the passage of an anti-option law by the next Congress. The thing can be done by proper effort, but it can not be done without effort. The manipulators of the great gambling machine have millions of capital at their command; they are united, and they will leave no stone unturned to defeat the measure. Hence it will require unceasing vigilance and untiring effort on the part of the oppressed farmers to win in the fight. Our counsel to the honest yeomanry of the country is: Demand of every man in the race for Congress that he give his views on this question; and vote for no man of any party who will not make a positive pledge to support an anti-option law. The honest farmers of the country have been downtrodden and oppressed by these infamous sharks long enough. They have it in their power to shake off the yoke of the oppressor if they will. It all depends upon themselves. If they pursue the policy of the past—vote for the nominee of their party, asking no question as to his whereabouts on this question—then they will still toil under the yoke of the oppressor, and they will deserve no better fate.

Glove Contests.

We do not belong to the class who believe that legislation is the panacea for all the ills of society. The source of evil is the human heart; therefore, what is needed first and foremost is the regeneration of the heart by grace divine. But, while this is true, it is also true that legislation can accomplish much in the way of a reformation of public morals. Man, amid the environments of the present life, is governed largely by his fears. Abolish that feature of jurisprudence which makes the law "a terror to evil doers," and anarchy in its most horrid form would soon prevail. This being the case, it follows that religious journalism is not transcending its legitimate sphere when it invokes the strong arm of the law in suppression of those forms of evil which are a menace to the best interests of society. One evil which needs to have the whole machinery of government brought to bear against it in this region is the prize fight, alias "the glove contest."

The State of Louisiana has a law upon her statute books prohibiting prize fights, but the law allows glove contests. All that is needed, therefore, in order to transform the most brutal prize fight into an innocent and praiseworthy athletic sport is for the pugilists to wear gloves during the contest. There may be a prize of ever so many thousand dollars; still it is not a prize fight—only "a glove contest." Blood may flow freely; limbs may be broken; the contestants may be bruised and mangled until life is almost extinct—still this is all right in the eyes of the law—it is only "a glove contest." Under the operation of this law, New Orleans is "going to the bad" with railroad speed—we mean that she is going to the worse; she has reached "the bad" already. These "glove contests" draw ruffians as carrion draws vultures. Hither they come from the cities everywhere to witness the sport, and to participate in the betting that is a necessary concomitant thereof. New Orleans has hoodlums enough of her own without importing others from the great cities of the North.

But, bad as it is, this feature of "the glove contest" is insignificant in comparison with another feature—the effect upon the rising generation. Boys are largely influenced by what they see, what they hear and what they read about. Now, when one of these "glove contests" is to take place, it is talked about for weeks beforehand. Column after column in the newspapers is filled with attractively written accounts of the preparations. When the time comes many thousands pay handsomely for the precious privilege of witnessing the contest, while many thousands more gather around the bulletin boards to keep up with the proceedings. Then newspaperdom exhausts itself in an effort to write up the affair in the most attractive garb that nineteenth century rhetoric can furnish. The fight is talked about ten times more than a presidential election would be. What effect has all this upon the boys? Who will hesitate for an answer? All over the city boys may now be seen playing the pugilist. Only last week a boy of fourteen was killed by another boy in "a glove contest." Not a new book, but a pair of boxing gloves is what a boy wants. Not to become a cultured Christian gentleman, but to excel in a brutal pugilistic contest is likely to become the ambition of many. Nor does the evil stop with the boys. Girls raised in homes where such exhibitions of brutality are discussed and approved of can not become in mature life models of womanly gentleness. We speak of Spain and Mexico as barbarous nations because they tolerate the bull-fight; but the bull-fight is a very decent, civilized affair in comparison with a Louisiana man-fight.

We call upon the people of Louisiana to rise in the might of an enfranchised manhood and put an end to this brutalizing agency. Let not the people living in rural regions remote from the city imagine that it is no fight of theirs. We are all in the same boat. Whatever affects the morals of this great metropolis affects to a certain effect the entire State. It is impossible for these exhibitions of brutality to go on in this city for a generation without lowering the moral tone of the entire State. Let the people everywhere demand of their legislators that they put an end to this infamy. The candidate who refuses to make a pledge of this sort is the right man to be left at home, no matter what party he belongs to. In behalf of good morals, in behalf of civilization, in behalf of decency, in behalf of the rising generation, in behalf of the honor of the great State of Louisiana, whose fair fame is smirched in the eyes of the civilized world by this relic of barbarism tolerated in our midst, we plead for the extirpation of this abomination. We especially invoke the aid of our brethren of the journalistic fraternity. The press is almost omnipotent. If the press, both secular and religious, throughout the State will put forth a vigorous, united effort in this direction "the glove contest" will soon be numbered among the things that were.

At Indianola.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. O. L. Savage, we lectured last Thursday night at Indianola, Miss. En route over the I. C. railroad, we were pleased to meet Rev. J. W. Chambers. He is in good health and spirits, and reports Whitworth College as having a fine outlook. We also had the pleasure of traveling for an hour with Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, who was en route to Crystal Springs to dedicate a church just built under the pastorate of Rev. W. W. Morse at "Old Crystal Springs." He expects to bring up a good report from Brookhaven district at the Annual Conference. We stopped off at Crystal Springs for an hour, spending the time very pleasantly with the bachelor who occupies the parsonage. We spent the night at Winona, and reached Indianola at ten o'clock next morning. We were delightfully entertained during our brief stay by the occupants of the parsonage, Bro. and Sister Savage. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Bro. R. B. Faison and his very interesting family. The lecture was well attended by an audience that gave close attention from start to finish, although the lecture somewhat transcended the conventional limits as to time.

Indianola is in the Yazoo Delta—one of the finest agricultural regions in the world. The crops in this region are magnificent. It is said that the farmers around Indianola will gather an average of a bale of cotton to the acre. Methodism is at the front in Indianola and in the region roundabout. We have a neat parsonage and a substantial, commodious house of worship. Bro. Savage is in high favor with his flock, and is developing the church along all lines. There has been a very remarkable increase in finances, in numerical strength and in spirituality during his pastorate. Indianola is a quite cultivated community, and gives promise under judicious management of becoming a stronghold of Methodism.

On our return we spent a few hours in Winona. Very naturally we gravitated to the Methodist parsonage, where we met a cordial reception from Bro. and Sister Ritchie, with whom we had a delightful confab. Bro. Ritchie is in the midst of a prosperous pastorate. His people are delighted with him both in the pulpit and out of it. His preaching they regard as of a high order. We were pleased also to meet Bro. J. T. Howell, of Winona circuit, and the hustling presiding elder of the Winona district, Rev. S. M. Thames.

A Dream.

We had a dream the other day, and as we suppose it may be of interest to some of our readers, we give it a place in the ADVOCATE.

In our dream we found ourselves in the midst of a Conference session. Everything went on in the usual way, with one exception. The presiding Bishop propounded to each preacher, as his name was called in examination of character, certain questions not laid down in the Discipline. One question in particular challenged our attention, as did the answers to it. That question was as follows: "How many subscriptions have you secured for your Conference organ during the year?" Some brethren replied to this very promptly, giving the exact number. Others were very indefinite, not knowing the exact number. Now and then a brother would reply about after this fashion: "Well—ah, Bishop—ah—I—ah—didn't get any subscribers to the Advocate this year." "Did you try?" was the response of Episcopos. "Well—ah,—I—ah must confess that I didn't try very hard. The times were very hard this year on my circuit, Bishop, and I did not feel like pressing this matter on my people." With the air of a marksman shooting at a target, Episcopos further catechizes thus: "How many subscribers did you get for the Kentucky Methodist?" The answer came so slowly that it appeared for a time as if it would not come at all. When it did come, it came after this fashion: "Ah—well—ah—I—ah—don't know exactly." The colloquy still went on thus: "You got some subscribers for that paper, did you?" "Ah—yes, sir; I got some." "Well, can you tell about how many?" "Ah—well—ah, no, sir; I—ah—haven't kept account." "Do you suppose you got a dozen?" "Ah—well—ah, yes, sir; I s'pose I did." "Do you suppose you got as many as twenty?" "Ah—ah,—yes, sir; I s'pose so." "Do you think you got as many as fifty?" "Ah—ah, probably I did." "If you had used the same effort in behalf of your own Conference organ that you did in behalf of the other paper, don't you think you could have secured some subscribers for it?" "Ah—I don't know, sir." "Don't you feel under any obligations to work for the paper which has been adopted by your own Conference?" "Ah—well—ah—I—ah—always thought a man had a right to do as he pleases about things of that sort." The Bishop then turned himself loose in a strong deliverance on church loyalty, in the midst of which we awoke, and, behold! it was all a dream.

A New Book.

A HAND BOOK OF THE BIBLE. A Compendium of Facts and Curiosities. By the Rev. William Turner. 234 pages, cloth binding. Price, $1, postpaid. Thomas Whittaker, publisher, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.

The Bible to be read intelligently needs the aid of some other book or books which shall explain things concerning it which ought to be known by the reader. This admirable hand book imparts the desired information. It explains the design of the Bible, its authenticity, its antiquity, its divisions, its chronology, its geography, its genealogies, the formation of the Old Testament, the Hebrew months and measures, obsolete terms, and Jewish history from B. C. 397 to A. D. 79.

It gives the titles of the alleged missing books of the Old Testament and the New Testament, and some remarks about them; the special prayers of both Testaments; lists of miracles and parables; an index of the first line of each Psalm; the names of Gentile countries and nations; about two hundred and fifty names and titles of Christ, with references to chapters and verses containing them; his discourses arranged in the order of the time of their delivery; the authors of the books of the Bible, where, when, and for whom each book was written; biographies of the New Testament writers; symbols of the evangelists and apostles; how and where the apostles died, and the floral emblems of the Christian Church. It tells about the Jewish doctrines and opinions, ecclesiastical officers and sects, revisions of the Bible, suppressed Bibles, misquotations from Scripture, Bibles with singular names and many other things, all of which are important, and some of which are quite curious. Students and readers of the Sacred Word will not easily look elsewhere to find so many statements and facts so cursively given in a volume so compact and cheap. An extensive index and good illustrations make the book additionally valuable.

Put on the Brakes.

Several of our exchanges have been criticizing the Epworth Era for some of its editorial utterances anent our Bishops. Though it goes less into details than others, we present below what the Holston Methodist has to say on the subject as indicative of the nature of the controversy, and also as expressive of our own views on the subject:
